CULLMAN, Ala. – Agriculture is Cullman County's largest industry, and residents have no shortage of local produce during the growing season. While some places bring local customers to the farms - such as "you pick" berry farms and pumpkin patches during the fall - many growers take the farms to the customers by setting up shop at one of Cullman county's farmers' markets.

The Festhalle Farmers Market is open from April to October, three days a week. Visitors can come on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 7 a.m.-2 p.m. (though produce may run out before then) to shop for local produce, baked goods, preserves and craft items. Selections from this Tuesday included (but were not limited to) cantaloupes, eggplants, beans, grapes, peaches, blackberries, blueberries, tomatoes, cucumbers, zucchini, corn, jams, jellies, loaves of sourdough bread and hand pies. Other items can include soup mixes, granola, wax melts, candles and flowers. (www.facebook.com/cullmanfarmersmarket/)

The Festhalle Farmers' Market is located at 209 First Ave. NE Cullman, AL 35055.

One vendor at the Festhalle, Maw Maw Gypsy's Jams & Jellies, said the two years it's been at the market have been great for business. In fact, this year has seen nearly double the profits from last year. For those who can't usually make it to the Farmers' Market, Maw Maw Gypsy also sells at 2nd Fridays events this summer, Warehouse Discount Groceries, and many other craft festivals around the county.

Another Festhalle vendor, Chasteen Farm, said it has seen good business from market visitors over the last four years and has expanded to the Hanceville Farmers' Market.

The Hanceville Farmers' Market describes itself as a nonprofit, community-based market with an all-volunteer staff to serve the Hanceville community and north Alabama with fresh, locally grown fruits, vegetables, baked goods, arts and crafts." It is open from May to November, every Wednesday and Saturday until noon starting at 8 a.m. on Wednesdays and 7 a.m. on Saturdays. The market's Facebook page (www.facebook.com/hancevillefarmersmarket/) advertises local produce like cabbage, squash, zucchini, tomatoes, potatoes, cucumbers, beans and fresh peaches from Chasteen Farm. It also has a link to vendor applications for those who want to set up a stall during the selling season.

The Hanceville Farmers' Market is located at 200 Bangor Ave., Hanceville, AL 35077.

Opioid Training Institute coming to Cullman July 24

Matt Crouch
Contributor

AUBURN, Ala. – The Opioid Training Institute (OTI), a collaborative program offered by the Auburn University Harrison School of Pharmacy (HSOP) and the Alabama Department of Mental Health (ADMH), will conduct a training session in Cullman Wednesday, July 24. The session is offered at no cost to attendees and is targeted toward leaders in the community who would like to learn more about fighting the opioid epidemic.

The program will be held at the Cullman Civic Center at 510 Fifth St. SW and will run from 8 a.m.-4 p.m. Walk-in attendees will be accepted, but participants are encouraged to pre-register by visiting www.AlabamaOTI.org.

"We know that many factors led to Alabama's unfortunate position as a leader in opioid use in the United States. Accordingly, we know that a variety of strategies are necessary to address the opioid problem in Alabama," said Dr. Brent Fox, associate professor with the Harrison School of Pharmacy. "The Opioid Training Institute will allow us to convene a diverse group of experiences, expertise and perspectives to advance the fight against opioids in our state."

