Vintage Cowboys Prepping for SouthSounds Music Festival

CULLMAN – With April comes the arrival of Spring and what many love most, music festivals!

As most already know, Cullman is playing host to a large country music concert on April 27th.

But before that date arrives a local group by the name of "Vintage Cowboys" will be taking to the stage in Mobile for the South-Sounds Musical Festival.

This three-day festival will cover five venues that host more than 30 regional artists which span all genres of music in the Southeast.

They invited Cullman's own Vintage Cowboys down to spread their melodic tones.

However, the Vintage Cowboys are no stranger to performing in Mobile.

"We've played at the Blind Mule on several occasions," Wesley Duren said before performing at The Local Standard. "We like going to Mobile."

The band formed in October 2011 as a result from a side project. Guitarist and lead singer Zach White said the group has not been around very long, but the chemistry is evident when you listen to their music.

"We (myself and Wesley) hooked up to record a few songs, and as we recorded it became clear that we needed to form a band," White said. "Of course we didn't have to look far for a lead guitarist. Dustin is Wes's brother so that was good thing. Then naturally Jon Tidwell was the right fit for the bassist."

Emily Hayes, Event Promoter for South-Sounds Music Festival said that the idea of the festival is to showcase regional talent.

She said that the southeast has way too much to offer for it not be spread out to as many people as possible.

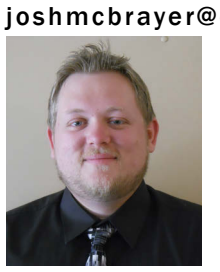

"We wanted to do something that wasn't being done; showcasing the best of the South's bands," Hayes said. "The festival is a combination of two previous festivals – the Like most residents of Cullman County, I too was born and raised here. I have always loved the peace and quiet that living in this small town provides.

Also like most of you, I know that Colonel John Gottfried Cullmann (1823-1895) of Germany founded this town. Over time, our little town of Cullman has steeped in this German tradition and heritage. In trib-

Coastline Chronicles and Loda Live."

The two previous festivals proved to Hayes and other festival organizers that there was a real need for a truly Southern event.

She said bringing Vintage Cowboys down was a natural selection and didn't take much thought.

"Kris Skoda was the creative force behind the Coastline and Doc and myself were the ones behind Loda. All three of us are so passionate about brining as much attention to our regional bands as we can," she said.

"So it was kind of a no brainer for me to add Vintage Cowboys to the lineup. Everytime we've had them in Mobile folks responded so well. It only made sense to have them be a part of the festival."

Vintage Cowboys have a unique sound that is difficult to describe, yet very easy to listen to, even drift away with.

Hayes said this quality, along with the bands' sincerity about their craft makes for a perfect blend for the SouthSounds Music Festival.

"They (Vintage Cowboys) represent that new southern rock sound…'this ain't yo daddy's Skynard Southern Rock'…this is the real time great southern rock," she said.

"If you can make it out, please do so and help support these truly southeastern artists and let them know you care! Come for Vintage Cowboys and be turned on to so many other great bands from around the region."

The SouthSounds Music Festival will take place on April 13, 14, and 15. For more information on the festival, check out their website at southsoundsfest.com.

No(ah)-It-All: Pranked Out

By: Noah Chandler
noahchandler@cullmansense.com

You're getting ready for bed, but before that is possible you have to take on one of the last chores of the evening. The laundry!

Tired, you swap out the loads of freshly warmed sheets with the next day's clothes – because who needs an iron if you have a dryer – but as you press the start button the clunking machine dies.

Too tired to make it down to the dirt cellar in the pouring down rain, the duty naturally falls to your son and husband.

This is where the story goes south, so enjoy this delightful episode that my own mother had played out more than a decade back. What can I say? Pranks are the best!

So the stage is set; pouring down rain, fuse box, dirt cellar, a tired mother, a son that loves pranks more than life itself, and a husband that is always down for a mean prank. See it was a disaster from the start.

We head outside, greeted by a drenching wind, and make our way to the cellar. Once there, we made our way over to the fuse box.

But on our way we could overhear my mom talking on the phone regarding the present situation.

