Cullman area long term care facilities get creative during COVID-19 quarantine

CULLMAN COUNTY, Ala. – Wednesday marks two weeks since the doors began closing to visitors at assisted living and nursing home facilities throughout Cullman County and the State of Alabama. Administrators and staff of facilities in Cullman have been working especially hard to help ease the minds of their residents by finding creative ways to keep them active and in communication with families and loved ones.

Administrator Donna Guthrie and the staff at Hanceville Nursing and Rehab have scheduled many new activities for those in their care.

"We keep them in groups of 10 or less and on pretty days we do our best to get them outside just to let them see something different. Yesterday, they had a hall at a time and did bingo with them. They had chips and dip day one day," Guthrie said. "We do our best, weather permitting, to get them outside. Just go outside for some ice cream, lemonade, or a glass of sweet tea. Just get them out and thinking about something else. We do a lot of singing and have a lot of music."

The residents do miss their large group activities and visits from family and friends. They have been using technology to help residents stay in touch with loved ones.

"We do try to video chat. The families that do have the phones where you can do facetime, we » PAGE 3

Hanceville FUMC and other county churches going digital during social distancing

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – As churches around Cullman feel the strain of social distancing on their worship services, many are utilizing different livestreaming services to continue bringing worship and sermons to their home-bound congregations - some uploading services to YouTube or their church's website, others tuning in to their pastors' personal Facebook pages for sermons streamed live from their homes. Hanceville First United Methodist Church had an established online presence even before the COVID-19 outbreak, but the social distancing protocols have added another arrow to their virtual quiver, online classes and meetings.

Ty Watwood, the church's technology leader, stated that the church has been online for roughly a year now through livestreams to the Hanceville FUMC Facebook page. However, the church recently started a YouTube channel that has uploaded the worship service from March 22 and the Bible study from March 25. When asked about how he felt the online worship services went, Watwood stated that there had been some minor mishaps but overall, the services went very well. "We've been doing these livestreams for a while now and we usually get a lot of good feedback on them, so this was just more of an extension of what we already had.". He also mentioned that another contributing factor to the success of the services was the idea to use Zoom, an online meeting platform similar to Skype that many schools and universities are using in place of in-person classes or recorded lectures, to hold Sunday school lessons.

Feeding the Gulf Coast helps locate food resources

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – "Feeding the Gulf Coast" (FGC) does not sound like an organization that would concern itself with north Alabama, but Outreach Senior Coordinator Carol Ann Hopper, who lives in the Cullman area and works at the agency's Huntsville office, wants people to know the FGC's services are available here and across the state.

Said Hopper, "We are a free resource for everybody in the state of Alabama. The most common misconception is that our organization is only able to assist people along the Gulf Coast, but because of the relationships that we leverage with other food banks in the state of Alabama, we are able to assist clients that are in need, regardless of where they are in the state."

Hopper added, "We have a call center that we're working around the clock, in overdrive right now, to make sure that there's somebody there to answer the phone that's an actual person- it's not a robocall- to help direct people on what they need to do in their area to get assistance, and kind of walk them through how to find food during this unprecedented chaotic time."

In a note to The Tribune, Hopper wrote:
"As families are faced with an increased need for food due to school closures, inability to work, or facing self-quarantine requirements, individuals seeking assistance can call Feeding the Gulf Coast's Benefits Enrollment Center at 877-833-2550. Feeding the Gulf Coast's outreach team works in partnership with two other large food banks in Alabama to best assist Alabamians in times of need."

"Our Food Bank partner for this area is the Food Bank of North Alabama, website: www.foodbankal.org and the search tool is under "Get Help".

"However, if clients will call the 877 number above, we can assist them regardless of where they live over the phone in one easy step."

"Our call volume has almost tripled over the last week, as referrals are now coming in around the clock. Our team has worked tirelessly to put together an action plan so we can most effectively assist our communities during this unprecedented time. It is an honor to be on the frontlines able to offer a friendly voice and a hand up to people facing some of their hardest times."

FGC works with food banks and over 80 grocery stores across north Alabama, collecting donations and surplus items.

On its website, FGC says:
Feeding the Gulf Coast remains committed to our mission of ensuring the needs of our communities are met. The food bank is no stranger to working through times of crisis to assist the most vulnerable in our community.

The food bank is maintaining regular business hours of Monday through Friday, 8-4. Please call (888) 704-FOOD if you need assistance or have any questions.