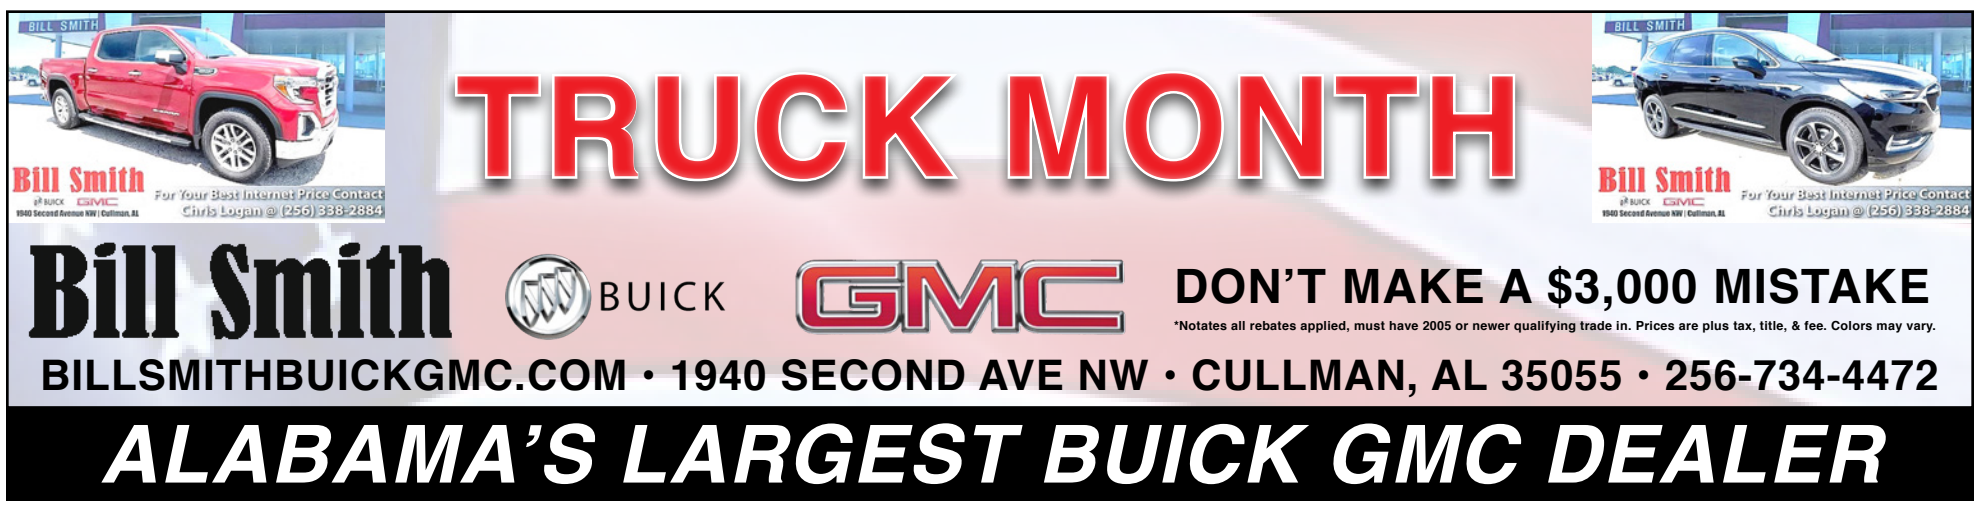

Alabama is one of the most affected states in the country when it comes to the opioid crisis. In 2017, there were 422 overdose deaths involving either prescription or illicit drugs in the state, an average of more than one per day.

To battle such a crisis, it requires a collaborative and interprofessional effort. With that in mind, the HSOP and the ADMH partnered to create the OTI.

The workshop is targeted to community members and leaders including, but not limited to, educators, social workers, guidance counselors, behavioral health specialists, counselors, faith-based community leaders, state and local leaders and law enforcement.

"Due to positions in their communities, community leaders can play a pivotal role in addressing the opioid crisis by using strategies that are relevant to the local community," said Fox. "The OTI will focus on equipping community leaders with practical information they can use in their local communities."

tor of the state, including health care, education, business and local government. Opioids are a class of drugs that includes heroin as well as prescription pain relievers such as oxycodone, hydrocodone, morphine and fentanyl. These drugs work by binding to the body's opioid receptors in the reward center of the brain, diminishing pain as well as producing feelings of relaxation and euphoria.

"Community leaders can expect to expand their knowledge of the opioid crisis. They will also learn how to identify potential situations of drug abuse and the role of opioid reversal agents," said Fox. "While prevention is critical to reversing the opioid trend in Alabama, treatment of those with substance use disorder is just as important. Attendees will learn about treatment options and other resources to support those with substance abuse problems."

Because of the variety of uses, one could come into contact with opioids from street drugs to prescription drugs. The problem is one that affects all socio-economic statuses. It is for this reason that such a broad spectrum of people, from health care to law enforcement to leaders in the community, are needed to fight the problem.

"Opioid use disorder impacts those from the teen years to the older populations in our state. In 2017, more than 47,000 Americans died of opioid overdoses and in Alabama we see the need for education to reach everyone that may have the power to evoke change for our communities," said Dr. Karen Marlowe, assistant dean of the HSOP. "Understanding the risk factors for opioid use disorder and overdose in your school, community, place of worship may help someone to connect with the appropriate resources in their community. We also hope to start more conversations across different professions to share information about programs that already exist in communities across the state."

All sessions are free and pre-registration is preferred. Speakers at the event include those from health care, law enforcement, government agencies and others. For health care professionals, continuing education credit is available.

