Bearcat Band entertains with preview of fall show

CULLMAN – The Cullman High School Bearcat marching band wrapped up band camp Friday night with a preview of its 2018 halftime show for the community. A large crowd came out to support the students who have worked so very hard over the last few weeks.

The band began in block formation and demonstrated its ability to follow commands and the variety of marching steps involved in marching band. The block formation drills teach marching fundamentals that must be learned before performing in halftime shows and parades.

This year's halftime show is titled "Reflections of our World." The band performed the opening song, "Earth Song," which featured solos by trombone section leader Avery Barnett and trumpet section leader AJ Wood. The strong visuals provided by the color guard, dance team and majorettes were stunning, judging by the crowd's reaction.

The band then treated the crowd with a few of its favorite stand tunes including "Land of 1,000 Dances," "Jig," "Ghostbusters" and the fan favorite "Hey Baby!"

Band Director Christopher Smith, paused to recognize the Cullman Middle School Band. Under the direction of Linda Bean, CMS also held band camp this week in preparation for its 2018 halftime performances at CMS home football games. The middle schoolers will also march » PAGE 4

HANCEVILLE – Friday evening, the Pride of Hanceville Marching Band performed a preview show for band family members and the local community to punctuate the end of band camp at Hanceville High School.

At the performance, the band played and marched to a few songs from its new halftime show, which is titled "Viva" and features songs from Elvis Presley. After the music and marching, band members enjoyed ice cream and a water balloon fight to cool off after the hot week.

Jesse James, who is at the start of his first year as director for the Pride of Hanceville Band, said the preview show went well.

"They put on a great performance," said James. "You could tell that they really enjoyed it, and they really worked hard."

Pat Stricklin, whose son is in the band, also enjoyed the show. "They're good, really good," said Stricklin. "They sounded great, I like it. I love halftime shows."

Nigel Malcom, who has a son in the percussion section, thought the performance was good, too. "My son is in the band; he's percussion," smiled Malcom. "I thought it was good, very entertaining."

Bandmates and family members enjoyed a well-deserved reward after the show.

"We had an ice cream social for all the kids, to get some ice cream, hang out and socialize with their families and their friends," James said. "Hanceville First Baptist Church brought some water balloons » PAGE 4

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN – Donna Ruttkay introduces us to the Cullman County Animal Shelter's Pet of the Week: Spock is a little one-year-old Chihuahua mix who was dropped off with his sister by family members after his owner passed away. He's a spunky medium to high energy pet, who could be a future companion, comfort, or therapy dog. He enjoys getting out and stretching his little legs in the shelter yard. Spock cherishes human companionship and does great on the leash.

Animal shelter staff and volunteers work with their dogs to make sure they are accustomed to being around people, walking on a leash and practicing good behavior. Several of the shelter's dogs have even been "hired" to work as special needs service dogs.

Spock's adoption fee is $90, which includes: DHLPP vaccine, Bordetella vaccines, rabies vaccine, wormer, general exam at the vet, neutering, microchip, free 45-day health insurance policy issued by 24PetWatch (with valid email only) and a free bag of food from Cullman Pet Depot (you must pay sales tax).

Please consider adopting to give a rescued pet a chance at a happy and healthy life.

CULLMAN – Mr. David Duguid, of the Scottish Conservative Party and a Member of British Parliament (MP) for Banff and Buchan since June 2017, recently visited Cullman with U.S. Congressman Robert Aderholt. Mr. Duguid is a participant in the 41st Annual British-American Parliamentary Group (BAPG) Exchange Program. Each year, MPs meet to travel to Washington, D.C. to meet with Republican and Democratic members of Congress before traveling to their counterpart U.S. Representatives' home districts.

"I was honored to meet Mr. Duguid last week when he visited Cullman with Congressman Aderholt," Cullman Mayor Woody Jacobs said. "The BAGP annual exchange program between the US and the UK is a great opportunity to exchange ideas between our countries."

The BAPG exchange has been exchanging ideas since 1977 under the auspices of the U.S. Department of States' International Visitor Leadership Program (IVLP), with the goal of strengthening the special relationship between the United States and the United Kingdom that is necessary to solve global challenges.

