Stony Lonesome OHV cancels Saturday's scheduled night ride

BREMEN, Ala. – The Night Ride scheduled at Stony Lonesome OHV Park for Saturday March 28 has been canceled. Cullman County Parks and Recreation Director Doug Davenport said Wednesday afternoon, "We called it off. We are going to cancel it."

The delay in the cancelation had caused some concern regarding guidelines put in place by the state to limit the spread of Covid-19.

Davenport explained, "It's not a special event, it's just extended hours. The same thing that happens at 8 or 10 in the morning is at 7 at night but since more people come to that from out of the county or out of the state, we did call that off." He added, "We are open in the parks for people to come walk in the parks like at Sportsman's Park and we have all the parks set up where it's a walk up window where nobody is coming inside and we have provided our staff with masks and gloves. We are trying to take all precautions, but we don't know at what point they might say to lock down for so many days. We are just playing it by ear right now."

Cullman County Commissioner Garry Marchman voiced concern prior to the Night Ride at the OHV being canceled Wednesday afternoon, "It was my understanding that all the park activities had been canceled." Marchman said, "The smart thing to do would be to cancel it and put it off to June or sometime."

Northbrook Baptist Church goes online, offers to help small churches record videos

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – As churches respond to the Coronavirus pandemic by transitioning to online services and Bible studies, Northbrook Baptist Church is hoping to help smaller churches continue to minister. Pastor Keith Warden explained,

"There's a lot of smaller churches, and then there's also just guys that are bivocational, and so they don't have the manpower and stuff. I know some churches are not normally doing video stuff every week or being online every week, and so this kind of puts them behind the eight ball with everything that's going on right now. So that was just a way of really, more than anything else, just saying, 'Hey, if there's any way that we can help you or serve you, whether it's video your sermon or some kind of message that you'd just like to put online for your congregation, we've got the equipment to do that, we've got some staff that can help us do that."

Warden continued, "Man, I'll tell you what: we're all just trying to figure out ways that we can serve and help each other in really unusual times. So that's just something we want to do, if we can. I don't know » PAGE 8

Despite some Courthouse closures, courts remain open for business

Alabama's judges and lawyers work together to ensure public's access to justice

Alabama State Bar
Contributor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – While many courthouses throughout the state are shuttering as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Courts in Alabama remain open for business. Leaders of the Alabama State Bar are working in close coordination with the Supreme Court of Alabama, the Administrative Office of Courts, and the Circuit and District Judges Associations. Access to justice and the court system in Alabama has not changed as a result of the closure of courthouse facilities. Although the public has been prohibited from coming to the courtrooms, the business of the judicial branch continues in a variety of innovative ways.

Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Parker has assembled appropriate staff members to implement systems that keep the public safe while also allowing judges continue to keep the legal process working for the people of Alabama.

"Judges, court personnel and lawyers continue to work on behalf of the public we serve to move cases in an efficient and safe manner by phone and videoconferencing technology," Parker said.

Alabama State Bar President Christy Crow, in partnership with judicial leaders in Alabama, sent a letter to Governor Kay Ivey on Tuesday, writing in part, "The ability of the courts to continue to provide justice during these uncertain and trying times is essential to public safety and the welfare of Alabama citizens and businesses."

"We are working diligently to ensure lawyers in Alabama can continue to provide necessary legal services to Alabamians," added Crow.

Judge Teresa T. Pulliam, President of the Alabama Circuit Judges Association, and Judge Carole Medley, President of the Alabama District Judges Association wrote in a joint statement, "Please know that providing access to justice and the protection of the legal profession will continue to be our priority.

"We will continue to discharge our duty to the public we serve by being accessible by phone, email, teleconference and video conference.

"In the criminal courts, judges, district attorneys and lawyers are working together to ensure the safety of victims and the public while guaranteeing and protecting the constitutional rights of the accused.

"Emergency hearings are being handled on a case by case basis and in person when needed, as set out by the Supreme Court."