"Mental health is an important piece in the fight against the opioid crisis and partnering with the Alabama Department of Mental Health allows us to combine our areas of expertise and have a greater reach in the state of Alabama," said Dr. Haley Phillippe, associate clinical professor with the HSOP. "We are very thankful for the opportunity to work with ADMH."

Colony mayor: 'The library will not be closed'

COLONY, Ala. – Eleven days after the Colony Town Council voted not to renew a contract with the North Central Alabama Regional Council of Governments (NARCOG) for a town librarian, Mayor Donnis Leeth announced, "The library will not be closed," at a work session before the council meeting Tuesday evening.

According to the mayor, the nonrenewal of the contract on June 28 stemmed from a misunderstanding over the financial terms of the contract as presented in paperwork sent to the Town. After meeting with NARCOG officials last week, Leeth said, he was told the Town would not have to pay the $1,000 fee mentioned in the renewal notice.

The library is open this week.

In previous discussions before the financial issue had been clarified, council members had voiced concerns about whether current programs at the library were worth the expense.

Tuesday, Town Librarian Brenda Johnson, wife of Councilman Curtis Johnson, was present at the meeting to deal with questions about programs, including a free visit by McWane Science Center staff, sponsored by the Cullman County Public Library System, which the librarian declined.

Brenda Johnson told the council she had talked with the mayor and Councilwoman Ethel Alexander, who headed up Colony's summer camp, but could not get the Town to commit to a date.

Said Johnson, "We can't

Work is progressing on the Dollar General that will be located along Alabama Highway 91 just east of Colony.

As the council took up the issue of library programs, Curtis Johnson stated, "The library can be better."

He also said that the library was working on improvements.

Brenda Johnson talked about ideas for future programs, including after-school activities for students, and assured the council, "We're going to make the library work for our community."

The council discussed a plan put forth by a local resident to open Colony's Community Center for children's activities this summer.

Discussion ended with Town Clerk Patricia Ponder noting that the council voted to close the center several months ago for repairs that have not yet been done, that the Community Center's health certificate had been suspended pending a major overhaul of its kitchen, and that the facility currently lacks liability insurance.

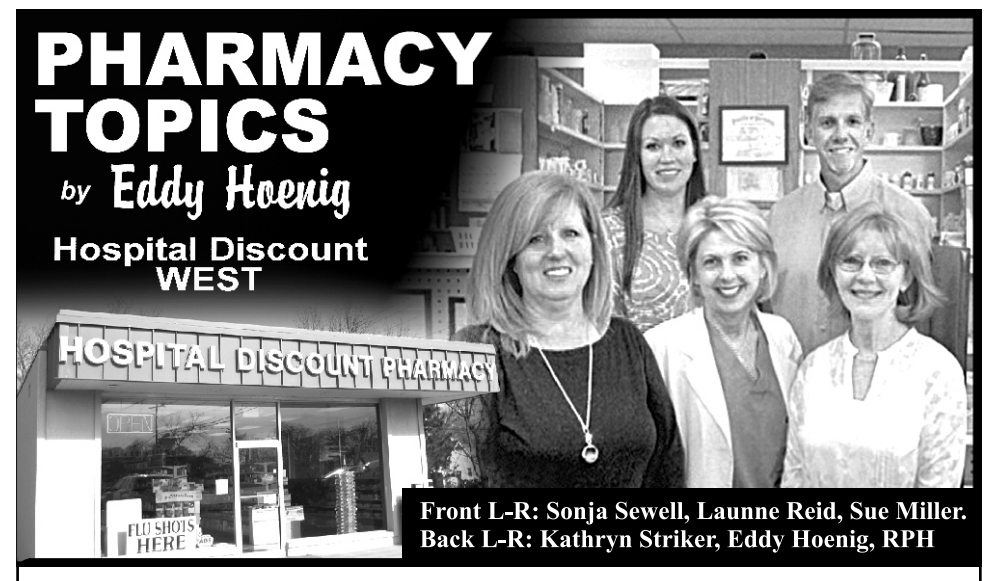

Community resident Kim Carwell came to talk to the council about the possibility of starting an after-school mentoring program at the Educational Complex or other town facility.

Council members showed interest and indicated they would talk with Carwell more about her ideas.

Two community residents, former Town Clerk Gwendolyn Purifoy and former Councilwoman Jamelle Dimbo, who serve as poll workers during elections, spoke up during the public comment portion of the agenda to voice opposition to the council's previous decision to move the town's polling place from town hall to the Educational Complex.

Leeth said work is progressing on the Dollar General just east of town, though no estimates of completion and opening date have been given. He also noted complaints from a few area residents about the location.

