Good Hope teen reaches out to children of drug addicts

THE TAYLOR FAMILY

13-year-old Tripp Taylor speaks at Daystar Church.

GOOD HOPE – When Robert Taylor lost his sister Ashley Taylor to a heroin overdose in Dec. 2016, he was overwhelmed. He and his wife had helped raise his sister after the death of their father when Ashley was 11 years old. She became almost a child of the family, and a sister to Robert Taylor's children.

"It really took a toll on me, and it really took a very bad toll on my wife. Well, we had a 10-year-old and a 12-year-old also, and they looked at her more like a sister than an aunt, you know. And we never realized what effect it had on them."

When Robert Taylor ran into a local pastor who struck up a conversation about Robert's son, the now 13-year-old Tripp Taylor, the dad discovered that his son had been in touch with several local churches about starting a ministry for kids whose parents are no longer around, especially due to drugs. When he spoke to Tripp about his idea, his son told him:

"You know, Daddy, I go to school with a bunch of kids, and I see it. In their eyes, I can see it: that they're hurting. And everybody always focuses on the addict--we've got to get them clean, got to get them out of jail and back at work, and all that.

"A lot of times, the kids sit back and go 'Why? Why is my mother on drugs?' or 'Why is my daddy in jail?' or 'Why do I live with my grandparents?' or somebody else. I just want to be a voice for the voiceless. I want to reach out to these kids, and share the love of God, and let them know that somebody cares. If we don't, the apples don't fall far from the tree."

Starting in 2017 the Taylor family has participated in numerous heroin addiction awareness events from Birmingham to Huntsville. Since that time, Tripp Taylor has begun receiving invitations to speak

Hanceville Schools review security plans with police, sheriff's office

HANCEVILLE – While students and most teachers took Presidents Day off, Hanceville High School Principal Jimmy Collins was hard at work, hosting a joint team of representatives from the Hanceville Police Department, Hanceville Fire and Rescue, and Cullman County Sheriff's Office on a walk-through tour of all three public schools that share a campus in the city. Mayor Kenneth Nail, Police Chief Bob Long, Fire Chief Rodger Green, Sheriff Matt Gentry and County Schools Superintendent Shane Barnette were all in attendance, along with a host of law enforcement officers.

The groups came together for a detailed look at the schools' facilities, examining layout, entrances, exits and campus access in order to give all agencies better chances to respond to acts of campus violence like the shooting that devastated Parkland, Florida last week.

Collins told The Tribune, "Our Mayor (Nail) just called us and asked what he could do to help out, and we came up with this plan to let everybody see the school; and then let everybody know how proactive we're trying to be in this situation, to let everybody know that we've got people here who care about their kids, and we're doing everything we can to prevent (school violence) to start with.

"But in case it was to happen, you know, we're prepared for that as well. We've got Hanceville PD that's only a block away from us, and you know that we're ready for it, if it ever did.

"But we're doing a hundred percent, trying our best not for that situation to ever come about, with our teacher advisory groups being proactive in trying to get into those kids' minds before, let them know that we're here to help them out if they're having some issues at home or here at school. If they're getting bullied at school, we have all kinds of (help for) that, to where they don't get to » PAGE 3

Severe Weather Sales Tax Holiday this Friday-Sunday

wendy@cullmantribune.com

MONTGOMERY – Alabama is observing its seventh annual Severe Weather Preparedness Sales Tax Holiday this weekend. It will run from Friday, Feb. 23 through Sunday, Feb. 25.

Alabamians can restock on emergency supplies during the three-day tax holiday. Certain emergency preparedness items will be exempt from the state's 4-percent state sales tax, and in Cullman County, local taxes are waived on those items as well, meaning a savings of 10 percent locally.