This is where the evil fuse box prank was hatched.

My dad looked at me with bright wide eyes and said, "We're getting her. I'm going to grab the main breaker, and then I'll scream out. You run outside and scream out 'MOM'!"

We shared in a quick pre-prank happy dance then got stationed for the hilarity that was about to ensue. On a silent count he pulled the breaker, moving it back and forth to give an effect of surging, and then yelped. As instructed, I ran outside, which just so happened to be less than 10 feet from her window, I screamed with everything, "MOM! MOM!"

It was a scream of joy, yet she interrupted it as a scream of horror. Okay, I know you may think, "What a couple jerks" and you would be perfectly justified with that response. Just follow the rest of the story.

We knew she heard us when we saw the dirt being dislodged from the floorboards as she hastily maneuvered through the house. This brought on instant laughter, and to be honest still does whenever the thought races across the ole brain.

As we emerge from the cellar, my mom has made her way to the corner of the house.

Soaking wet, covered in mud and out of breath she frantically tried to piece together the situation. Once my dad poked his head out the mood went from panic to pure rage.

Of course we thought it was one of the best pranks ever pulled, although she and many others disagree.

The key to a great prank is what some call the "wow" factor. We just flipped it to the "mom" factor and it proved to be a harsh, yet hilarious one.

You may be wondering, "Why did this mean spirited jerk tell me this story?" Well, first off my mom actually gave me the idea while I was flip-flopping ideas for this column, so thanks for that one. Just have to say I am impressed with your acceptance of this wonderful prank.

If you enjoy pranking and would like to share your experiences, feel free to email those gems to noahchandler@cullmansense.com, and of course as usual hate mail is also welcome.

I hope you all had a great April Fool's Day. And remember to always thank those whom you prank for being such a humorous part of your life. Thanks Mom! I love you!

AREA ATHLETE SPOTLIGHT

West Point High School: Wesley Waters

By: Josh McBrayer
joshmcbrayer@cullmansense.com

qrnews/jmcbrayer

The Area Athlete Spotlight keeps its gaze affixed on the campus of West Point this week, turning its attention to ace pitcher Wesley Waters.

Waters anchors the Warrior staff with a quick fastball and a wicked breaking ball. He also commands respect at the plate as he can hit the ball out of the park on any given pitch.

Waters although in the middle of an area race, took time out of his schedule to answer these questions.

Josh McBrayer: Tell our readers about yourself.

Wesley Waters: I am a 16 year old and a junior at West Point High School. My parents are Terry and Tammy Waters and I have lived in Cullman County all of my life. I have played the sports of baseball, basketball, and football.

I am very active in my youth group at Bethlehem Baptist Church. My hobbies are working out, fishing, and hanging out with my friends.

JM: Tell our readers how long you have been playing baseball and a little about what got you into the sport.

WW: I have been playing since I was five years old when I started T-ball. I started playing travel ball at age 8. I played on the junior varsity team in the 7th and 8th grade and have been a starter on the varsity team at third base since 9th grade year. My 9th grade year is also when I started getting some experience pitching on varsity. During my 10th grade year I was voted Most Outstanding Player of the Cullman County Baseball Tournament (by Cullman Sports Net).

I was very happy to be a part of the first West Point team to win the County Baseball Championship in 25 years. I have always loved baseball and I always try to be the best I can in everything I do.

JM: Tell our readers about your favorite sport and why.

WW: My favorite sport is baseball. I love the feeling of striking out my competition. Hitting home runs is great too!!

JM: Talk a little about your greatest accomplishment in sports and why.

WW: My greatest accomplishment would be that I have a verbal offer to play baseball at Wallace State Community College, where I have gone and watched games since I started playing youth baseball.

It is one of my dreams to play college baseball, so to get the opportunity to get my collegiate career started there is wonderful!

I was selected by the Baseball Factory to play in the Christmas Camp and Tournament in Pirate City, Florida and by the American International Sports team to represent the USA in the Dominican Republic Challenge of 2012.

Even though I didn't get to go it was a great honor to be selected.

JM: Tell our readers about you greatest inspiration in sports and why?