Trial (from Front)

CULLMAN – On Monday, Officials at the Cullman County Courthouse seated a jury which heard opening statements in the trial of Cullman resident Crystal Lynn Bulliner for the death of Vincent McGough due to fentanyl overdose. Remaining jurors in the pool are expected to participate in jury selection today for the trial of former Cullman County Commission Chairman James Graves on the charge of sex abuse of a minor.

Crystal Bulliner charged with murder and manslaughter in opioid overdose death

Crystal Lynn Bulliner was indicted in 2015 for the 2014 death of Vincent Mitchell McGough after she allegedly gave him fentanyl patches for which she had no prescription. An initial charge of manslaughter received two additional charges of murder when the case went before a grand jury.

According to the manslaughter charge, Bulliner "did recklessly cause the death of" McGough by "illegally providing fentanyl patches to him." A toxicity report allegedly found other drugs in the victim's system as well, but those were found to be at very low levels. On the other hand, the amount of fentanyl in McGough's system was said to be four times the maximum safe dosage.

The two murder charges claimed that Bulliner caused McGough's death while engaged in the "unlawful distribution of a controlled substance" (often referred to as felony murder) and that she, "under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to human life," engaged in a reckless act by giving McGough the patches, resulting in his death (often referred to as reckless murder).

According to court records, the State and Bulliner's attorney reached a plea agreement in Oct. 2017, but the Circuit Court rejected the deal and sent the case to trial.

Deputy District Attorney John Bryant read the indictment statement aloud, explained briefly the definitions of manslaughter, felony murder, and reckless murder; and gave a short summary of what authorities claim happened in the hours leading up to McGough's death.

Defense attorney Melvin Hasting warned the jury that the next day or two will be full of technical testimony from people who are called experts. He also set forth the claim that McGough died of "multi-drug toxicity"--the presence of multiple drugs in his system, and not just the fentanyl he allegedly acquired from Bulliner. He also noted two other men who were allegedly with McGough in the hours before his death and dropped him off at the emergency room.

Testimony continues today.

CULLMAN COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

Graves charged with sex abuse of a minor

Graves was arrested on May 10, 2017, for the sexual abuse of a minor. A statement issued by the Cullman County Sheriff's Office (CCSO) at that time said the victim came forward after the last incident took place, in which the suspect forced the victim to perform a sexual act.

When Graves was interviewed by investigators, he allegedly confirmed the allegations were true. The CCSO said that following that interview, "there was no doubt a sexual crime had been committed by the suspect." Despite that, Graves initially entered a plea of Not Guilty.

He later changed his plea to Not Guilty by Reason of Mental Disease or Defect.

Because of his long-term contact with Cullman judges through his position on the County Commission, all local judges recused themselves from the case. The judges noted in their recusal orders that Graves is well known to the court, as a former county official, and that they wished "to avoid even the appearance of impropriety." The Cullman judges requested Acting Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Lyn Stuart to assign the case to another judge. On Aug. 11, 2017, retired Madison County Circuit Court Judge Sterling A. Watson, Jr. was assigned to take charge of the case.

On Aug. 17, 2017, Graves was re-arrested on a separate charge of Witness Tampering, a misdemeanor charge. According to the CCSO, an investigation led to the discovery that Graves made contact with someone related to the sex abuse case. At that point, a statement from the CCSO said that investigators contacted the Cullman County District Attorney's Office and obtained a warrant of arrest for tampering with a witness.

Graves's trial will begin once jury selection is complete.

Retail Revival In Downtown Hanceville

W.C. Mann

W.C. MANN/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

John Wesley, the "Warehouse Barber," relocated from Cullman's Warehouse District and expanded his barber shop into an "emporium" with outdoor recreation/ survival gear, vintage stereo equipment, and other manly must-haves.

HANCEVILLE – When talking about what downtown Hanceville was like just a few years ago, a remarkable number of people have applied the same adjective: "dead." There certainly were businesses around, and some doing well, but place after place in the business district sat empty and unused, and run-down properties were common.

Over the last three years, that has changed. New businesses are popping up regularly as downtown properties are being renovated to be business-ready, and the district is even becoming residential as loft apartments are under construction.