From 12:01 a.m. Feb. 23 to midnight Feb. 25, the tax-exempt items include the following, priced at $60 or less:

- Flashlights, lanterns
- Battery-powered or hand-crank radios
- Batteries
- First-aid kits
- Cell phone chargers
- Two-way radios
- Manual can openers
- Tarps and plastic sheeting
- Duct tape
- Fire extinguishers
- Tie-down kits, bungee cords or ropes

Other tax-free items include: coolers, ice packs, plywood, window film and smoke/fire/carbon monoxide detectors. Portable generators and power cords costing $1,000 or less are also tax-free. For a full list of tax-free items, go to www.alabamaretail.org/alabamasalestaxholidays.

Alabama's tax holiday is the earliest among the four states with a severe weather preparedness sales tax holiday. The Texas tax holiday is in April, Louisiana's is in May and Virginia's is in August.

"Severe weather can occur at any time, in any season," said Alabama Retail Association President Rick Brown.

"The tax holiday helps Alabama consumers remember to stock and prepare emergency kits to be ready when storms strike."

Alabama Retail recommends having enough supplies in emergency kits to last 72 hours following a disaster. For information on what items to include in emergency kits, as well as steps to take before and after disasters, visit www.ready.gov.

ALABAMA COMIC CON

Collectible vintage comics will be among pop culture items available from vendors.

Alabama Comic Con coming to Birmingham March 24-25

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmansense.com

BIRMINGHAM – Attention all nerds! Alabama Comic Con is coming to Birmingham. AVC Conventions (not associated with the famous San Diego Comic-Con) will host a convention at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center on March 24 and 25, 2018 for comic book collectors, video and role-playing gamers, sci-fi/fantasy movie and TV fans, cosplayers, and many others out there who are proud to let their geek flags fly.

The event has scheduled many guest celebrities and artists, including:

- Marina Sirtis - best known as Counselor Troi on "Star Trek: The Next Generation"
- Jason David Frank - best known as one of the original Power Rangers
- Veronica Taylor - voice actor known for voicing Ash Ketchum in the English language edition of "Pokemon"
- C.J. Graham - one of several actors to portray "Jason" in the "Friday the 13th" movie franchise
- Ted DiBiase - professional wrestler known as "The Million Dollar Man"
- James O'Barr - graphic artist who created the comic book series "The Crow"
- June Brigman - graphic artist for Marvel, CD and Dark Horse, who co-created the Marvel series "Power Pack"
- Roy Richardson - Marvel and DC artist whose long resume includes "Iron Man," "Captain America," "X-Men Classic," "Daredevil," "Justice League International" and the original "Star Wars" miniseries
- Nolan Woodard - new generation Marvel artist and colorist for numerous series like "All-New Wolverine," "All-New X-Men," "Avengers," "Deadpool" and others
- Greg Burnham - graphic artist and creator of "Tuskegee Heirs"

Cosplayers welcome

Visitors are invited to come in costume. The convention will feature a cosplay/costume contest on Saturday, and will award prizes for the best adult, child and group costumes. The event is advertised as family-friendly, and costumers are advised to keep things decent. Professional cosplayers Haiden Hazard, Melanie Verdugo of Hane Cosplay, and Suzanne Gibson of Suzanne's Cosplay are scheduled to appear.

And of course, there will be vendors, as well. Visitors will find all manner of geek gear, including vintage comics, gaming goods, original art, anime and general pop culture stuff. AVC is also planning for panel presentations and fan groups. The Tribune plans to be there, reporting from the BJCC. If you're going, especially if you're cosplaying/costuming, let us know. For more information on Alabama Comic Con, including events and tickets, visit www.alabamacomiccon.com or www.facebook.com/ALComicCon.

Sweet! Big Spoon Creamery coming to Mae's Food Hall

Wendy Sack
wendy@cullmantribune.com

BIG SPOON CREAMERY.

CULLMAN – Ready your sweet tooth: Big Spoon Creamery is coming to Mae's Food Hall. Mae's made the announcement on its Facebook page early Saturday afternoon. Big Spoon will open its Mae's location in late March, according to a press release from owners Ryan and Geri-Martha O'Hara. The location will be the creamery's second.

