Local cigar box guitar builder's instruments headed to National Blues Museum

SIMCOE, Ala. – Keith Crumbley has busy hands. He is one of those people who has to be fixing, building, cleaning, doing something all the time. At Cullman City Primary School, where he works as a custodian, students and teachers see his practical handiwork, but when he gets home to his Simcoe workshop, he becomes a true artist. On his bench he crafts high-end examples of the cigar box guitar (CBG), an old folk instrument that has become a hot trend in recent years.

Homemade stringed instruments with cigar box bodies go back to the Civil War era, and the guitar version was popular with early folk and blues players who could not afford to buy commercially made instruments, especially during the Great Depression of the 1930s. In recent years, the CBG has enjoyed a revival, showing up everywhere from front porches and open mic nights at local coffee houses, to major pro stage setups with musicians like Billy Gibbons of ZZ Top, Ed King of Lynyrd Skynyrd and Paul McCartney.

Crumbley is currently building his 86th CBG, lovingly known as a Crumbley Caster, and said of the nearly five years he has spent pursuing the craft: "It's just a pastime. It's something to do, you know, when you're sitting there at the house, instead of watching TV or something, and you just want to do something with your hands. I've always worked with my hands. My dad always taught me, 'You can't do nothing without your hands; you've got to have your hands.'

"It's just a hobby, a good joy to make something and actually see what you've created- not actually see it but hear it. You know the feeling: once you build it, you get right down to the end, you want- 'I've got to get this thing put together. I want to see how it sounds.'"

Crumbley enjoys putting in the time to use traditional hands-on building methods when he works on his instruments.

"Since I've been doing it, I've bought different saws and different tools and stuff to help, but I still mostly make them by hand," he said. "I like making all my necks and stuff by hand. I just like doing it all from scratch, doing it by hand. I could buy the necks, but it would be just like a kit guitar or something, you know.

"I'll sand everything down, make sure it's smooth and level. Then I'll cut my fret slots in it- I've got me a little mitre box- and then I'll cut my fret slots in it, and then I'll glue it to the neck. Then, before I ever finish the neck, I'll make sure everything's flat and level again, then I'll round off my neck and do whatever I need to do to it, you know. The last thing I do is put my frets on."

Called up to the big leagues

Crumbley's instruments have found their way across the country, and recently two of his instruments got invited to a gig at none other than the National Blues Museum in St. Louis, Missouri for a fall exhibit starting in two weeks.

Michael Breedlove, CBG builder, owner of parts supplier MGB Guitars and exhibit sponsor, posted on the museum's Facebook page: "MGB and Friends are pleased to announce the opening of a new exhibit of cigar box guitars. Working with the National Blues Museum in St Louis this display will include 60 handmade instruments. Thirty artists from all over have collaborated and created a display of CBGs that will provide a visual representation of various styles. Grand opening of the exhibit is scheduled for September 13th at the National Blues Museum in St. Louis. Several artists will be at museum on the 13th and the 14th to discuss the art of building a cigar box guitar. The display will also include a pick and play interactive area where visitors can touch and play 10 different instruments."

One of Crumbley's CBGs will be in the display, and the other will be among the hands-on instruments. Once the exhibit closes, the instruments may go on a cross-country exhibit tour before returning to their owners.

Asked what it meant to him to see his work going to a national exhibit, Crumbley said: "(I'm excited, very excited. I mean, it's something like me and these other guys talk about. Myself, I never » PAGE 5

William Jackson Fite

WINSTON COUNTY, Ala. – William Jackson Fite, 23, of Decatur, the driver of the boat from which Kelsey Starling, 26, of Troy disappeared during a collision July 4, 2019 on Smith Lake, and who was charged with boating under the influence in the case, pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge this week.

At the time of his arrest following the two-boat collision, Fite was accused of being under the influence of a "substance which impairs the mental or physical faculties of the person to a degree which renders the person incapable of safely driving."

The incident was the defendant's first offense. Under the terms of his plea deal, Fite received two years of unsupervised probation and agreed to attend a court referral program and pay $2,100 in fines plus a $70 bail bond fee.

Last week, Nick Bowling Suggs, 50, and Jodi Wallace Suggs, 50, both of Decatur, who were in the other boat involved in the collision, were each indicted in Winston » PAGE 4

ARAB, Ala. – Things are about to get sweet in Arab. The inaugural SugarFest is coming up this Saturday, Aug. 31 at Arab City Park.

City of Arab Economic Development Director Melissa Cook shared, "While it may appear to be a City event, it is really City-supported. There is a steering committee comprised of 15 citizens from industry to insurance and all things in between who came together to make SugarFest a reality.