At this time, we are maintaining an updated list of resources available for anyone seeking food assistance. The Find Help feature is the best source of information at this time for families and individuals seeking assistance.

Now more than ever, healthy volunteers are needed to sort and pack food and prepare emergency food boxes. During this time of increased need, please consider volunteering.

The threat of COVID-19 (coronavirus) adds even more pressure to the already strained finances of those we serve and so many more. We are actively working to develop solutions to meet the anticipated increase in need in our service area.To ensure we best serve our community throughout this ever-changing time of need, we are developing a strategy for the distribution of emergency food boxes for those affected by school closures, quarantines and the growing economic impact of this crisis. But we cannot do it alone. Your support is always needed, especially during these uncertain times. As we work to always be part of the solution, please consider a donation to help us meet the needs of our communities.

During this time of uncertainty and crisis, Feeding the Gulf Coast remains dedicated to serving the community. We are in contact with our community partners and will continue to be an organization of hope and support for families facing hunger.

For children, 18 and younger, who need meals during school closures: The Find Help feature is the best source of information at this time for families and individuals seeking assistance.

FGC also recommends that people in Alabama visit http://www.breakforaplate.com.

Hopper told The Tribune, "The workload has drastically increased, but I feel like anybody that goes into the nonprofit sector, they do that because they have a heart for serving the people. So, when everything else is hunkering down, we're really pressing in and moving forward.

"We all love what we do, so we get excited to step up in a time when a lot of people are backing down."

Boutique (from Front)

Christy Perry
christy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Inside Lavish Boutique in Cullman's Warehouse District, shoppers are sure to find beautiful clothes and accessories, sweet fragrances and perhaps some divine inspiration. Near the back of the boutique hangs a simple, yet heartwarming prayer wall where people can take or leave prayer requests. As the Covid-19 situation continues, the prayer wall is a great example of why Cullman is one of the best communities in Alabama.

Lavish Boutique owner, Shannon Beaty, explains, "Lavish prayer wall exists to allow our customers to leave their burdens, worries and problems knowing they have a group of ladies praying over these requests standing in faith believing God will answer their prayers according to his will.

"It is not only a place to leave a prayer, but if led to do so, you can take a prayer to pray for someone else."

Tonya Cox, manager of the boutique, wants everyone to know that everyone is welcome to come in and visit the prayer wall.

"We have seen ladies come back here and just pray over this wall."

Cox said that the prayer wall demonstrates the foundation of Lavish Boutique.

She read a statement from Beaty that said, "Lavish is more than a boutique selling beautiful clothing. It's a place that is built on the foundation of God!

"He has given us a platform to share his love, grace and mercy. We are connecting with women building relationships that have us standing in the middle of the store sharing victories, life stories and also praying with our customers when they need it."

Lavish is currently remaining open. Cox is continuously sanitizing the boutique and she is keeping her distance from customers while still helping them.

"We are still open. We do curbside service; we shop via facetime and we email pictures or email pictures. We just do whatever the customer feels comfortable doing."

Lavish Boutique is open Monday-Saturday from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. and is located at 105 1st Ave NE Suite B in Cullman. Visit their website at http://lavishboutique-clothing.com or call 256-615- 1034.

Facilities (from Front)

do that. By all means we encourage calling and talking to them on the phone."

Dee Dee Mosley, executive director at Morningside Assisted Living, said, "We are doing a lot of one-on-one activities and we've been doing video chats and Facebooking. We have had families up here to the windows and a lot of different things. Being creative."

Morningside is using having a PA system in their facility to their advantage during the current lockdown.

"We've used the system for Bingo, devotional and singing while keeping residents at a safe distance." The residents of Morningside have also written letters and taken pictures to send to their families and loved ones.

Wanda Raines, executive director of Westminster Assisted Living, has implemented many of the same strategies to keep everyone's spirits up.

"We are having a Little Debbie cake walk today, they are doing dominoes right now and bingo today. They are doing noodle ball, cornhole toss and making soap."

At Westminster, they are also using facetime and Skype to help their residents stay in touch with their families. The residents are also able to get outside for fresh air with trips to the facility's courtyard.

As for the staff and the extra efforts in keeping everyone safe and upbeat, Raines said, "They are all troopers on it." She did describe the residents as being a tad "antsy" but reports that overall, everyone is doing good.