The handcrafted ice cream operation, founded by the O'Haras, a husband and wife team, started in 2014 as a "pop up" in their driveway in Hoover. The two left their jobs as chefs at famed Birmingham restaurant Bottega in 2015 and grew the business to include an ice cream truck and cart over the next two years. Big Spoon opened its first brick and mortar location in the Avondale neighborhood of Birmingham in April of 2017.

"To be honest, we did not have plans to launch a location in Cullman. But after talking with Shane (Quick), owner of Mae's, and seeing the food hall and learning about the community, it was such a unique opportunity that we couldn't turn down," said Ryan O'Hara. "We love the Cullman community and are really looking forward to serving the people of Cullman. We can't wait to introduce the people in this area to the same fresh, handmade ice cream and dynamic customer service that Birmingham has come to love."

"Honestly, Big Spoon's ice cream is the best I've ever had, and I'm an ice connoisseur," said Quick. "I've watched their business explode in Birmingham over the past couple of years, from chasing around their food truck to frequenting their location in Avondale. We've built a relationship with the owners. As we were building Mae's, we really envisioned them from the very beginning. It just wasn't the best time for them as we were opening."

Said Quick, "Their customer service and interaction with customers is about the only thing that rivals the quality of their ice cream. It's really an amazing thing they have going on there in Birmingham."

Big Spoon will take the place of Lichita's ice cream shop at Mae's. Quick said Lichita's left in late January.

"We wish those guys well and hope them the best," he said.

As for how that space will be different once Big Spoon moves in, Quick shared, "We are in the process of building them out now, kind of getting a new, fresh look on the space and the really cook design concept they went with."

Big Spoon makes its waffle cones fresh in-house. In addition to original ice cream flavors, it also serves all the traditional treats such as sundaes and ice cream sandwiches.

outreach ministry to help troubled kids in bad homes.

"This, most of the time, includes parents who have an addiction, they're incarcerated, they've passed away from an addiction, or walked out of their lives.

"And what we're passionate about is trying to bring these kids to God, and giving them a hope, and being a voice for them, because they don't know how to speak for themselves because they've felt unwanted for so long."

Recently, even churches in Birmingham have cranked up their own similar programs, based on Tripp's model. The Taylors hope to see similar movements rise up in communities all over the state.

On Tuesday evening, ahead of this Saturday's heroin awareness walk in Birmingham, My Story Isn't Over: The Right Fight Outreach will hold a meeting at 6 p.m. at Church 212, 4690 County Road 437, Cullman.

At the meeting, visitors will have the opportunity to meet Tripp and hear his story, find out what the organization is doing, and find ways they can become involved.

The public and especially those who are struggling with the loss or absence of a parent are invited and encouraged to attend.

Tripp Taylor told us at the end of our conversation:

"What I would want people to know, for the most part, is what we do at My Story Isn't Over: The Right Fight Outreach, and that is we go out and serve these kids, and we give them a way to feel welcome and a child of God. See, they may not feel like a child in their own home, but if they can turn to God and learn to focus on Him, they will be a child of God through Him.

"So I think the biggest thing I would want people to know about us is that we're God-centered, and we want to be a voice for these kids, and just bring them hope in their everyday lives."

the point to where they just have that feeling that there's nobody there to help them. And that's the main thing we want this meeting to (be) about, and let everybody in the community know that."

After an introductory discussion, Collins led the officers and officials hallway by hallway through multiple campus buildings at all three schools, looking at classroom and exterior doors and discussing ways to control campus access and react to an active shooter scenario.

For security reasons and at the principal's request, specific details of the facilities and discussed procedures were not included in this article.

After the meeting, Barnette told The Tribune, "I'd just like to say how much I appreciate all these guys for coming and walking through the school. I mentioned earlier that, you know, as long as there's sin in the world, there's going to be bad things go on, but I think we can do everything we can do to be better prepared to prevent it--number one--and to make it as small as possible--number two--if something does happen and be able to respond and react fast.