"It began with the idea of doing a fireworks show. We discussed the 4th of July, but there were others in our area that already did large shows and we didn't want to compete. So, we looked to another significant date and decided on sending the summer out with a bang (literally). After deciding on a date, we started to talk about other events that we could piggyback on the day. It grew and grew and here we are."

Cook said the hope is to make SugarFest an annual event.

CORRECTION

In The Tribune's Aug. 27, 2019 article, "Understanding Alabama's service dog laws," we stated that service animals and service animals in training are required to wear harnesses or leashes with visible lettering identifying them as service animals. That requirement actually applies only to animals in training and NOT to animals in active service. Visible identification of an active service dog could, in fact, violate the Americans with Disabilities Act. We regret the error.

Vitamin D deficiency in expectant mothers during pregnancy has a negative effect on the social development and motor skills of pre-school age children, a new study in the British Journal of Nutrition reports.

A recent study published in the Journal of Clinical Lipidology looked at the value of measuring blood levels of EPA and DHA omega-3 fatty acids to assess an individual's risk for developing certain diseases. The results showed that the risk for death from any cause was reduced by about 33 percent comparing the lowest Omega-3 Index participants to the highest. A higher Omega-3 Index was associated with a lower risk for total CVD events, total coronary heart disease events and total strokes. The category most strongly associated with the Omega-3 Index was non-CV, non-cancer deaths – deaths from all other causes. This would suggest a wide spectrum of beneficial actions of EPA and DHA in the body that are not just linked with one pathological process (like plaque buildup in arteries).

A new study reveals that acetaminophen use and overdosing rise in cold/flu season in the United States, primarily due to increased use of over-the-counter combination medications treating upper respiratory symptoms. The findings, which are published in the British Journal of Clinical Pharmacology, indicate that individuals should take special care to follow labeled dosing directions for acetaminophen-containing products. Acetaminophen is an active ingredient present in hundreds of over-the-counter and prescription medications indicated for pain and fever, including medications used to treat symptoms associated with colds, flu, allergies and sleeplessness. While safe when taken as directed, taking too much acetaminophen can harm the liver.

SugarFest (from Front)

SugarFest, but we plan to make it an annual event. I am sure we will learn lots from the day, but that is typical of any event. If you're not making it better, it isn't worth doing. We expect to make a day you will be talking about for weeks."

The event is free to attend. There will be food trucks and vendors on hand selling food. Saturday's festivities will begin at 7:30 a.m. with the Sugar Rush 5K sponsored by Citizens Bank and Trust.

Cook shared, "We have a certified course that begins at the entrance to Arab City Park."

There are eight different age divisions. The fee to enter is $25.

Beginning at 8 a.m. will be the Sweet Rides Car Show, sponsored by Austin Hinds Motors. It concludes at 2 p.m. with awards for "Best in Show" for each car type/age group. The fee to enter the show is $10.

The Miss SugarFest Beauty Pageant will start at 9 a.m. There are six different age groups, from birth to 12 years. The Arts and Crafts Marketplace with food trucks is scheduled from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. with approximately 62 arts and crafts vendors for the juried show and about 15 food trucks offering everything from root beer floats to delicious barbecue.

Also at 10 a.m., the Sweetie Pies Children's Area, sponsored by Desperation Church, will open. Organizers promise lots of games, rides and events for kids of all ages. There will be a petting zoo complete with miniature animals to cuddle and a unicorn available for pictures for $5.

Live music will be going on throughout the day, and guests can peruse the Dukes of Hazard rolling museum, complete with the General Lee, Boss Hogg and Daisy Duke replica cars.

And football fans, organizers have not forgotten you.

"We do understand that there are football games on all day," said Cook, "so we have a lounge featuring two 65-inch TVs with seating and misting fans to beat the heat."

At approximately 9 p.m., the Fireworks Spectacular, sponsored by Whitaker Contracting, will light up the sky.

"East Coast Pyrotechnics, out of North Carolina, is our provider. They are the choice for the Atlanta Braves, so we are so fortunate that we were able to secure them," said Cook.

Immediately following the fireworks, the day will conclude with Movies in the Park, which will feature the film "I Can Only Imagine."

"These events and so much more make an entire day of fun," smiled Cook. "The entire event is presented by Jerry Damson Ford. We are so grateful to all of our sponsors who are making this event possible. Come out and join us. We look forward to a Sweet Adventure!"

SugarFest will take place at Arab City Park, 844 Shoal Creek Trail NE, Arab, AL 35016. From Cullman, take Alabama Highway 69 North to Arab, turn left at Main Street and turn right on Shoal Creek Trail NE.