For continuing and updated information about the courts please visit the Alabama State Bar's COVID-19 webpage at www.alabar.org/covid19 or the Unified Judicial System's website, www.alacourt.gov.

Where do local teams stand during the hiatus?

Sammy Confer
sammy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – With schools shut down across the state, high school sports are in the middle of an unprecedented hiatus. As of now, schools are expected to resume normal operations before the end of the spring semester and that means a return for local sports could be on the horizon as well. In case play resumes later this spring, here is where the local softball teams stand with part of the season in the books.

Addison Bulldogs (0-7)
Addison has gotten off to a bit of a slow start this season, dropping its first seven games of 2020 although three of the Lady Bulldogs' losses have been by five runs or fewer. They have only one senior on their team in Kaylee Brummett and have looked to some very young talent to start this year's campaign. Addison will look to bounce back and get things going in the right direction when and if the season does get back underway.

Cold Springs Eagles (3-3)
Due to the Lady Eagles basketball team's run to Birmingham, Cold Springs didn't get its softball season started until the end of February. The Lady Eagles went 1-2 in the Umpires' Tournament at Heritage Park and now hold a record of 3-3 after defeating Fairview in a shootout on the 12th, 15-10. They have a mixture of upperclassmen and young talent on this year's team and Cold Springs will try to keep the bats going when and if we get the green light to resume play.

Cullman Bearcats (6-11)
Cullman's season has been up-and-down up to this point with small winning streaks being brolen up with a pair of losing streaks. The Lady Bearcats' last game was on the 12th at Hartselle and they fell to the Lady Tigers to bring their record to 6-11 so far for the season. A few upperclassmen are leading the way for the young talent on this team and they'll aim for a little more consistency the rest of the way if the season resumes.

Fairview Aggies (7-7)
Fairview's season got started in late February due to the girls' postseason run in basketball and the Lady Aggies got off to a strong start, going 4-1 and improving 7-3 before dropping four in a row, including losses to Good Hope and West Point, to fall to 7-7 on the year. Fairview has a good mixture of upperclassmen and young talent on this year's team led by Katie Ball, Allyson Wooten, and Alyssa Wooten, to name a few and the Lady Aggies will look for a strong finish if they get a chance to return to the diamond later this spring.

Good Hope Raiders (10-6)
After losing some key seniors from a stellar team last season, Good Hope still had some big names coming back in 2020. The Lady Raiders looked to pick up where they left off in 2019 and they got off to a red-hot start to the season, going 7-2 in their first nine games. Despite losing four in a row, Good Hope righted the ship, winning its next three games to bring its record at 10-6 so far in 2020. Jacqueline Hays, Sidnie English, Abby Herring and Abby Neighbors are four seniors who will look to continue leading a determined Lady Raider team deep into the postseason once again if the season gets back underway.

MARTHA NEEDHAM/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

Hanceville Bulldogs (3-9)
Hanceville looked to take that next big step to start out 2020, but got off to a slow start, dropping five of their first six games but the Lady Bulldogs started to get things back on track after wins over J.B. Pennington and Vinemont put them at 3-9 on the season. Hanceville has a very young team this year, led by junior Cassidy Campbell, and they will look to continue improving when and if they are allowed to resume play.

Holly Pond Broncos (4-4-1)
Holly Pond looked to bounce back after a 9-16 season in 2019 but postponements and cancellations of games didn't give the Lady Broncos much of a chance to get its season started the right way. They did pick up wins over Cold Springs, Oneonta and Fairview before collecting an area win over Vinemont to bring their record to 4-4-1 on the season so far. Along with some upperclassmen, Holly Pond has looked to some of its young talent to help out this year and will look to continue to do that if they get back to playing in 2020.

Meek Tigers (3-6)
Meek wanted to make another deep postseason run like they did in 2019, but a pair of its games got postponed due to bad weather to start the season. The Lady Tigers started out 2020 with a 3-2 mark before dropping four in a row and are now 3-6 so far on the year. Led by some key players in Abby Phillips, Savannah Smith and Jessie Woodard to name a few, Meek will look to get back on the right track when and if they get back on the field.