"It makes me weak in my knees, you know, I want to throw up when I think of what happened last week in Florida, and if something like that ever happened in Cullman County, it just breaks my heart. But we've still got to be prepared for it and do everything we can do to be prepared."

WSCC

HANCEVILLE – Wallace State Community College's Salon and Spa Management program will once again host a Look Good Feel Better session for area women dealing with cancer treatments. The next session will be held on Friday, March 9 at 9 a.m. in the Salon and Spa Management classroom.

"We are very excited to again be the facilitator of this amazing program offered by the American Cancer Society," said Sabrina Flanigan, head of the Wallace State Salon and Spa Management program.

"We had such a wonderful time during our first session last fall, helping women learn how to deal with changes in their appearance, skin care, and safety.

"It was a very touching experience for me and instructor Amy Moore. We can't wait to do it again."

Look Good Feel Better is open to all women who are undergoing chemotherapy, radiation or other forms of treatment, as well as those who are about to begin treatment or who recently completed treatment.

During the session, they are provided with supplies and instruction on beauty techniques to help them manage the appearance-related side effects of cancer treatments.

Those who attended the last session are welcome to attend this session, but should bring the Look Good Feel Better kit they received at the previous workshop.

Pre-registration is requested by calling 800-227-2345. Advance notice of up to three business days is suggested in order to ensure availability of a make-up kit.

For more information about the program, visit www.lookgoodfeelbetter.org.

Wallace State's Salon and Spa Management program offers many degree and certificate options in cosmetology, esthetics, nail technology and therapeutic massage.

For more information about the program contact Flanigan at 256-325-8197 or Sabrina.flanigan@wallacestate.edu. For more information about Wallace State call 256-352-8000 or visit www.wallacestate.edu.

Move over Pyeongchang, it's the Toddler Olympics!

Nick Griffin
Tribune Correspondent

CULLMAN – The 2018 Winter Olympics are happening now in Pyeongchang, South Korea. Here, Cullman Parks and Recreation (CP&R) held its Toddler Olympics Saturday at the Cullman Wellness and Aquatic Center, with more than a dozen pint-sized athletes coming out to play and compete. The kids competed in relays and games while also spending some time working on art, enjoying snacks and playing on a blow-up obstacle course in the gym.

Maneka Rocca, CP&R's recreation and event specialist, was excited to organize these Olympics and said her focus was on making sure all the kids had as much fun as possible.

"We try to do as much stuff for everyone, all age groups, as possible," Rocca said. "So, especially with the Olympics going on right now we wanted to create something for the little kids to get them out with their family."

Saturday's weather got a little grey and rainy, forcing the events indoors, but Rocca was still excited with this year's turnout.

"The weather's been kind of bad, so we wanted to bring them in and have families still be able to go out and play and have a great time," she said.

‘Black Panther’ gets 5/5 stars

Nick Griffin
Tribune Correspondent

“Black Panther” is the latest addition to Marvel’s cinematic universe and stars Chadwick Boseman as T’challa. Directed by Ryan Coogler, “Black Panther” picks up T’challa’s story right after the events of “Captain America: Civil War” where we first met him as he deals with the aftermath of his father’s death and his ascension to the throne. The film introduces us to the African nation of Wakanda for the first time after audiences were fed small hints about it in earlier Marvel films.

One of the most interesting elements of this film is the design of Wakanda itself. The cities of Wakanda are built with a unique and visually striking mix of ancient African influences and advanced technology. The combination makes for a very unique-looking environment that we haven’t seen in the MCU up to this point. The closest we’ve come to seeing something like it is probably in the “Thor” films where alien technology is infused with Norse culture.

In several ways, Wakanda itself is what drives the action and moves the plot, whether it be fight sequences that come from ancient rituals or the isolationism that is provoking both the heroes and villains. Like the nation of Wakanda, “Black Panther” feels isolated from the rest of the Marvel films in that there are almost no references to events happening outside of T’challa’s personal conflict or callbacks to other films. Considering that Marvel’s biggest film yet, “Avengers: Infinity War” is just a few months away, it’s surprising to see how personal and contained Coogler’s film is.