WW: I love the sport of baseball. I have had the benefit to learn from Coach Karl Amonite, who played and graduated from Auburn University.

Now I have the opportunity to learn from coaches Trai Meadows, All-American at UAH and Coach Steve Woodard who played in the Major Leagues.

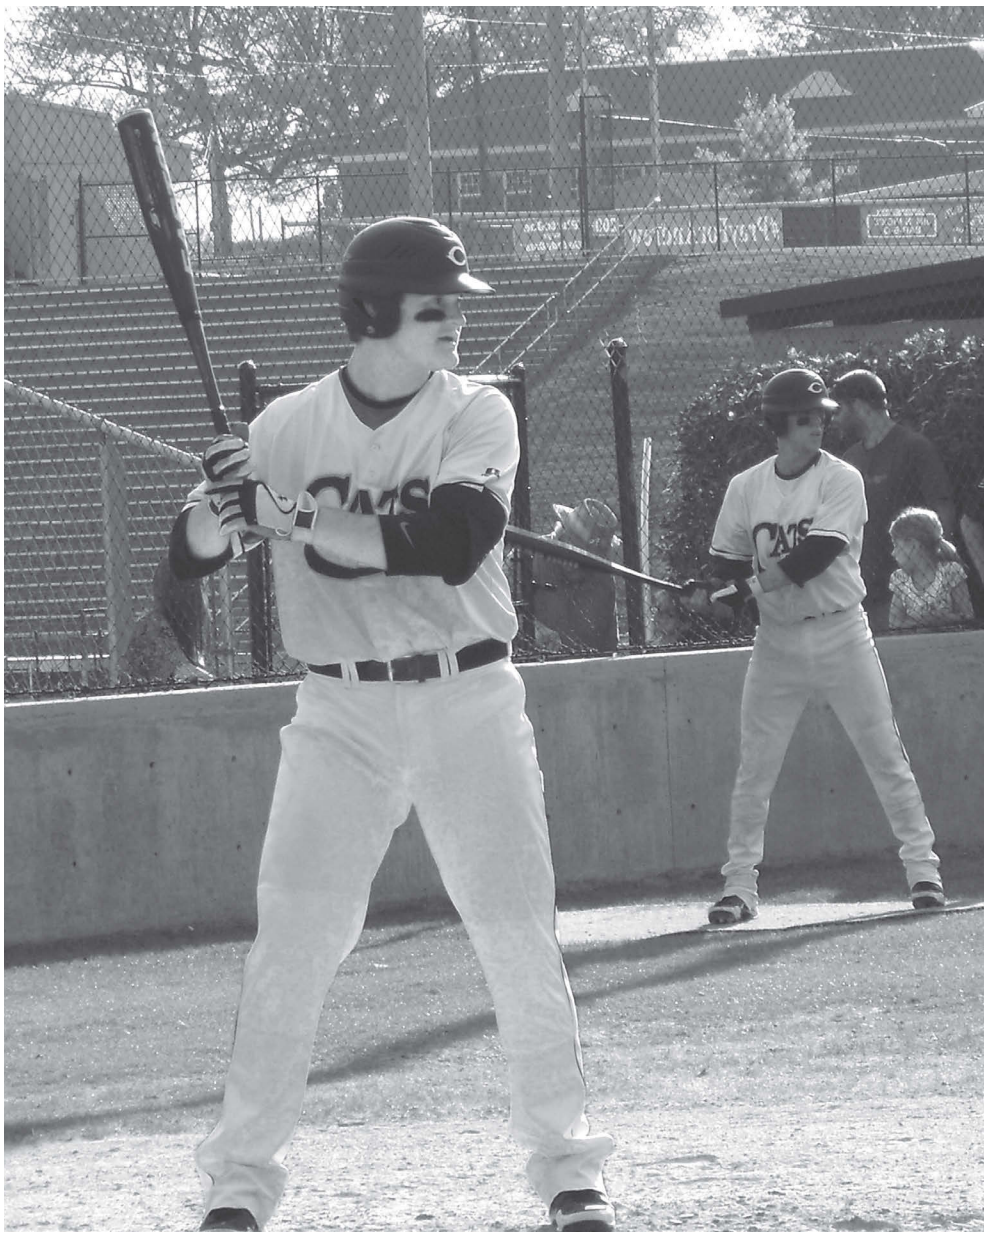

I am learning a great deal from both of them. Former Major League pitcher and current West Point pitching coach Steve Woodard had this to say about his ace pitcher:

"I have been very impressed with Wesley on the mound in the time I have been with the team this year," Woodard said. "His numbers are not going to speak for themselves because we have not given him any run support and made mistakes in the field behind him."