Vinemont Eagles (0-8)
Vinemont has gotten off to a rocky start so far in 2020, dropping its first eight games of the season. Six of those losses have been decided by four runs or fewer. Kanasta Daniel and Mackenzie Lawrence are the only upperclassmen on a very young Lady Eagles squad and they will look to finish the year strong if they are given the green light to get back to playing.

West Point Warriors (9-9-2)
West Point is coming off a big 2019 season and they got off to another strong start this year, going 5-1 in its first six games. After cooling off in early March, the Lady Warriors went 3-1 in their next four games and are now 9-9-2 so far this season. Led by Lexi Shadix, Molly Pendley, Gracie Thompson and Carlie Wilkins to name a few, and a good collection of young players, West Point will try to get hot again when the season gets back underway.

West Point's Amanda Dyer signs with Judson

Nick Griffin
nick@cullmantribune.com

WEST POINT, Ala. – Monday was an exciting day for West Point's Amanda Dyer. The senior goalkeeper signed a scholarship to continue her playing career with the Judson College Eagles next year.

Lady Warriors Head Coach Rob Whitesell is proud of his standout keeper for earning this opportunity and is excited to see the effect her accomplishment could have on the rest of the program.

"Amanda is a great all-around athlete and did a super job for us on defense as a goalkeeper this year.

"It is great to see her have the opportunity to continue with soccer at the collegiate level," Whitesell said.

"I'm proud for the whole soccer program at West Point.

"We have come a long way and I hope many more athletes will see the benefits of their hard work."

Dyer has already become familiar with several of the people she'll be spending time with at Judson and is looking forward to getting started with a new team.

"A friend of mine was planning to go to Judson and asked me to go with her to their tour and I went and I liked how small the classes were and the people there were very nice and I have talked to some of their soccer girls over social media and they seem like a really good team."

Amanda is excited to begin her college career but admits that she will miss her teammates and coaches at West Point that have helped prepare her for this new challenge.

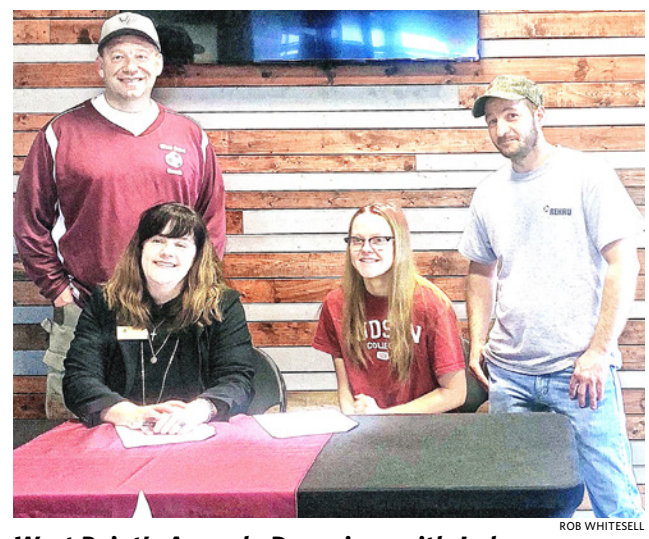

"I think I will most miss my team and I would say Coach (Rob) Whitesell has prepared me for what playing in college has in store."

Whitesell touched on the impact Dyer's career can have on those around the soccer program at West Point and she is proud to be an example for future Warrior soccer players.

"It actually means a lot," Dyer said.

"I love my team and it makes me happy to know that all of our hard work can pay off.

"They can see if they stick with soccer it could take them to the next level."