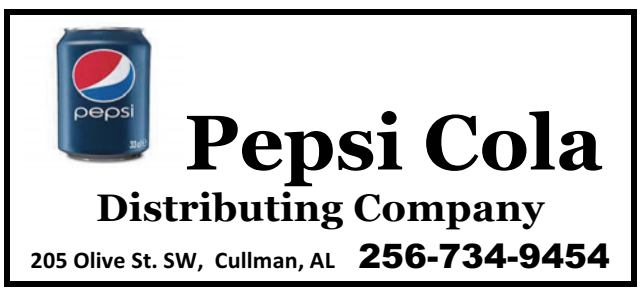

Like all of Marvel’s films, there is a mix of action and humor, but this time around the jokes feel a little more evenly spread out than some earlier films with a lot of the humor coming from the female leads. The general of Wakanda’s armies Okoye, played by Danai Gurira, and T’challa’s sister Shuri, played by Letitia Wright, are both able to generate action and comedy in their roles. Particularly Okoye, who steals all the fight scenes that don’t involve the technology of the Black Panther suit.

The villain, and maybe the most interesting character in the film, is Erik Killmonger. Without getting into spoiler territory, Killmonger, played by Michael B. Jordan, stands out as one of the MCU’s most sympathetic and intimidating antagonists to date. Not unlike Michael Keaton’s Vulture from “Spiderman: Homecoming,” we see Killmonger as the villain of the story, but if you look at things from his perspective, it is easy to sympathize with his story and understand what is motivating him. My only complaint is that we didn’t get enough of him, because Jordan controls every scene he is in and should be mentioned amongst Marvel’s best villains so far.

There may not be quite enough action for everybody and if you’re hunting for references to other films and characters you’ll be disappointed, but it’s the intimacy of “Black Panther” that makes it interesting. Nit-picks like pacing and effects don’t stand out as much when you like and care about all the characters, so Coogler’s decision to keep the focus strictly on Wakanda pays off.

With “Infinity War” coming up in May, it should be very interesting to see how T’challa, his allies and Wakanda will be wrapped up in the chaos.

NORTHWEST REGIONAL: Lady Raiders knocked off by Danville, 49-39

Nick Griffin
Tribune Correspondent

HANCEVILLE – The Good Hope Lady Raiders' playoff run came to an end Saturday morning when they came up short against the Danville Hawks 49-39, in the Northwest Regional at Wallace State.

The Lady Hawks got out to fast start and led the Lady Raiders by 11 late in the first quarter. Good Hope put together a scoring run midway through the second quarter and cut the Danville lead to just 30-27 at the half.

Erika Woodall and Leyton Seal led the way for the Lady Raiders on the offensive end, scoring 11 and 12 points respectively, while forward Kate Kent led the game with 12 rebounds and finished with seven points. Unfortunately for Good Hope, a lot of that production came in the first half and the Lady Raiders couldn't keep scoring consistently.

Danville's three-point shooting was a problem for the Lady Raiders in the first half. The Lady Hawks hit seven of their 14 three-point attempts with three of them coming from Emma Broadfoot and two more coming from Jolee Cole.

Cole led all scorers with 17. Good Hope's 11 first-half turnovers made it difficult for the Lady Raiders to find a rhythm offensively and provided extra possessions for the Lady Hawks' offense, as well as some fast break opportunities.

The second half was even tougher for the Lady Raiders offensively. Good Hope was held to just two points in the third quarter, allowing the Lady Hawks to widen their lead going into the final frame.

Good Hope never loosened up on the defensive end, allowing just 19 points in the second half, but six more turnovers and 14 percent shooting from the floor kept the Lady Raiders from capitalizing on their defensive performance.

Good Hope's season closes at 11-21 with a Sweet 16 appearance. The Lady Raiders will look to bounce back with an even deeper post-season run next season.