Nolan Bradford owns Bradford Development and holds a partnership in Welcome Back Hanceville; two entities that have led much of downtown Hanceville's revitalization. Recently, he sat down with the Tribune in his Commercial St. office to talk about what has been happening.

"In the last three years--and I would say that's when Hanceville started being revitalized, it started with this office," said Bradford. "I drove by and kind of said to myself I'd love to have a little office in Hanceville; this would be a good start . . . All that started on September 3rd or 4th, 2015. So, just a few days from now, it'll be three years all this has happened down here."

New businesses (2015-present, by Bradford Development, Welcome Back Hanceville, and others) in Hanceville's business district on the east side of Hwy. 31 include:

- Bulldog's Country Cook'n - restaurant at 106 Commercial St. (formerly C Street Cafe)
- Hanceville Farmers' Market - at 200 Bangor Ave. Not a business, but a venue for local farmers to do business.
- Just Repurposed - home decor store at 202 Commercial St.
- Love Your Eyes - optometrist/optician at 201 Bangor Ave.
- Marcela's Salon - beauty shop at 108b Commercial St.
- Once Upon a Time Boutique and Collectibles - children's clothing shop at 107 Bangor Ave. NE (Joann Walls Center)
- Outbreak Games - contemporary game shop at 111 Commercial St. (former Blue and Gray Drugs/ Hanceville Herald building)
- QDS Boutique & More - women's clothing shop at 108 Commercial St. (former Romine's Dry Goods building)
- Southern Mix - restaurant/caterer at 107 Bangor Ave NE (Joann Walls Center)
- The Warehouse Barber's Emporium - barber/ recreation/men's shop at 104 Main St. SE
- Too You-Nique - gift/decor shop at 204 Commercial St.

The newcomers join established downtown Hanceville landmarks like Mann's Home and Garden and Hanceville Drug Company.

Making the move to Hanceville

John Wesley became known as the "Warehouse Barber" when he moved into a spot in Bella Faire Day Spa and Salon in Cullman's increasingly prestigious Warehouse District. When the time came to get out on his own, he found his compass pointing south to Hanceville's Main St. (Hwy. 31), where he and wife Nicky Thomas-McCrary opened The Warehouse Barber's Emporium. The new place is still a barber shop, but has been expanded to include outdoor recreation/ survival equipment, vintage stereo equipment, and a collection of gifts and decor with a definite man cave flavor.

Wesley told us, "First off, my wife and I only live about five miles from Hanceville, just in Center Hill. And the commute to work was one of the first things: we thought, 'Oh, it's going to be so much closer!' And, after looking around for a new place there in the Warehouse District, it was hard to find anything that was within my budget, anyway.

"So we came to Hanceville immediately, and talked with our friends at Just Repurposed, and then Nolan Bradford, and (Hanceville Mayor) Kenneth Nail. And Kenneth was really great: he took me around, talked to several people that were renting, and made phone calls for me also, to help try to find a place. And, after shopping around just a little bit, we found right here on 31 for rent, or rent-to-buy. And we were more than happy to come down here."

Wesley and McCrary did their own property renovation, and have been pleased with the results. The barber end of the business has been successful enough to help fund the development of the emporium side and other upcoming projects, including classes on industrial sewing, hand-making Pinterest projects, and barbering-- hair cutting, beard trimming, and tool care.

New kids on the block

Earlier this summer, Clint and Nikolaos McCormick opened Outbreak Games right in the heart of the downtown business district on Commercial St. (See our previous story http://cullmantribune.com/articles/2018/06/15/hanceville-welcomes-new-shop-and-gathering-spot-card-and-board-gamers). Initially focused on fantasy card games, the business has quickly expanded with offerings of contemporary board games and role-playing games, in-house "Dungeons and Dragons" play on Thursdays, "Magic: The Gathering" on Fridays and Saturdays, and a monthly board game group. The brothers are also considering offering "Yu-Gi-Oh!" on Sundays and Mondays, and game tournaments in the future.

Around a month and a half in, Nikolaos McCormick told us, "so far so good: been able to pay the bills, had a lot of people coming in. Got some regulars coming into the store now, so can't complain. Sundays and Mondays are still pretty slow but we think business will pick up soon."