Guthrie said of her staff, "They are just trying to rack their brain to make sure they give them something to look forward to. We do everything we know to do to keep their mind occupied and something to look forward to and to just keep going."

Guthrie added, "They are missing their family. We wish that things were different. This is going to last, and I was telling the staff this morning that it's been 2 weeks today that we closed the doors. It seems a lot longer than that, but we don't let anyone come."

Even deliveries are done completely outside and not allowed to come inside. The only exceptions are outside medical professionals and family in the event of an end of life situation.

Masks (from Front)

heather@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – As many healthcare workers across the nation struggle with shortages of sanitary face masks, some craft workers are using their skills to help combat the shortage and Cullman is no exception. Sharon Spiegle, a Cullman County resident, heard from workers at the Cullman Health Care Center that there was a shortage of masks, so she bought fabric, elastic cord, and HEPA air filters and got to work. At the time The Tribune spoke with her, Spiegle had completed nine masks on her own (she had only been working on the project for just under a day) and mentioned she had several friends who offered their help as well in case she got more requests than she could handle.

Spiegle told The Tribune that she had been praying to find out if there was anything, she could do to help people during the quarantine period and her friend at the nursing home mentioned the lack of masks. Spiegle said it felt like an answer to her prayers.

"I knew that this was something I could do to help the people who needed it most while still staying at home," she said. "I knew that once word got around the nursing home about these masks, I'd have my work cut out for me.

"Fortunately, I have some friends who offered to help out if it got to be too much for me, so if I get a lot more requests, we can just make an assembly line." She mentioned she was almost unable to do the project due to difficulty finding elastic cord, but God provided for her and she found what she needed.

When asked about the difficulty of the project, Spiegle said that cutting out the fabric was the hardest part.

"It's a pretty simple pattern, so just cutting out the fabric would be the hardest thing. Once you finish that, you just sew the edges, attach the elastic bands, and slide the filter into the pocket."

Though she described the assembly process for the masks as fairly easy, the cost of the items was another large issue for her.

"I was talking to my pastor and his wife about filters in these masks, and they said that HEPA filters are better than regular air filters because they keep out a lot more than just dust and dirt.

"But those filters are expensive if you need to make a lot of masks, and I don't think I'll be able to keep giving them away for free if people keep asking for them."

Many different patterns for face masks, including ones with pockets for air filters, can be found on crafting or sewing websites and blogs.

If you know of any essential workers whose employers are low on masks and you are able, please consider following Mrs. Spiegle's example and make some. Although homemade masks may not be as effective as medical-grade masks, they still provide protection for people who are risking their health for us because their jobs cannot possibly be done online.

Churches (from Front)

Zoom until a church member messaged him about wanting to use the program for her small group class. The group was a success, which led to the children's ministry using the program to hold a service for the church youth later that afternoon. Campbell confirmed that the success of those sessions will allow the church to hold ministry meetings and some business meetings during the social distancing period. Watwood credited Marian Herren with the idea to use Zoom and said that church member Nancy Horton will lead the online class this Sunday (March 29), and the meeting ID numbers and invitation links can be found on the church's Facebook page (https://www.facebook.com/Hanceville-FUMC/).

Campbell expressed concern for churches who may not have such easy access to technology or people who are familiar with it, but also gave a message of hope for anyone feeling discouraged during this trying time. "Churches who do not have people that are tech savvy are going to struggle to continue to encourage their communities and spread the hope that we have in Christ during these difficult days ahead," Campbell stated.

"Our church family and persons around the county have messaged me and said they were thankful that we would continue our services this way. However, most of the church family miss the time together. The body of Christ (the church), however, is not a building, but the people! So, wherever we are, we should be in a spirit of thankfulness and have a servant's heart. We may learn how to be the church even better during this time!"

Perfect Game lists 3 Trojans as top MLB Draft prospects

Andrew Leroy Stubblefield

TROY, Ala. – Three Trojans were named to Perfect Game's list of the nation's top 400 MLB Draft prospects, the organization announced earlier this week. Right-handed pitcher Tekoah Roby, a 2020 signee with the Trojans, was listed as the 112th best prospect in the draft while Levi Thomas and Rigsby Mosley checked in at No. 153 and 259 on the list, respectively.