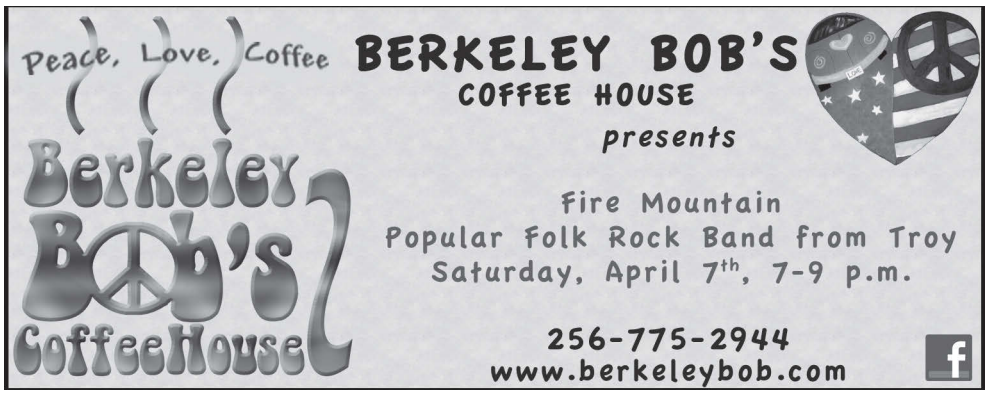

Woodard bragged on Waters' skills, complimenting the young pitchers speed and strength.

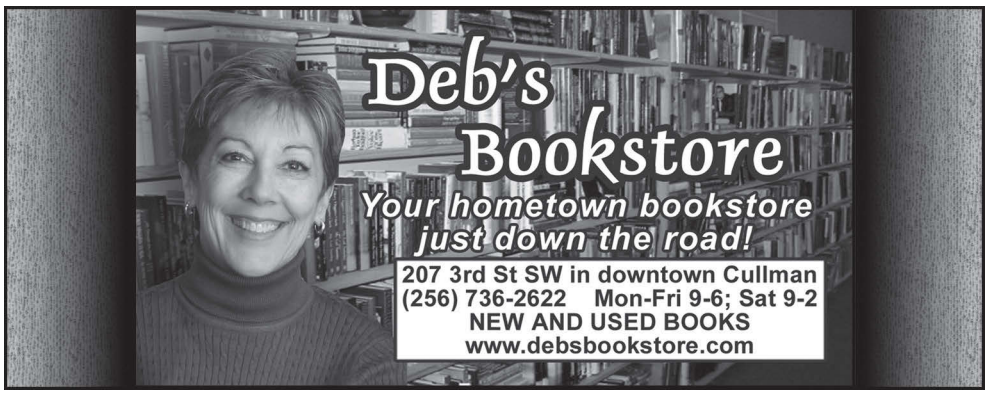

"He is probably the best player I have seen this year as far as a pitcher. He can throw to both sides of the plate with his fastball and can throw his breaking ball for a strike," he said.

"He throws 85 - 87 with great location which is the most important thing, second is movement which he has. Third is velocity which will get better and better as he gets older. With a lot of hard work and dedication he has a very bright future ahead of him. I have enjoyed my time with him and look forward to the rest of the year and seeing him get better."

GAP Shortens Time from Developmental to College-Level Coursework

By: Kristen Holmes
Wallace State Contributor

HANCEVILLE - A new summer program at Wallace State Community College in Hanceville will help students bridge the divide between high school and college.

The Get Ahead Program (GAP) prepares students for college-level math and English courses by allowing them to progress through developmental, also known as transitional, courses during a specially scheduled six-week summer. Those who successfully complete developmental courses in the summer can begin taking courses for credit toward degree in the fall term.