Reflecting on the experience of realizing a childhood dream in downtown Hanceville, he added, "It's hard for me to look around and not smile. Like the first two weeks, you couldn't wipe the smile off my face if you had a rag in your hand."

Apartment living downtown

The business district is also about to become home to loft apartments, as Bradford explained, "Within a couple of months, we'll have four apartments on top of Outbreak Games. It'll be three singles and one double. It'll be very nice."

If you're interested in loft living over the local gaming HQ, you better move fast. Even with months to go until completion, two of the apartments (including the double) are already taken. Don't worry, though; if you miss out, there are more lofts coming to Hanceville. According to Bradford, his long-term plans include apartments in the historic Romine building over QDS Boutique, over Just Repurposed, and possibly other downtown locations.

Long-term plans

"Right now, everybody that's moved in so far has done well," said Bradford. "For the most part, everybody is doing really, really well, and everything's feeding off everything else; which is really the way it's supposed to, in a small town.

"They feed off themselves, once you get one or two in here. I mean that's the goal, especially when you get people living down here and seeing what Hanceville has to offer, I think more and more will come."

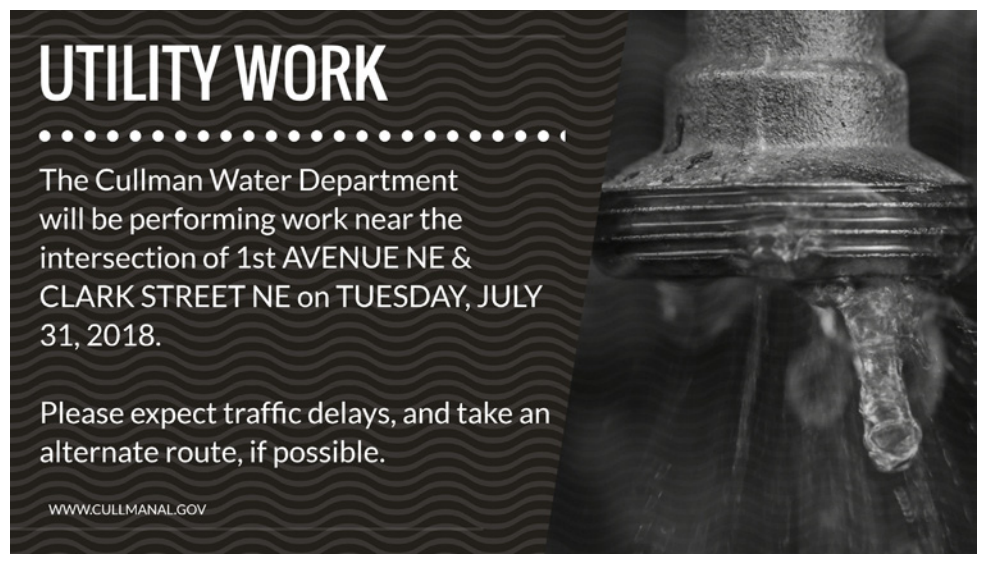

The area east of Hwy. 31 is filling up, so developers are eyeing other places. The first move in that direction will likely be to the west side of the highway.

"I'm kind of proud of what we've accomplished in three years," said Bradford. "I want to see a return on my investment, and I think I will; but see Hanceville prosper at the same time, because driving through and seeing it dead like it was for so many years was just heartbreaking and depressing. And it's not like that anymore, and things are looking up for the better, I hope. And it should just continue to feed off itself and do fine."

Mayor Nail told the Tribune, "I think several different factors are coming together. You've got some people who would invest in downtown. And, you know, I think what's going to hit big--and I know Nolan's just about through with his apartments above the old Blue and Gray Drugs--so I think that's the key to downtown, is getting folks living downtown. So, you know, when folks are living down there, it's definitely going to look more alive and there'll be more businesses downtown, and that's what we're looking for."

Local growth takes local support

Nail cautioned, "I've got a lot of good comments about how people's liking the way downtown's looking . . . But they've got to remember: if you want downtown to succeed, if you want the small businessman to succeed, you've got to do business with him. That's going to be the big push: folks can't stay in business if folks ain't stopping."