NORTHWEST REGIONAL: Wenonah ends Lady Aggies' season, 54-38

Nick Griffin
Tribune Correspondent

HANCEVILLE – The Fairview Lady Aggies fell in their round of Sweet 16 matchup with Wenonah Monday morning 54-38 to end their postseason run and finish the season 23-8. The Lady Dragons are seeking their fifth straight state championship and jumped out to an early lead over Fairview.

Wenonah was able to attack the basket offensively and maximize its possessions with high-percentage shots, and Lady Dragons' size and speed made it difficult for the Lady Aggies to play as fast as they like to. Wenonah shot 54 percent in the first half and 48 percent for the game, making it difficult for Fairview to keep pace with the Lady Dragons. The full court press and aggressive defense from Wenonah led to eight first-half turnovers from Fairview and put the Lady Aggies in a 34-18 hole at the half.

Fairview was able to chip away at the Lady Dragons' lead in the third quarter, thanks in large part to Abbi Taylor's performance scoring down around the basket. Taylor led all scorers with 20 points. The Lady Aggies tightened up in the third quarter and generated some turnovers that led to easy baskets, but they couldn't cut deep enough into the Wenonah lead to stay in it for four quarters.

The fourth quarter was controlled almost entirely by the Lady Dragons, who maintained possession and control of the clock for the majority of the final frame. Faith Reynolds was a problem for Fairview, especially when she attacked the basket. Reynolds led Wenonah with 19 points and shot 50 percent from the field. The Lady Aggies were held to just five points in the fourth, and 10 more turnovers from Fairview in the second half led to several easy baskets for Wenonah late in the game that allowed them to pull away.

Fairview graduates six seniors from this 2017-18 squad and will look to bounce back with another post-season run next fall.

NORTHWEST REGIONAL: Dragons topple Aggies, 64-42

Nick Griffin
Tribune Correspondent

HANCEVILLE – The Fairview Aggies' season came to a close at 17-15 Monday morning after falling to the Wenonah Dragons 64-42. The Aggies started off strong and actually led the Dragons 15-12 after the first quarter but ran out of gas down the stretch and couldn't maintain their intensity on both ends of the floor.

Bryson Fletcher led the way for the Aggies in his final game suited up in purple and gold with 16 points and seven rebounds in the loss and along with Luke Yarbrough, who finished with eight points, did a lot to build the Aggies' early lead. Fairview was aggressive on the defensive end of the floor and shot 47 percent from the floor in the first half, but turnovers plagued the Aggies' offense and led to a big second quarter for the Dragons.

The Aggies shot well in the first half, 47 percent from the field, but Wenonah was able to capitalize on 12 first-half turnovers from Fairview and put up 24 in the second quarter while holding the Aggies to just 11.

The quarter-long scoring run for Wenonah put the Dragons up 36-26 at the half with the momentum shifting their direction.

The Aggies wouldn't go away in the third quarter and traded baskets with the Dragons making it a 46-35 game at the start of the fourth. Wenonah had a couple of standouts that kept them in front of the Aggies. Cameron Tucker led the game with 22 points and his teammate Justin Minter was not far behind with 18.

Not unlike the Lady Dragons earlier Monday morning against the Lady Aggies, Wenonah was able to maintain possession for large chunks of the final quarter and bled the clock, limiting Fairview's possessions and scoring opportunities. Nine more turnovers in the second half didn't make things any easier for Fairview and the Dragons' 44 percent shooting from the field helped them start to pull away mid-way through the fourth.

The loss ends the Aggies' play-off run in the Sweet 16 and with six seniors graduating, Fairview will look to make another post-season run with some new faces next season.

NORTHWEST REGIONAL: Hanceville upsets no. 5 Holly Pond, 65-59

Sammy Confer
Tribune Correspondent

HANCEVILLE – In their two regular season meetings, the Holly Pond Broncos won both games against the Hanceville Bulldogs. But there was a lot on the line for both teams in Saturday night's Northwest Regional game: a trip to the finals to take on Lauderdale County. In one of the biggest upsets of the year, the Bulldogs made timely baskets and stops when they needed to, holding off a late Bronco rally to stun Holly Pond, 65-59.