"Close to 70 percent of incoming freshmen must take at least one developmental course," said Cindy Mallard, Director of Transitional Learning. "Being successful in this program means a student can be a semester ahead in course work and on track for graduation."

That is because most incoming freshman begin taking classes in the fall semester.

When admission test scores require students to take developmental courses, which are typically semester-long courses, they are essentially a semester behind in some areas.

Placement tests are given for reading, English, and math. Generally speaking, students need to score either a 20 on the ACT or a 36 or higher on the Compass test to place into college-level math; a 20 on the ACT or at least a 62 on Compass to be eligible for college-level English, and at least a 14 on the ACT or 65 on Compass to avoid having to take a developmental reading course, which must be satisfied before enrolling in college-level English (ENG 101).

Depending on Compass placement, students may be required to take two levels of developmental courses. For instance, if a student tests into developmental English 092, they must also take developmental English 093 before taking college-level English 101.

Studies show that students are more likely to drop out of college and less likely to complete a degree if they have to take developmental courses first.

"Part of that may be due to the additional time it takes to get to the degree. This pilot program will allow students to progress more quickly to courses that will count in their program of study," said Dr. Tomesa Smith, Executive Vice President and the college's chief academic officer. Students may progress with a grade of "C" or better.

Another key to student success in college is engagement, Smith said. Students enrolling in GAP will have a head start building relationships with other students and become familiar with the campus.

The Get Ahead Program is scheduled so that students will have a break after high school graduation and before fall classes begin. Participating students must be able to attend classes June 18 through July 26, Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Eligible students must meet the following criteria and be chosen for program participation through the GAP application process: graduate from high school or earn a GED before program begins; apply and be accepted to WSCC; qualify for summer Pell Grant assistance; receive scores on the Compass test that place them into developmental English and math courses; and register for the 12 hours required by GAP.

Applications are available from Wallace State Talent Search and Upward Bound counselors, the Adult Education Department, the Transitional Learning Department, and on the Wallace State web site at www.wallacestate.edu/gap.

For more information, contact Wallace State Transitional Learning at 256-352-8081 or cindy.mallard@wallacestate.edu.

Bloomin' Festival Set for April 21-22

By: Noah Chandler

CULLMAN – The bees are buzzing and the flowers are blooming. These are just two ways you can tell that the 28th Annual Bloomin' Festival Arts & Crafts Fair is quickly ascending upon us. More than 140 artists and craftsmen from across the United States will be welcomed into The Benedictine community by the monks of St. Bernard Abbey.

"Little did we know that a small school community like St. Bernard Prep could become a destination stop for thousands of visitors," said festival director, Joyce Nix. "The Bloomin' Festival has become a tradition in Cullman for the past 27 years, and the 28th promises to continue the tradition."

Nix reflected on the past years, remembering the challenges that lay ahead, but also the joy that came when the event was heralded as a success. "I remember when we started the show 27 years ago. We blazed a trail through Tennessee, Georgia, North Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, Missouri, and Mississippi looking for quality artists. The Bloomin' Festival quickly became a favorite in the Southeast," she said.

Those who've frequented the yearly event have seen some of the unique vendors offering up all sorts of goods. Of course a bevy of food to sample along great games for children to play will also be in the mix. However, snagging one of the coveted 140 venders' booths is not an easy task, explained Nix.

"We are very selective about the quality and the quantity of each booth," continued Nix. "We take only the finest artists and craftspeople, and bring them together for a premier showcase of talent."

As in the past, this year's Bloomin' Festival features demonstrations by a blacksmith, glassblower, and potter. Items for the home or garden, birdhouses, clothing for ladies and children, toys, jewelry, pottery, and stained glass will also be on display.

This year a new attraction will be the corn gristmill. The gristmill will give both parents and children an opportunity to shuck corn before turning it into cornmeal.

The morning of April 21 a 5K/10K race through St. Bernard Abbey's Treasure Forest will take place. The running trails meander through stands of tall pine and hardwood trees, across deep-woods meadows and conclude on the athletic fields of the school. To register visit www.bloominfestival.com.