MOVIE REVIEW

Mission: Impossible – Fallout

Nick Griffin

"Mission: Impossible – Fallout" is written and directed once again by Christopher McQuarrie, wrier and director of "Mission: Impossible Rogue Nation". Fallout is a direct sequel to Rogue Nation and while the newest installment stands up on its own as an action spectacle, the plot is a direct continuation. Simon Pegg, Ving Rhames, Rebecca Ferguson, Alec Baldwin, Sean Harris and of course Tom Cruise all return for Fallout along with a couple of new additions. Angela Bassett has joined the cast as CIA Director Erika Sloane alongside CIA Operative August Walker, played by Henry Cavill.

Ethan Hunt (Cruise) and his supporting team have been great together since they first started taking shape in 2011's "Mission: Impossible – Ghost Protocol". It's the newcomers that usually come under scrutiny, and in this film, Cavill and Bassett both put together solid performances. Particularly Cavill as August Walker, who has a lager role in the film than Bassett's Sloane. Fergusson also stands out in the film as Ilsa Faust. Since her introduction in Rogue Nation, Faust has been a likeable, yet intimidating presence that I believe makes Fergusson one of the best female action stars in the industry today.

From an action standpoint, the Mission Impossible franchise has been pushing the envelope since Ghost Protocol and Fallout is yet another entry in the franchise with incredibly well-made action sequences. A lot of that credit has to go to Cruise, who famously does as much of the stunt work himself as possible. During filming, Cruise actually broke his ankle while jumping between two buildings. Because of his commitment to the action element of his films, everything is more suspenseful because you can see the main character's face through all of it, and that's not something that happens very often. The commitment to shooting everything in-camera also makes this franchise stand apart from many others. Whether it's Cruise climbing the side of the Burge Khalifa in Dubai, holding onto the side of a plane as it takes off or dangling from a helicopter, you know that its really happening, without digital help.

For those reasons, combined with the performances of the cast, Fallout is virtually flawless from an action standpoint, and that should be this franchise's first priority. Where Fallout drops off a bit is the plot, specifically all the twists and turns and information we are given early on. It's tough to get settled in and familiar with what the characters are after and who the antagonists are because McQuarrie turns the tables on us multiple times. Some of these scenes make for great suspense, surprise and drama but I think there may be one or two too many of them. Things become clearer by the end of the movie of course but there were moments throughout the runtime where I couldn't quite tell or remember what Ethan Hunt was after specifically. It didn't detract from my enjoyment of the film, but I think the two previous installments probably had smoother plots than this one.

Overall, "Mission: Impossible – Fallout" is at least as good as Ghost Protocol or Rogue Nation and many believe it could be the best film in the entire series so far. Fallout is arguably the best action movie of 2018 up to this point and will probably spawn imitators for several years. Go see it.

by, so they can throw some water balloons around and get wet, just have some fun. They've been out here, and it's been this hot all week. I guess water balloons wouldn't be too bad."

James also expressed his satisfaction with the results of the band camp.

"The kids did great; they have really pushed hard this week," said James. "You know we went from 8 to 8, and the kids got here at 7:30 a.m. or earlier. I think the first day, all my section leaders were here at 7 in the morning. They beat me getting here."

Band boosters, family members and churches contributed to the success of the camp, according to James.

"Band camp went really smooth. We had a great staff working with us this week. Our boosters and band parents went way out of their way to help us and make sure that we had everything we needed," James said.

"All the local churches pitched in and fed us, and boosters fed us at supper every night, so the kids never went hungry. It was just amazing the amount of support and help that we had this week. If it wasn't for that, this camp may not have run as smooth as it did."

James left some of the show to be revealed at the band's first halftime performance.

"We have so many surprises in store," said James. "We didn't play the closer yet. I can't give away the surprise. I'm going to try to save it as best I can."

The Pride of Hanceville Marching Band has a big year ahead of them and James is looking forward to it.

"I'm excited to get the school year going, I'm ready for it," James said. "Our first game we play Sumiton Christian on Aug. 24, and I'm looking forward to having a good show and having a good year, a successful year."