The first quarter was evenly matched, ending with the score knotted at 14-all. But Hanceville's defense completely stifled Holly Pond in the second, holding them to just one basket, made by Griffin Morris. After a Tyler Boatright free throw tied the game at 17, Brendan Flanigan hit a layup, then Raiden Morgan hit a trey from the left wing to give the Bulldogs a 22-17 lead.

Morris scored four straight to make it a 22-21 game, and layups by Josh Stanley and Morgan pushed Hanceville's lead back to five at 26-21.

After a pair of Morris free throws made it a 26-23 game, Zeke McDonald nailed a trey from the right wing before the buzzer sounded and the Bulldogs went into the locker room with a 29-23 lead.

The Bulldogs held the Broncos to just 17 percent shooting in the first half (5-of-28), but Holly Pond nailed 12-of-14 from the line to stay in the game.

Hanceville shot 52 percent from the field in the first half (13-25) and 3-of-7 from the three-point line.

Holly Pond finally got some shots to fall in the third quarter, but Hanceville seemed to match them shot for shot. Morgan nailed a trey from the top of the key off a Bronco turnover to increase Hanceville's lead to 41-32 with 3:06 remaining in the quarter, then it went to 11 on basket interference.

Morris looked to bring his team back in the game, scoring five straight to make it a 43-37 game.

A scary moment happened with 1:01 remaining in the third, when Flanigan looked to have seriously hurt his knee almost at mid court, but he got up a few seconds later and walked to the bench on his own. He checked back in a few seconds later.

Hanceville held a 45-39 lead after three, looking to pull off one of the biggest upsets in Regionals history and of the Bulldogs' season.

A three by McDonald and a layup by Stanley pushed the Hanceville lead to 52-41 early in the fourth quarter, the biggest deficit Holly Pond faced all season.

The Broncos tried to get back in the game, as a Kyler Chaney trey helped kick-start a 9-2 Bronco run; Zach Shaw and McKinley Garrett also chipped in.

The Broncos' deficit was down to just four, at 56-52, then it went to 58-55 on a Morris layup with 2:06 remaining in the game.

Hanceville countered with a huge and one by Damion Johnson on its next possession to make it a 61-55 game seven seconds later, and the Bulldogs didn't let Holly Pond get any closer as timely stops on defense, a layup by R. J. Evans and a pair from the line by Flanigan gave them the stunning upset win over the no. 5 Broncos.

McDonald finished with 14 points, four rebounds and a steal for the Bulldogs, who finished the game shooting 48 percent from the field and 40 percent from the 3-point line.

Evans ended up with 11 points, nine in the second half, and added three boards and a steal.

Morgan finished with 10 points and six boards. Johnson had a big game, collecting nine points, seven rebounds and two steals. Stanley and Flanigan each finished with eight points and seven rebounds.

The former also added a couple of big blocks, while the latter added a pair of assists. Fred Ellis added three points, four rebounds, two assists and a steal.

The Bulldogs' defense held Holly Pond to just 30 percent from the field for the game.

Hanceville is now 19-9 on the season, and will face off against Lauderdale County on Wednesday at 2:15 p.m. with a trip to Birmingham on the line.

Morris finished with a game-high 24 points, four rebounds, three assists and a steal in his final game as a Bronco. Chaney had a big game as well, finishing with 16 points and eight boards.

Jake Harris ended up with seven points and an assist. Boatright chipped in with five points and three rebounds.

Garrett finished with four points, 10 rebounds, an assist, a block and a steal. Shaw ended up with three points, four rebounds and a steal.

Holly Pond's season ends with a record of 28-4. The Broncos will lose five seniors this season and will look to be even more motivated to go deep next year in 2018-2019.