The Colony Town Council meets at 6 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at Colony Town Hall, with work session at 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Honey and over-the-counter remedies should be a patient's first point of call to treat a cough, not antibiotics, says England's The National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) in a new draft guidance. In most cases, acute coughs are caused by a cold or flu virus, or bronchitis and last around three weeks. Honey and cough medicines containing pelargonium, guaifenesin or dextromethorphan have some evidence of benefit for the relief of cough symptoms.

Up to half of people with Alzheimer's disease (AD) use a psychotropic drug and one in five uses two or more psychotropics concomitantly, according to a new study. Psychotropic drug use was more common among persons with Alzheimer's disease already five years before the diagnosis and the difference to comparison persons without AD increased at the time of diagnosis. Four years after the diagnosis, psychotropic drug use was three times more common in persons with AD than in comparison persons. Of psychotropic drugs, the use of antipsychotics was almost eight times more common among persons with Alzheimer's disease than among comparison persons. The use of at least two psychotropics concomitantly was three times more common among persons with Alzheimer's disease.

Debate over golf cart use leads to heated Vinemont council meeting

VINEMONT, Ala. – Emotions ran high Tuesday evening at the South Vinemont Town Council meeting as community members debated recent allegations regarding a teen driving a golf cart on the streets and on the town's walking trails. The family of the teen questioned Mayor Raginald Dodson's alleged interactions with the young driver, while other community members defended their written complaints regarding the teen.

Sherrill Street resident Leann Evans addressed the council about her son and his use of the golf cart, alleging, "On June 25, my son, a 15-year-old boy, was on a golf cart driving from our street over towards the Boy Scout (community) building and this is the third time this had happened. At the time, I didn't really realize it was the mayor that was doing this until it was brought to my attention. Mr. Dodson proceeds to get into his truck, chases him in his truck (my son's on a golf cart) back up through and down Federer Street, yelling at him to pull over. My son pulls over. He (Dodson) gets out of the truck and yells at my son to the extent where three hired lawncare men had to come over and get him off of my son. My son gets back on the golf cart. He (Dodson) wants to know his name and where he lives. My son, not knowing who he is, would not give him that information, thank goodness. He drives down to the end of Federer and heads back up towards the laundromat and he proceeds to follow him there and tells him that he's got a full tank of gas and he can do that all day long. My son is able to get away, comes back down the hill and turns on Federer; there's a little pull through. The lawn mower men direct him in there and when he (Dodson) finally gets further enough up the street, the lawn mower tell him he can go now."

She continued, "He then proceeds to come home and he comes in and tells us. I proceed to go at that time to Mr. Dodson's house. I pull up to the end of his street. I do not go onto his property. He invites me onto his property. I go up. I confront him. He denied no allegations. A comment that he made is that 'he's the mayor, he can do whatever he wants.' His complaint is that the golf carts should not be on or in the park there at the Boy Scout (building). The signs that are posted are skateboards, roller blades, bicycles and ATVs. A golf cart is not an all-terrain vehicle. He said he had plenty of money and would have those signs changed.

"He is an official to represent the community. We are not here to serve him. I told him straight forth I was coming here first to let the whole town know first. What I should have done is contacted law enforcement for how he attacked my son, chasing him in a vehicle. I hope you will take this into advisement."

Town Attorney Roy Williams responded on behalf of the Town, saying, "I am not going to respond to your statements as to what the mayor said. I wasn't there. I am going to respond to what the rules are and the laws are in this town. A golf cart is illegal to be on the city street. State law says they can't drive it, but he's doing that, apparently with your permission. Secondly, the mayor has the obligation to enforce the ordinances of the Town of South Vinemont. In the past five weeks, the mayor has gotten several verbal complaints about your son nearly running over them in the park and two written complaints. That's the reason he's been policing the park. That's his job."

Williams went on to explain the Town's ordinance, passed Feb. 3, 2013, specifically addresses the use of motor-driven vehicles in certain public areas within the town of South Vinemont. The ordinance applies to the walking trails and other town properties.

Evans argued that a golf cart is not a motorized vehicle and that any complaints made against her son were simply "hearsay."

Williams explained, "Your son, according to you, was talked to three times," with Evans interrupting, "No, no, no, no! He was not talked to, he was harassed. That's my interpretation. I spoke with him. He harassed me!"

Williams asked, "You weren't with your son the three times he was harassed. I will use your word, 'hearsay.' But you personally weren't there? Once your son was told not to drive it in the park, every time he did that after that, that is a criminal offense."