At the end of the festivities, a drawing will take place for several amazing prizes. One lucky couple will spend 2 nights at Zoder's Inn in Gatlinbur, Tennessee, while another individual has a shot to drive off in a 2012 Jeep Patriot.

If you are new to The Bloomin' Festival you may want to check out the Ave Marie Grotto, located adjacent to the festival. The Grotto is a four acre garden park created by Benedictine monk, Br. Joseph Zoettl. Miniature replicas of the Coliseum of Rome, the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the first century town of Jerusalem, the missions of California, and over 100 other sites from around the world line the Ave Marie Grotto.

"Ave Maria Grotto is a wonderful place to visit during the festival," Nix said. "The Grotto is a premier example of American Folk Art and fits perfectly into the theme of our festival. People can see how Br. Joseph meticulously crafted concrete with tile, glass, marbles, costume jewelry, and a whole array of material to make his creations. It is a favorite stop for visitors to our Bloomin' Festival."

The Bloomin' Festival is April 21-22, 2012. An admission donation of $5 is requested at the gate. Children ages 5 and under are free. Admission to Ave Maria Grotto is reduced to $3 the entire weekend.

Wallace State Sophomore Rachel Wiley Named Alabama Distinguished Phi Theta Kappa Chapter Member

By: Russell Moore
Wallace State Contributor

HANCEVILLE –Rachel Wiley of Hartselle, a sophomore at Wallace State Community College in Hanceville, was named an Alabama Distinguished Phi Theta Kappa Chapter member at the Alabama Regional PTK Convention earlier this month, and the college chapter received Five-Star Status.

Wiley earned the Alabama Distinguished honor after volunteering many hours, inside and outside the classroom, and helping organize and run events associated with the Wallace State Math Department.

She was an essential contributor to the 2nd annual Think Local First 5K sponsored by PTK in November 2011 and has devoted multiple hours to Leadership, Scholarship, Fellowship, and Service, the four PTK Hallmarks, to the local Alpha Chi Tau Chapter of PTK.

"Rachel is a dynamic young lady who embraces the four Phi Theta Kappa Hallmarks," said Stacey Moore, Wallace State math instructor. "Rachel has gone 'above and beyond' what most of our members do."

Additionally, Wiley was named Wallace State's 2012 Homecoming queen runner-up in February.

Wallace State's PTK chapter received Five Star Status for engaging in efforts on campus, in the community and assisting in ideas regionally and internationally.

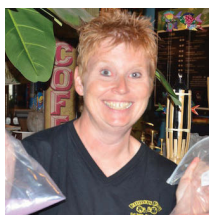

Wallace State's PTK recently completed a college project by welcoming dorm residents and an Honors in Action Project around the motto: "Get Informed…Be Educated…Live Well…" They have also sponsored an annual 5K race, a canned food drive and provided Healthy Tuesday Tips around campus among other activities.

More Family Stories

I'm honestly not trying to bore you with our family life, but I got deep into family vacations when we went camping last week and thought I'd bore you with one more idea just in case you want to be as "Leave It To Beaver" as we were.

I'm no philosopher, but I can tell you one thing about raising kids…they are going to remember time spent together more than any gift you will probably ever give them…well, unless you give them a really cool car that even you can't afford to drive. Anyway, I was thinking about times when it rained or it was too cold to camp or be outside in the yard to grill and camp with the kids. We still made smores and cooked our hot dogs on a stick.

We set up a tent in our den downstairs. Yes, a big tent, meant for the great outdoors was sitting right in the den, complete with sleeping bags, blankets, pillows, stuffed animals, you name it, it was in the tent!

We made a fire in the fireplace, got the marshmallows, graham crackers and Hershey bars, hot dogs, buns, ketchup…you get the idea. It took me an hour to carry everything down from the kitchen. Everyone got to roast his or her own hot dog.

Sometimes they dropped off in the fire or became a flaming torch that ended up being a black piece of charcoal, but they were the best hot dogs you could ever want and of course they all wanted to make one for us. YUM! YUM!