Levi Thomas – RHP

Thomas' draft stock soared after making just four starts in the shortened 2020 season. The junior began the year with seven consecutive strikeouts en route to fanning a career-high 14 batters on Opening Night. The next weekend, Thomas finished with 11 strikeouts and pitched six hitless innings against Louisiana Tech on a chilly February night to earn Sun Belt Pitcher of the Week honors for the second week in a row.

The Cullman, Ala., turned more heads on the national stage when he allowed no runs in 6.0 innings at No. 1 Florida. Thomas didn't give up a run until his fourth start of the year against Michigan State at the Cox Diamond Invitational, an outing where he still struck out 11 batters.

His 42 strikeouts are the 10th-most nationally and his ERA of 0.39 is a top-15 mark in the country. Thomas' WHIP of 0.65 was the 17th-best in the nation this season.

Thomas was also named in D1 Baseball's list of the top junior pitchers from this season, checking in at No. 24.

Rigsby Mosley – OF

The 2019 Sun Belt batting champion came out swinging once again in 2020, hitting safely in the first 11 games of the season, this time from the leadoff spot. Mosley was hitting at a .351 clip and scored a team-best 20 runs before the season was abruptly halted.

10 of Mosley's 26 hits went for extra bases, highlighted by a grand slam in the Saturday contest at No. 1 Florida. The junior notched seven doubles on the year which tied for second in the Sun Belt and was the 34th-most in the country.

Mosley was solid in the outfield as well, making his fair share of highlight real catches, primarily in left field. The Maitland, Fla., native did not commit an error all season.

Mosley was also listed as the 245th-best draft prospect according to D1 Baseball.

Tekoah Roby – RHP

Roby became one of the highest decorated pitchers to ever sign with the Trojans when he put pen to paper on National Signing Day in November. The Pensacola, Fla. native is listed as a top-30 right-hander nationally and the fifth-best righty in the state of Florida according to Perfect Game.

Roby has a fastball that reaches up to 94 mph and has the ability to throw three different pitches for strikes. The Pine Forest High School standout was a first-team All-State selection and was named the 2019 Pensacola News Journal Player of the Year.

Roby was also selected to the 2019 East Coast Pro Showcase.

Head Coach Mark Smartt on Tekoah Roby

"Tekoah is someone we targeted early in the recruiting process two years ago and is one of the top pitcher's in the country. He might be the most decorated pitcher to sign at Troy. We really like what he presents on the mound. Tekoah has the ability to throw three pitches for strikes with power which will allow him to compete right away at the Division I level."

'Extremely proud': Tigers exceed expectations, leave their mark

Greg Ostendorf

AUBURN, Ala. – It's been two weeks since the last SEC college basketball game was played. Auburn's players have all returned to their respective homes where head coach Bruce Pearl has asked them to take care of their business and be mindful of the current situation with COVID-19.

Instead of practicing inbounds plays, the Tigers are practicing social distancing.

The finality of the season and the way it ended still stings. At this time last year, Auburn was preparing for the Sweet 16, and this year's team showed time and again this season that it was capable of making its own run in the NCAA Tournament.

That run will never happen.

"We certainly were in position to be competitive in postseason play, and I can tell you that our seniors were extremely disappointed," Pearl said. "But they've got it in perspective because as you look around and you see people that are out of work, businesses that are failing, real serious health issues, particularly in urban areas – none of our guys are complaining."

Regardless of how the season ended, nobody can take away what this group accomplished. Led by five seniors who were all adjusting to new roles and a star freshman in Isaac Okoro, the Tigers went 25-6 in the regular season, topping last year's mark. They finished second in the SEC at 12-6 and were poised to make the Big Dance for the third straight year.

"I am extremely proud of this group for finishing in second place because the league was so good," Pearl said.

"I felt like this was a team that could finish in the top five. I talked about fourth or fifth, which was about where we were picked. To finish higher than we were picked and be within range of the champion, I was very pleased.

"These kids really cared. They grinded. They won five overtime games. I'm proud of them for the way they competed and the way they grinded and especially with a roster that was a lot of seniors that played supporting cast roles the year before and played dominant roles."

What would Auburn do without Jared Harper and Bryce Brown? J'Von McCormick and Samir Doughty answered that, forming one of the top backcourt tandems in the SEC.

How would the Tigers replace Chuma Okeke? It took a collective effort, but Danjel Purifoy and Anfernee McLemore both stepped up and filled in admirably. A healthy Austin Wiley also proved just how dominant he could be, finishing second in the SEC in rebounding.