Evans was presented a copy of the town ordinance and the state law regarding the use of golf carts but maintained her son had done nothing wrong and argued the definition of ATVs.

"He is on notice that if he speaks to my son again that I will file harassment charges!" Evans said of Dodson.

Cullman County Sheriff's Office Lt. Ryan Fortenberry was also in attendance at Tuesday's meeting to try and explain the laws and ordinances and how or who can enforce them.

He explained, "We understand ATVs and most of the time the sheriff's office does not get involved; we use discretion. When we start to receive complaints in an area, any dirt bike, golf cart, it doesn't matter who the driver is, you are subject to get ticketed and the vehicle to be towed and you are driving an illegal vehicle in the roadway."

Fortenberry explained that the mayor of any town has the right to identify a person who is trespassing or breaking ordinances of that town.

Evans said, "He (her son) did nothing malicious to anyone. There was no one in that park."

Resident Brenda Shellhouse spoke up, saying, "Excuse me; I was the one he almost ran over, looking at his phone driving around there at 25 miles an hour on the trail. We had to shout at him to get his attention to keep him from running over us."

The area in question is not technically a park. The walking trails in South Vinemont were created to give walkers and runners a place to exercise, but were not intended to be a multi-use park. The area is for foot traffic.

CHRISTY PERRY/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

Resident Leann Evans speaks to the Vinemont Town Council Tuesday evening.

Williams said, "When they get the complaints, they address it. They try to leave people alone and let people live their lives. When a child, your son, is complained about, then they do it. One of the reasons that he was trying to get ahold of your son was your son took a sign. It's laying right out there."

Evans protested, "He was bringing it up here! He was bringing it up here!"

Williams replied, "Well, he was going toward your house with it."

The town council voted to go into an executive session after the argument ceased to discuss the situation and the role Dodson played. After approximately 15 minutes, the council reconvened and the meeting was adjourned.

Evans promised to be at the next town council meeting scheduled for Aug. 13 at 6 p.m., saying, "I will hold that man accountable. I will hold you five accountable because if Mr. Dodson thinks a 15-year-old boy cutting through in a park on a week's basis... I didn't see you walking this week! I'm just letting you know I am concerned that our elected official is conducting himself in a violent attacking manner. I am an educator. If I spoke to a kid the way he did in my profession, I would be brought before the board. I am bringing him before the board."

Williams explained to Evans, "If you see an ordinance that you think needs to be changed, then you can write the council and ask them to consider changing the ordinance, but breaking the ordinance is not the way to handle it."

Good Hope moves forward with land purchase for park expansion

GOOD HOPE, Ala. – The Good Hope City Council Monday night voted to move forward with the purchase of the 33.68-acre Dvorak property adjacent to Municipal Park. The expansion, which will connect the park to Deer Run subdivision along County Road 437, will allow the city to offer a variety of new recreational amenities to the community.

The City purchased the land for the appraised value of $220,000 and is in the process of selling a 3-acre plot of land along County Road 437 for $450,000. With a current note balance of $277,870, the City needed to pay $47,870 to complete the Dvorak property purchase.

The council approved the payment of the $47,870, with half the funds coming from the City's cash reserve and half from alcohol sales tax.

Mayor Jerry Bartlett and the council members are excited about all the possibilities that come with the purchase of the new recreation area.

Bartlett said, "We know we want at least 3.1 miles of trails back there because we want to host cross country events because that's got really popular.

"We want it to be a multi-trail use, anything but motors. Bicycles, hikers, walkers, cross-country-that's it, just no motorized stuff. We would like to have a centrally-located, nice pavilion with bathrooms. From there it would just be up to the council how we grow it from there, and everyone has their wish list. (Some) are talking about a splash pad, but who knows? The sky could be the limit."

He continued, "We would definitely want to expand our playground and then eventually we would like to maybe have more pavilions we could rent for families."

Rep. Corey Harbison added, "Dale Bryant with St. John (& Associates) engineers is right now working on a proposal for the council to accept for them to help design for future phases of the park.

"With the cross country trails and stuff, we've talked to the schools and that's one thing with that investment, if they bring in tournaments, you can bring hundreds of people in with that tournament and that would generate money to stimulate the local economy. We've talked to several folks about grants. The City will want to do it in phases because you can only get so much in grant money at a time."

It's certainly an honor to be chosen to coach in the game. There are so many great coaches in this state and to be asked is a thrill. When you're recognized by your peers and guys in your profession, obviously that's one of the highest honors you can have in the coaching world."