2020 Tokyo Olympics postponed due to COVID-19; Auburn swimmers Grassi and Meynen qualify

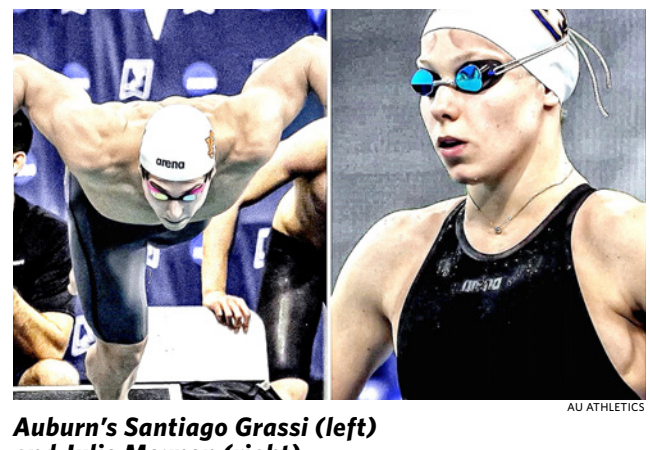

AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – For Santiago Grassi, Julie Meynen and the other Olympic hopefuls from Auburn, they will have to wait to compete in the Tokyo Olympics. The IOC and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe announced Tuesday that the 2020 games will be postponed to 2021.

Abe and IOC President Thomas Bach released a joint statement announcing the postponement:
In the present circumstances and based on the information provided by the WHO today, the IOC President and the Prime Minister of Japan have concluded that the Games of the XXXII Olympiad in Tokyo must be rescheduled to a date beyond 2020 but not later than summer 2021, to safeguard the health of the athletes, everybody involved in the Olympic Games and the international community.

Grassi and Meynen, two senior swimmers, were the only current Auburn student-athletes who had already qualified for the Tokyo Olympics. Grassi will be representing Argentina in the men's 100 butterfly, and Meynen qualified for Luxembourg in the women's 100 freestyle. Both swam for their home countries at the 2016 Olympics in Rio de Janeiro. Several other Auburn swimmers and track and field athletes, past and present, were expected to try and earn their spot this summer at the U.S. Olympic Trials in Omaha (swimming) and Eugene, Oregon (track and field), but those too have been postponed for both sports.

There are a number of former international Auburn Olympic hopefuls as well who were looking to representing their respective countries at the Tokyo Olympics this summer and had their dreams dashed with Tuesday's news. They will continue to pursue that dream for when the event is rescheduled.

Former Auburn swimmer and Guatemala native Luis Martinez had already earned his spot, qualifying for Tokyo in the men's 100 butterfly. It will be his second Olympic appearance.

At the 2016 Olympics, Auburn had a total of 17 athletes – 11 swimmers, five track athletes and a double trap shooter – who competed. Six coaches associated with Auburn also worked at the Games that year.

Local trucking industry impacted by coronavirus

The coronavirus pandemic is bringing a new set of challenges for the trucking industry.

CULLMAN, Ala. – The COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic has proven to be a trialing time for all aspects of the economy and way of life at all levels: federal, state and local. One force that has not slowed down is the trucking industry, which is experiencing a new set of challenges due the pandemic, with trucks hauling retail items or medical supplies at an all-time high rate. For Alabama, drivers are now able operate longer hours due to the hours of service limitation being lifted. Gov. Kay Ivey increased the gross weight limitations from 80,000 pounds to 90,000 pounds, allowing trucks the ability to haul larger loads.

On a local level, trucker John “Huggy Bear” Shofner shared how he and other drivers have been impacted, “We’re definitely having a hard time finding places to eat, places to use the bathroom, places to take a shower, even the truck stops are shutting us down,” Shofner said. “We are the main reason those truck stops are making money and yet, to a degree I understand why they’re doing this, but they need to realize if we can’t continue moving, everything stops. Everything.”

He responded to posts on Facebook supporting truck drivers, “A lot of people are posting on Facebook, ‘Oh do this for them, do that for them, thank you drivers, we appreciate you,’ I mean and it’s nice for people to post that, but of everybody that’s posting, I would be willing to bet that only 10%, if that much, are doing anything to truly help with the problem.”

“I load my haul up in Birmingham basically, I can run back to my house and take a shower at the house every other day, if need be, but 90% of your drivers out here can’t. It’s just making it really hard on us, we are expected to continue on with our job out here and that’s fine, I’d be doing it anyway, but it’s hard to do our job when we don’t even have the extreme basic necessities.”