Okoro was the most notable freshman, starting in all but four games and earning Second Team All-SEC honors as well as making the SEC's All-Freshman Team and All-Defensive Team, but Auburn received contributions from fellow freshmen Devan Cambridge, Allen Flanigan and toward the end of the year, Jaylin Williams.

It was never going to be easy to follow the team that made the first Final Four appearance in program history, but this team – though they never got the opportunity to win any championships or cut down any nets in the postseason – they left their mark on Auburn basketball.

SHANNA LOCKWOOD/AU ATHLETICS

"The last two weeks we've seen dramatic changes and how something like a pandemic can affect the entire world," Pearl said. "We're trying to be safe, trying to be healthy, trying to do the right things so we can get through this, and then come out on the other side somehow better off, wiser and having us all return to some form of our normal lives.

"I think it gives you great appreciation for the moment in the sense that you never know when that moment's not going to be available to you."

Record breaking season leaves unfinished business for UAB Men's Golf

Ted Feeley
UAB Athletics

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – The UAB men's golf team was in the midst of one of its best seasons in program history before the season was cut short due to the novel coronavirus (COVID-19). The Blazers though, have a lot to celebrate from the 2019-20 campaign.

UAB finished the year with an overall record of 57-23-1.

The Blazers were the highest ranked team in Conference USA at No. 44 nationally and were essentially a lock for the NCAA Tournament.

Most impressively, the Blazers ended the season with the lowest team stroke average in the program's storied history, posting a collective 282.72.

"I am extremely proud of the record-breaking season that our guys had," said head coach Mike Wilson.

"To have the lowest scoring average in school history is an accomplishment anywhere, but at a school with the golf tradition that we have makes it even more special.

"It is definitely disappointing that we were unable to finish it off, but the way our guys handled themselves at receiving the news was nothing but first class.

"We understand there is a bigger need in the world than college athletics at the moment.

"I look forward to watching out guys compete in the future, as it is a very special group."

A pair of seniors in William Walker III and Murray Naysmith led the charge the entire season and were playing the best golf of their entire career.

Both players were at or under par in all six tournaments this season, including five of which they both shot under par.

Walker III finished with the year with the second lowest stroke average in school history at 70.3, while Naysmith's 70.8 stroke average was third lowest in program history.

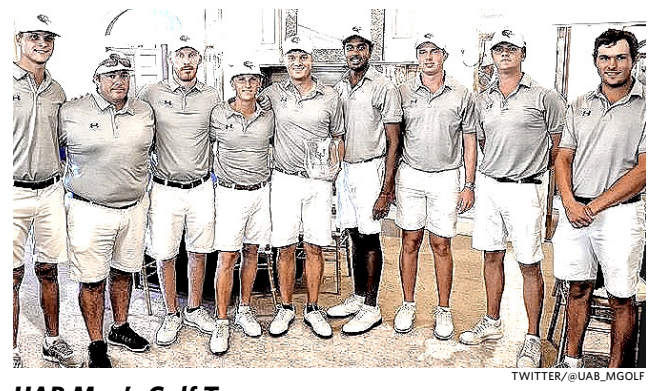

Both will leave the program as two of the top players in program history. Walker III graduates with the third lowest career stroke average (72.32) only behind Graeme McDowell and R.J Keur, while Naysmith is 14th overall at 73.70.

As a team, the Blazers finished top five in five of their six tournaments this year and found a consistent lineup of Walker III, Naysmith, Ben Reichert, Khavish Varadan and John Snoddy.

Reichert posted a 71.6 stroke average – the sixth lowest in school history – in his first full season playing for the Green and Gold.

His season was highlighted by an 11th place finish at the Graeme McDowell Invitational.

A true freshman, Varadan caught fire in his final three tournament, finish under par in all three of them, and shooting -6 in both the White Sands Intercollegiate and the Mobile Sports Authority Intercollegiate. Varadan concluded his freshman campaign with a 72.2 stroke average.

UAB Men's Golf Team.

Snoddy saved his best for last, earning Conference USA Golfer of the Week, after posting a collegiate low -8 at the Mobile Sports Authority Intercollegiate and recording his first career top five finish (4th).

The 2019-20 UAB men's golf team will go down as one of the top teams in program history and can only wonder what if.

Had the season played out, these Blazers were poised to make a deep run at the NCAA Tournament.