County on one charge of criminally negligent homicide, a class A misdemeanor which could carry a sentence of up to one year in prison.

Each surrendered and was released the same day on a $3,000 surety bond from a Birmingham bail bond service.

Both indictments read: "....did with criminal negligence cause the death of another person, Kelsey Starling by striking the vessel she was aboard causing her to be thrown there from..."

The Alabama Law Enforcement Agency (ALEA), which is handling the investigation into the fatal crash, said officials from the 25th Circuit District Attorney's Office in Winston County will prosecute the cases.

Cullman attorney Jason Knight, who is representing the couple, issued the following statement on the day following the arrests:

It was widely reported yesterday that Mr. and Ms. Nick Suggs were arrested, jailed and behind bars in connection with new charges stemming from the tragic boating accident that occurred on the evening of July 4th on Rock Creek at Smith Lake. Nothing could have been further from the truth.

We were informed that there were two misdemeanor warrants against the Suggs in Winston County, Alabama. Through the cooperation of the Winston County Sheriff's office, the Suggs turned themselves in at a designated time. They were booked in on the misdemeanor warrants, immediately bonded out and were released. They were treated with the utmost respect and professionalism by the Winston County Sheriff's Office and jail personnel.

Mr. and Ms. Suggs are as fine a class of people as you would ever meet. They are universally loved and respected in their personal and business communities.

They have both cooperated with the investigation of this boating accident since day one. It is confounding to us that the Alabama Marine Police Officer has now filed charges against the driver of BOTH the vessels involved in this wreck. It makes zero sense. At any rate, the Suggs vehemently deny the misdemeanor charges against them and look forward to being vindicated and put an end to this nightmare. They also want to extend their heartfelt thoughts and prayers to all the families affected by this tragic accident and in particular to Kelsey and the Starling family.

Starling was a passenger in a 2012 Mastercraft wakeboard boat involved in a two-boat crash in the Rock Creek area of Smith Lake at approximately 10 p.m. July 4. Efforts to recover Starling's body have so far been unsuccessful.

Starling was a speech language pathologist at Tuggle Elementary School in Birmingham.

CCSO warns of phone scam

Wendy Sack
wendy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – The Cullman County Sheriff's Office (CCSO) is warning citizens about a phone scam. According to the CCSO, scammers are calling citizens claiming to be with the sheriff's office.

"The scammer will claim the potential victim owes a fine from missing jury duty or from an outstanding warrant.

"The scammer will tell the victim that they can clear up these fines or this warrant over the phone by paying them X amount via credit card, PayPal or other payment method," said a media release from the CCSO.

"This is a SCAM! The CCSO will never call asking for money over the phone as we do not administer fines."

"We just want to try and get the word out to citizens that we will never call you to solicit money over the phone," said Cullman County Sheriff Matt Gentry. "These scammers could be in any part of the world and we don't want people to give their hard-earned money to these lazy predators."

The CCSO advises citizens to warn family members, especially senior citizens.

Museum (from Front)

dreamed of this ever getting this far. You know, I was thinking: build, you know, 15, 20, 30 of them and go on and do something else. But to me, to be able to be in the (National Blues Museum), to have some of my builds in the blues museum, it's very exciting.

"It's like an accomplishment- that I did accomplish something by doing this. It wasn't that I was wanting to, but I did- and the fact that people are recognizing this. You know, this is something that's not going to die off. This is something we're trying to bring back to the public."

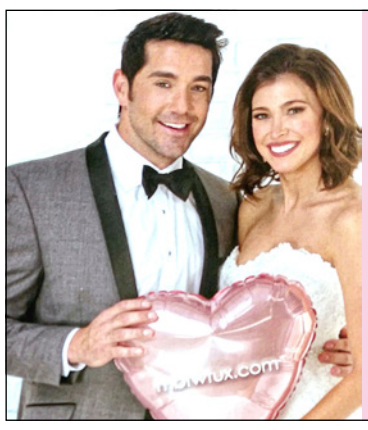

Crumbley continued, "For me to have this in a museum, for other people to come and look, and actually pick up one of my instruments, pick it up and play it, and see how it sounds, it's exciting. I'm thrilled. There's not really many words you can say. It's just something that's unbelievable to me. I still have to pinch myself every once in a while.

"I know there's a lot of great builders out there in the world. Don't get me wrong. I'm not the best builder. But there's a lot of great guys out there that build a lot of good instruments, good-sounding instruments," he smiled. "And all of us together just need to keep this thing going, you know, so it's not a lost art, because so many things that happened years ago is getting lost in this new generation, this new culture. This is something we need to keep going, and need people to see, and see how it was built, how it was made and how it sounded."