The hours have increased for most drivers, he noted, “It has not affected me because I’m on a dedicated run. Some of our drivers are running more than average, so they’re running 80 to 90 hours a week, based from 70 (hours). If they would let me, I’d run 120 hours a week, I know I could do that safely and still get my sleep. We’ve got some drivers running a bit more, but not much.”

R.E. Garrison Trucking Inc. Vice President of Safety and Driver Relations Shawn Nelson talked about the way they’ve been impacted, “I feel like we’re on the frontline of what’s going on since we haul food products. Our drivers in some locations are having a hard time finding a place to stop the truck and eat, but they’re struggling through.”

He touched on R.E. Garrison’s policies regarding the virus and how they’re aiming to protect drivers from potential exposure, “We put out a statement to our drivers obviously following the CDC standards of being prepared for this and any other sickness as far as that goes, but we are using all kinds of precautions because we haul food products, our drivers have to answer questionnaires when they go into customers’ facilities, whether they’re shippers or receivers, the drivers fill out questionnaires on whether they’ve been exposed to the virus of if they’ve been sick recently and we’re asking our drivers to follow every precaution put forth by the CDC and local health officials as well.”

Nelson confirmed the high demand for food items, noting how heavily the restaurant business has been hit by the current circumstances, “Absolutely, those are essential items, most states are shutting down non-essential businesses, but every state is allowing you to go out and get food. The restaurant industry is very affected right now, obviously, but the retail industry has picked up because of it. Businesses has shifted a little bit from restaurant deliveries to retail deliveries. More people are having to go to grocery stores instead of restaurants.”

Nelson noted what procedures they’re taking to ensure the drivers are well taken care of, “We put out a statement to our people here to stay in contact with our drivers, because drivers get in worry, when they go down the road, they may say ‘We’ve heard some rumors going around that if you go into this state you’re going to be put in quarantine.’ It’s all rumors going around because we’re doing essential movement, our food, everything is for emergency restocking shelves, everything we’re hauling is legal to move around, we’re taking this stuff in to some states that they do have declarations where they’re not allowed to leave their house. Our drivers, they get worried and call in and we talk to them and assure them that it’s legal for them to be there, we have the declaration that they carry in their truck that shows they are legal to be there delivering those products and that they’re able to go out.”

He brought up a special thank you that R.E. Garrison is giving to CDL drivers on the road, “We’re giving free meals to CDL drivers. Tomorrow (Thursday, March 26, 2020) we’ll be at the Gov. Guy Hunt Rest Stop at Mile Marker 299, we’ll also be doing out of our facility on Hwy. 157. We’re just giving out free meals to (CDL) drivers,” Nelson said. “We hand them a brown paper bag that has a hamburger, hotdog and some chips with Milo’s Tea in it. We’re just allowing them to go on up the road, because it’s so hard for them to find a place to stop and eat now. We’re just helping them out and giving them an easy way to get a meal. We’ll being doing it until further notice. We may move around and try to get a location that works for everybody. We’re just trying to help people out; this is just free food.”

What can we do to help the problem?

Hofner answered, “If you see a truck driver parked, take him some snacks. I keep seeing these posts saying, ‘If you see a truck driver go through a fast food line and they get turned away.’ Truly, just drive through the line for them, load them up in your car so they can get to a meal. It’s the restaurants and the truck stops that truly need to change, it’s not so much the general public, it’s the restaurants and the truck stops. They need to address the situation because, and I understand they have to protect themselves, we can’t do our job if we can’t eat, if we don’t have a place to go to the bathroom or take a shower.”

Would it help drivers if everyone stayed home and off the roads?

Hofner said, “Yes and no. It would help because people are still going to need to grocery shop and people are still going to hoard, so we’re going to have to run to make all that up. (On the interstate) I have not seen a change in traffic, at all. None. It’s just as congested as before.”