Next came smores. Usually the marshmallows were a lot like the wieners and dropped off in the fire. Their favorite was to catch it on fire and wave it around until we made them blow it out. Most of the burnt ones were wasted and the Hershey bars were eaten separately or hidden until later on when we were in the tent.

When the kids had company over, we would "camp" in the house and cook in the fireplace. Our house was the house to come to for fun and adventure.

Yes, we had sticky marshmallows in our hair, burnt fingers and tongues, messes on the fireplace, ketchup in the carpet, and drinks spilled in the tent, but they were the times we all remember. I would give almost anything to have a day of those times again.

I'll admit, it was exhausting at times, but playing a game, watching a movie, reading "The Boxcar Children" and making huge messes to clean up the next day is all worth it to create memories with your kids.

Sometimes you just have to say, "what the heck!"

Easy Lasagna

This is a recipe that started out from a friend, but I always change things around a little to my liking. It is delicious! This is always a request for special occasions at our house.

There is a crock pot version as well that I will list at the bottom.

Ingredients:

- 1 lb. Ground chuck
- ½ lb. Jimmy Dean sausage-mild
- 1 lb. shredded mozzarella cheese
- 1 lb. shredded mild cheddar cheese
- 1-16 oz. container of cottage cheese
- 1 egg
- 1-1lb. 14 oz. jar of Prego Traditional Italian sauce
- 1-6 oz. can Hunts tomato paste with oregano, basil, & garlic
- 1 medium yellow or white onion, chopped
- 1 box lasagna noodles (you will use 9 noodles)
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon granulated garlic
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1 teaspoon basil

Directions:

1. Brown together both the ground chuck and the Jimmy Dean sausage, adding the chopped onion. I don't drain it unless there is a lot of grease.
2. Add the tomato paste, Prego, sugar, and seasonings.
3. Turn to low and cook for about 10-15 minutes, stirring occasionally.
4. In a small bowl, mix together the egg and the cottage cheese.
5. In a large bowl, mix the cheeses together.
6. Using a 9x13 baking dish, layer as follows: Cover the bottom of the dish with the sauce mixture, add 3 UNCOOKED lasagna noodles, next spread some of the cottage cheese mixture on the noodles. Sprinkle the mixture of shredded cheeses, covering the noodles. Repeat starting with the sauce, noodles, cottage cheese, shredded cheeses, etc. until gone. There will be 3 layers.
7. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes or until bubbly. Let set about 10 minutes if you can stand it, and it will cut easier.

Crock Pot Version

Do everything as noted above, but instead of layering it in a baking dish, layer it in the crock-pot. Put it on low for about 4 hours. This is great!

Monkey Bread

This is another "slap your grandma" recipe. This recipe is one of those where you take a bite or two, go back, pick at it, go back again and again and again until you can't hold any more…well, maybe just one more. Try it and you will see.

*NOTE: No monkeys were harmed or used in the creation of this recipe. I don't know why it's called that.

Ingredients:

- 4 cans refrigerated biscuits
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 1 1/2 sticks butter (3/4 cup)
- 1/2 cup white sugar
- 2 Tablespoons cinnamon
- 1/2 cup raisins (these are optional, as I do not like raisins)

Directions:

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees fahrenheit and grease a 9-10 inch tube pan.
2. Mix white sugar and cinnamon in a medium sized plastic bag. Cut the biscuits into quarters and place six to eight biscuit pieces in the sugar cinnamon mix. Shake well.
3. Arrange pieces in the bottom of the greased pan. Continue layering until all the biscuit pieces are coated and in the pan. If you are using raisins, place them among the biscuit pieces as you are layering.
4. In a small saucepan, melt the butter with the brown sugar over medium heat. Boil for 1 minute. Pour over the layered biscuits.
5. Bake for 35 minutes. Let bread cool in pan for 10 minutes, and then turn out onto a plate. Pull apart and enjoy!

You will need to wash your hands a lot when eating this delicious dessert. It's good for breakfast as well.

Mirroring History

Looking Back: Exploring Historic Cullman at the First Hospital

In 1988, Mrs. Henry C. Arnold donated the block of land on Fourth Avenue East for the site of a "splendid hospital." The donation was made in memory of her husband who died the previous year. The original building cost was $100, 000. The building still stands today but with several additions.