'We're going to get through this together': Auburn's Bruce Pearl on resilience in troubling times

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Just like he would during an Auburn basketball game when he had something significant to communicate to his team, Bruce Pearl called timeout during Wednesday's Facebook Live session.

"Where in the world would we be without the caregivers?" Pearl asked during his 30-minute discussion with Mark Wilson, director of Auburn University's Caroline Marshall Draughon Center for Arts & Humanities at Pebble Hill. "Those people are on the front lines. They go to work every day putting their lives on the line to save others. What an incredible ministry.

"Right now, you can't give them a hug, because we've got to keep our distance," Pearl said.

"Say thank you. Next time I see a doctor or a nurse in their gown at a breakfast place, I'm buying them breakfast."

In a talk titled "Human Resilience in Troubling Times: Stories from Coaching and Life," Pearl shared how the nationwide response to slow the spread of COVID-19 affected Auburn's basketball team, costing the Tigers an opportunity to defend their SEC Tournament championship and potentially return to the Final Four.

"We're fine," he said. "Life's different right now. I miss my players. I don't know if they miss me but I miss them because we were around each other all day, every day. I feel especially bad for the seniors because this team really embraced making history and making their own history.

"We lost so many good players from that Final Four team a year ago. This team was supposed to be good, not great. And in many ways, they were great.

"We've never seen anything quite like this year's March Madness because the whole world is going through it in a different way. In times like these, you do reflect.

"Memories matter. You do hold dear some of the fun experiences that you've gone through so for us, reliving last year's run to the Final Four, a run that had to go through the blue bloods of the world of college basketball as Auburn was trying to carve out its niche in the world of credibility in college basketball."

The public health and economic adversity Americans are facing presents an opportunity, Pearl said.

"You want to try to prepare your teams, and you want to try to prepare young people, to be their best when things are at their worst," he said. "We can all sail the ship when the winds are calm and the seas are favorable.

"I don't want to have a bunch of adversity to have my character built, but I do know, in troubling times it's going to get revealed. So therefore, you have an opportunity in difficult times to separate yourself.

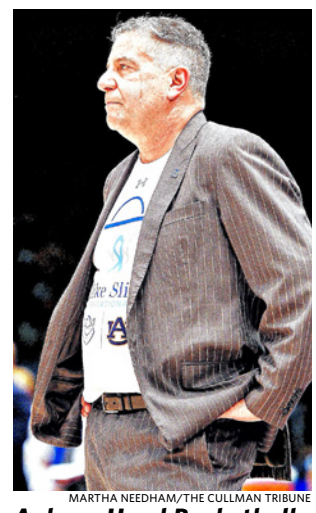

"Right now, there are a lot of things that are being revealed about who's going to be able to be all hands-on deck and get through the storm, and who's going to be jumping overboard."

Pearl encouraged people to invest extra time reaching out to loved ones, friends and neighbors during the coronavirus epidemic.

"Whose life can you touch?" Pearl asked. "Pick up the phone, get on FaceTime and make sure people you know, know that they matter. Don't ignore them."

Pearl concluded his talk by challenging Auburn University students to lead by embracing the challenges that accompany remote instruction. He encouraged everyone to follow the now familiar guidelines regarding hand washing and social distancing to prevent the health care system from being overrun.

"We need to do our part by keeping our distance, by paying attention, by staying at home," he said. "Let's do what we're told. Let's play by the rules. Let's understand that the more we play by these rules now, the sooner we're going to get back to what we know as to be normal. We're going to get through this together."

Parkside Outreach Program offers community assistance services

maggie@cullmantribune.com

BAILEYTON, Ala. – Since June 2018, the Parkside Outreach Program (POP), a 501(c)3 organization, has been supporting Baileyton and surrounding communities with a food pantry funded purely from food donations and funds raised from the organization's thrift store inside the A&D Motors Baileyton location. The Tribune spoke with POP Manager Debbie Humphries to learn more on the organization.

"Our Director and Founder Jennifer Boatright Harlow and I grew up in Baileyton. Jennifer saw a need for assistance to the needy people in our area and she has talked for years about some way that she could give back to the community. We watched people struggle to just get by most of our lives, us included," Humphries said.

"No help was offered in our area at the time we were growing up, except for maybe commodities. Jennifer is now the owner of A&D Motors, one location in Arab and a smaller location in Baileyton. In June 2018 she was awarded the Cox Automotive Award in the amount of $10,000, Jennifer used this award and started a thrift store in the building of A&D Motors in Baileyton.