Like industries, schools, churches and everything in between, the trucking business has not gone unaffected by the COVID-19 pandemic.

BRINGING OUT THE BEST

Daystar Church looking after seniors

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – In the midst of the COVID-19 outbreak, seniors are statistically the most vulnerable population and have to take extra precautions to guard against exposure to the disease. Recognizing the specific needs that its own seniors may have during this time; Daystar Church is implementing an "adopt-a-senior" plan for its congregation.

Daystar Global Outreach Director Chris Hopper shared, "The main goal is to make sure that our older generations do not fall through the cracks and become forgotten during this unprecedented time."

Hopper told Tribune, "We're asking a family to adopt (five) seniors.

"And what that would mean is that they would call them, they would make sure that they had all of their meals, and they would make sure that if they needed someone to take them to the grocery store or needed groceries (or prescriptions) picked up, that they would do that.

"If they just need some company, because a lot of these seniors live by themselves, or they're very isolated, because they're amongst a very vulnerable population."

Hopper specified later that volunteers will abide by all distancing and quarantine regulations, and that they will keep seniors company by phone.

According to the plan, volunteers must "be willing to assist with grocery and/or prescription pick-up for your seniors once a week (local regulations permitting)."

They will work with seniors who can pay for their items, to do budgeting and arrange payment.

For seniors who cannot afford groceries or medicines, the church will offer financial assistance through its central office.

Church members who volunteer to participate will be placed on 10-member teams under team leaders.

Each volunteer will be assigned five seniors, whom he or she will call at least once every two to three days until the church is able to restart on-campus activities.

Volunteers will report to their team leaders weekly, and the team leaders will report to their campus pastor weekly.

Starting at home and working outwards

Daystar will begin with its roster of senior adults who have attended the church but hopes to expand the program.

Hopper explained, "We're also wanting to do something like that at the Cullman Housing Authority, if possible, as soon as they let us back in.

"Right now, they've asked everyone to kind of stay away until April 6.

"We're really doing what we can do, starting within our churches and moving out as much as possible."

The church is also considering ideas such as sending greeting cards to seniors quarantined in nursing homes and setting up Skype stations for families to visit with their seniors in facilities by video.

Said Hopper, "We're mulling over a lot of different ideas."

Online (from Front)

if anybody will want to do it or have the need to do it, but it's certainly something we could do and want to do, if it's needed."

How is Northbrook doing as an online church?

Warden shared, "It's been good and, you know, I have mixed emotions about that. On one hand, I'm grateful that we could do it, because, man, we just really need to.

"There's really no other way that you can remain connected with them when it's all said and done. I was talking to somebody about this, this morning: you know, you really, ultimately, can't really be a church if it's just a virtual experience. You need to be with people. Churches are not churches, I don't think, unless we can be together, but these are really unprecedented times.

"And so, you're trying to figure out how best to give people a sense of connection and encouragement and instruction."

Warden was happy overall with the digital turnout.

"We had a good response. I think that on Sunday we had right at 500 or more that were watching at one time. And then you had, I think it was well over a thousand views- people that maybe just stopped in, dropped in for a few minutes and moved on. But yeah, it was unusually pleasant: unusual in the sense that it doesn't feel like a Sunday when you're not together; that's just odd. If you do what we do every week, if you're a pastor, not being with your church on Sunday's just odd. But at the same time, it was very gratifying and encouraging."

Northbrook averages 600 at a typical Sunday morning service.

Not just worship services

Warden told The Tribune, "In our small groups, we had the majority of our small groups that used some kind of platform like Zoom or Facetime or something else to actually meet virtually as a small group.

"And so, a lot of our groups met on Sunday, and we expect almost twice that many to finally catch up to speed and do that this Sunday, because they've been motivated to do it, now.

"There's a lot of those resources that people have never really tapped into, because they really haven't wanted to- and, honestly, I probably haven't, either- but now, you have to. And it's really working well. And so, we were actually able to have a lot of small groups. I have a men's group that I meet with each week, and we were able to meet (online) on Sunday night. And I have a class that I teach on Sunday morning, and so we met on Zoom.