Refreshments will be available for a minimal cost. This session's topic is The Cross & Suffering.

"The Cross and Suffering"
Suffering is a sobering reality in a fallen world. Followers of Christ are not immune to adversity and affliction. On the contrary, there is a real sense in which following Christ means that trials and tribulations are more likely to come our way. As a result, whether walking through sickness, sorrow, pain, or persecution, the questions abound Why am I suffering? Where is God when I suffer? How can I suffer well? When will my suffering end? How can God be good and allow such evil in the world? How can God be gracious and ordain such suffering in my life? During this Secret Church on Good Friday, we will explore these extremely profound yet deeply personal questions through the lens of Christ's sufferings on the cross. In the process, we will come to a surprising discovery of how the gospel strengthens, sustains, supports, and ultimately satisfies us in the middle of suffering.

Community Matters

ute to this German heritage, a museum was dedicated to our city's founder.

What may be not-so common knowledge is that the Cullman County Museum, which sits across from City Hall, showcases an extensive collection of artifacts about Colonel Cullmann, his family, and life in general during the 1800s.

When guests first enter the museum, a feeling of a simpler time immediately overtakes them; the feeling of a time where life was not so hectic, but still extremely rough on a person.

The staff at the museum is very knowledgeable, friendly, and eager to answer any questions you may have about Colonel Cullmann, the city, any artifacts you find, or about the museum itself.

When taking a self-guided tour, you'll first enter into what is known as the "Native American" room. This room is filled with hundreds of arrowheads, ranging between 7,000 and 12,000 years old, along with chunks of flint that the arrowheads were fashioned from and numerous pieces of clay pottery. This room also houses the only known complete example of a Harris Rocker Stamped pot. It has been dated at between 400 and 600 A.D. The pot was found in a shelter that was hidden inside a bluff in nearby Morgan County.

In the short and narrow hallway that connects the "Native American" room with what will be a new exhibit on the Civil War that commemorates the continuation of the 150th anniversary of the start of the war that pitted brother against brother, you get a small glimpse into lives of those affected by the bloody conflict.

Glass cases on left hold artifacts such as a reproduction of a dress women from the northern states would have worn, along with a reproduced Union uniform that has authentic weapons hanging from its belt.

To the right of these exhibits hangs a Confederate uniform with period weapons, as well as an authentic dress that was made by a then 14 year old Mahalia McKee. According to the Museum, the young McKee picked the cotton, spun it into thread, dyed it, wove it into fabric, and then sewed her dress. Such a time consuming endeavor was commonplace during this time.

Heading through the unfinished Civil War room you come to the "Music Room" where antique music instruments of various shapes and sizes are on display. Along with the assortment of instruments there are details on the music back in the day that allow you the chance to almost hear the historic pieces being played.

The last room before returning to the foyer is the "Colonel's Room." This room is, of course, named for Colonel John G. Cullmann. According to museum staffers, when Colonel Cullmann passed away his possessions were sold at auction because he had no immediate family in the United States.

His wife and daughter had stayed behind in Germany when Colonel Cullmann made the voyage to the United States. Even though he brought his two sons with him, one was lost to the dreaded typhoid fever on the journey over, while the other son fell victim to the same debilitating disease shortly after Cullmann had established the town of Cullman.

As luck would have it, some descendants of the families who purchased some belongings of Colonel Cullmann's at auction, donated them to the museum for all to enjoy. These items include a chair that belonged to Colonel Cullmann and the bed he slept in.

A beautiful grandfather clock from the same time period, along with a chest of drawers from which was made by one of the first furniture makers in Cullman and many other items line the historical room.

Ending the tour, you'll find yourself back in the foyer where several documents about and from Colonel Cullmann including his death certificate and a letter that bears his actual signature can be viewed through a glass case.

The Cullman County Museum is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m., Sunday from 1:30 p.m. until 4 p.m., and closed on Saturday.

Regular admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children 11 and younger. For parties of 10 or more or school groups, please visit the Museums Group Information page, at www.cullmancountymuseum.com