CODY MILLER, DESPERATION CHURCH

CULLMAN – August 30, 2013, was a bad night for both Jasper and Cullman as, during the Bearcats' 13-10 win over the Vikings, a fight broke out on the field as the coaching staffs from both sides got involved as well, and that fight spread across the internet and on the news. Recently, the two teams broke bread and had fun together at Sportsman Lake Park before the start of the 2018 regular season.

"It needs to be a clean slate between us." Walker coach Bryan Moore said. "We have new coaches and some new players that haven't played against each other yet, so we hope to make this a nice, competitive, but clean, rivalry. Both communities have learned a lot from what happened, and we just need a clean slate from that. What both teams learned from being there today, is that they're just normal kids."

Fast-forward five years later, both teams got together for lunch at Sportsman Lake, with Desperation Church grilling for them.

"(Today's) event was organized by the coaches of Cullman and Jasper High. Knowing that Desperation Church had campuses in both cities, they contacted us to be a part of the day," Travis Key, Student Pastor at Desperation Church, said. "Coach Plunkett and Coach Moore do such an incredible job investing into their teams and so we knew that we wanted to be a part of the day they had planned." We love that our schools trust us enough to reach out. Our passion is serving our community, and this was a great opportunity to build unity between two competitive teams. We came alongside the coaches to organize food and games for the teams to get the chance to hang out and get to know each other before facing each other in this year's season. - Travis Key, Student Pastor.

From playing volleyball to playing cornhole, to just tossing the football around, both teams had a blast hanging out with each other and just catching up, along with first-year head coaches Matt Plunkett and Bryan Moore.

"It felt awesome having this event for the kids." Cullman coach Matt Plunkett said. "If we had more events like this, high school football would be a lot different. We hope to see a nice, clean rivalry and also, very competitive as well. We have a mutual respect for each other."

Both teams and coaches look to put what happened five years ago behind them and make this a nice, clean, but competitive rivalry from now on.

"We love that our schools trust us enough to reach out. Our passion is serving our community, and this was a great opportunity to build unity between two competitive teams. We came alongside the coaches to organize food and games for the teams to get the chance to hang out and get to know each other before facing each other in this year's season," Key added.

Jasper and Cullman will face off in the season opener on August 23rd, beginning at 7 p.m. at Oliver Woodard Stadium.

Fundraiser supports local woman's battle against cancer

Andrew Cryer
Tribune Correspondent

CULLMAN – A fundraiser was held over the weekend at Goat Island Brewing Co. to benefit Haleigh Moore and her fight against cancer. Moore has been battling a rare form of cancer known as MPNST (malignant peripheral nerve sheath tumor), and treatments have been going well; however, medical costs have continued to rise due to advanced treatment required for her condition.

Although Moore did not have an estimation on the amount raised, she was thankful for every dollar given and everyone in attendance.

"I'm thankful for everything we get, even a dollar is a blessing. I'm really grateful for everyone who came; I really appreciate it."

Funds were raised for Moore's battle through barbeque sales provided by Mad Dog Mike's Bar-B-Que, tips for live entertainment and a donation by Goat Island.

Live entertainment throughout the evening including local musicians Walter Wells, Janessa Bryan and Jason Willingham, as well as Avenue G, donated their time and talent to the cause.

A variety of live entertainment including including Walter Wells, Janessa Bryan and Jason Willingham, as well as Avenue G donated their time in support of the event.

Mad Dog Mike (Mike Hayes) of Mad Dog Mike's Bar-B-Que estimated that through donating 40% of the proceeds earned Saturday evening, he raised $400 for Moore. Hayes is no stranger to fundraising, having done several in the past for other causes. Hayes welcomes any request for a fundraiser and will do one "for any good cause."

Goat Island Brewing Co. was glad to give a hand to a family in need. One of the founders and owners of Goat Island, Brad Glenn, said of the fundraiser and the company's involvement in the event, "We're a community-minded business. We're from Cullman, for Cullman, and for Alabama."

Glenn also noted that Goat Island has held similar benefits in the past and is welcome to help others in the future, "If it's good for us and for everybody involved, we're glad to help. We like helping where we can."