"And really, by the end of the day, I felt almost as tired as I normally do on Sunday, because I actually ended up speaking and communicating with almost as many people as I normally do, absent the opportunity to just casually bump into folks."

It's certainly been an adjustment for Northbrook and other churches across the state but Warden is thankful that the technology is available to stay connected with his congregation.

"So, it was different, and we're trying to figure it out as we go. Every week is different, so we'll probably get a little bit better at it and make some adjustments, depending how long all this lasts.

"But it's different, and it's amazing to think that we're able to do this. If we were going through this even- what- ten years ago, it might have looked a lot different, at least for churches trying to connect."

Reservoir (from Front)

Dale Greer, W.C. Mann

CULLMAN, Ala. – The Cullman Economic Development Agency (CEDA) announced Wednesday that the Duck River Reservoir will reopen to boat fishing Thursday, March 26. In a message, CEDA Director Dale Greer wrote:

The main boat ramp on the East Side of the Reservoir at the dam and the launch on the West side of the lake off County Road 1670 (formerly County Road 1651) will be open at daylight Thursday with a maximum motor restriction size of 25 horsepower.

Reservoir Manager Tim Scott said the lake level is down approximately 11 feet below full pool and there are some shallow spots on the lake that could pose a hazard. Scott urges fishermen to exercise caution when both launching boats and operating the motors on the water.

Access will not be allowed to the dock at the dam boat ramp because of the steepness of the walkway.

Restrictions on the reservoir, creel limits and other information is posted at the boat ramps.

Required fishing permits may be obtained on the City of Cullman website at www.cullmanal.gov or on the Duck River Reservoir Facebook page by clicking the blue "Signup" button on the right side of the page and completing the form.

Outdoor recreation opportunities are permitted under Governor Kay Ivey's State of Emergency. Recreation is a healthy, stress relieving activity.

Every local, state and national health organization recommends following social distancing guidelines to limit the spread of COVID-19.

Other opportunities to get outside safely

Greer reported that walking/biking trails are also open at Duck River, and at other area sites like Heritage Park and Hurricane Creek, though he cautioned that playground equipment is off limits due to social distancing restrictions.

In a recent release by the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, David Rainer wrote:

Not only does our state have some of the best fishing opportunities in the nation, both freshwater and saltwater, but the spring turkey season is also about to open in most of the state.

If hunting or fishing is not a preference, consider the beautiful natural hiking trails and camping facilities available at Alabama State Parks close to where you live, not to mention the natural beauty on the Forever Wild tracts available to the public. Visit www.alapark.com and www.alabamaforeverwild.com for the many options available.

"I know with the children out of school and many parents home as well, people will want to do things together as a family," Blankenship continued. "Many will want to take the youngsters who are out of school to explore our state's great natural wonders, but please do so responsibly."

Alabama Wildlife and Freshwater Fisheries (WFF) Director Chuck Sykes said this is a perfect opportunity for those who love the outdoors to adhere to the "social distancing" guidelines.

"I fully expect Alabama hunters and fishermen to take advantage of the social distancing prescriptions by all the coronavirus experts, and I expect many of them will get outdoors, either on the water or in the woods," Sykes said. "Turkey season in most of the state comes in Saturday (March 21). Fishing is phenomenal from what I understand."

Sykes said WFF's operations will be minimally impacted by the measures instituted to limit the spread of the COVID-19 virus.

"It's going to be business as usual for us except in our offices," he said. "I don't want people to think that the game wardens are going to be sitting at home, not doing anything. Our staff basically has been practicing social distancing for years. They work by themselves for the large part.

"They work outside. The only thing the public will see different from Wildlife and Freshwater Fisheries is our district offices and the Montgomery offices will be closed to public walk-in traffic. But we will still have a skeleton staff to take phone calls and answer Game Check questions, which will be forwarded to officers and biologists in the field.

"Other than some headquarters and district office staff continuing their work from home, it's going to be business as usual providing services to the public."