"I myself started working at this facility in August 2018. Slow business at first because people didn't realize there was a thrift store inside, but by November 2018 we had an active food pantry that is solely funded from sales from the thrift store, Parkside Outreach Program is doing great. We are a 501(c)3 organization."

Humphries talked about how the organization supports the families and communities it serves with many different needs and services.

"We started out doing monthly food distribution of about 35 boxes or 35 families within the Parkside school district. Now we have expanded and are assisting people within a 10-mile radius of our facility we now do (under normal circumstances) about 55-70 boxes a month. We also help those in need with their electric, water, and propane if the funds are available and they meet certain income criteria," Humphries said.

"We help people who are in emergency crisis, such as house fires. We also partner with Baileyton Methodist Church for the weekend Backpack Program, where we actively assist, as funds allow, with supplies and such that Parkside Elementary School needs. We also help supply a hygiene closet at the school.

"I am also a Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) application assistant, I have been trained to assist people fill out for SNAP/food stamps and always have applications on hand, I am willing to assist anyone in filling out their application and sending it to the proper officials."

Humphries shared more on the food bank and thrift store, breaking down what kind of items they're looking for.

"We gladly accept donations of any type of food, we have a huge freezer for frozen items, and we accept all nonperishable items. Monetary donations can be mailed to the address above or dropped by our location, they can also donate through our website or our Facebook page," She said. "We also accept, clothes, shoes, furniture, housewares or anything of the sort. We cannot accept mattresses, older model televisions, used undergarments, and used cosmetics."

She touched on how the recent COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic has affected the organization and some of the adjustments they've had to make as result.

"Our thrift store lobby is currently closed, we are however still distributing food, as long as it lasts. Since March 18 I have given out 100 food boxes, this is not counting our food boxes we did at the first of the month, which totaled 60, plus or minus a few. We usually have two volunteers that are here daily to help me sort things out and distribute, but they are currently staying in," Humphries said.

"As of right now we are shortening our hours until this pandemic is over. Jennifer will be here from Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. giving out food. We have received food from The Link of Cullman County, and from various food banks in the area to stock our pantry. If anyone would like to donate food that would be amazing."

Humphries wanted to share a message about working together through these trying times and more ways that people can reach out and help those who need it.

"We, as a town, community and county, all need to work together for the greater good of the people in need. We need to do more teaming up and more people who are fortunate should come forward and do their part to help these people of our community out. Most of our families in need in the Parkside District and surrounding communities are on disability or are elderly and the live on a fixed income. Some people are trying to make ends meet with $700 to $1000 a month. With this small income they must pay all of their utilities and rent, sometimes medications," Humphries said. "It leaves them with very little to survive on. The SNAP program is great, but it only helps out a little in most cases. We as a community should step up and help the people out, try to fill the gap, for nutrition sake and so the people do not stress as much. As Hellen Keller said, 'Alone we can do so little, but together we can do so much.'"

Cullman County Animal Shelter closes down for deep clean amidst COVID-19 concerns

heather@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – As the county takes precautions to protect residents and reduce the spread of COVID-19, many animal lovers are becoming concerned for the county's four-legged residents. Several areas across the country report that people are abandoning their pets or giving them up to shelters due to fears that they may be carriers for the disease, so The Tribune reached out to Dwain Floyd at the Cullman County Animal Shelter to see how the pandemic has affected the shelter.

The first thing Floyd wanted to point out was that the shelter is currently closed to the public and not accepting new animals.

"We've had some people call and ask about bringing their animals in, but we're not accepting new animals for the time being. Other than that, we haven't really seen any noticeable increase in people abandoning or surrendering their pets here in Cullman," he stated.

The second thing he pointed out, which is even more crucial than the first, is that there are currently no animals in the shelter at all.

"Every year we do an annual deep clean, and we were already preparing for that when the outbreak hit. Most of our animals were adopted out, but unfortunately we did have a few that we had to euthanize because they weren't adoptable, and we just couldn't hold on to them."

Floyd stated that this annual cleaning will give the shelter a chance to clean and disinfect all the cages, thoroughly clean the walls and floors, apply fresh paint and install a new air conditioning unit.

"That AC is going to be the biggest thing for us," Floyd commented, "because now we'll have air circulating through the shelter instead of it being stuffy and stale all the time."

While he did not give an estimate of when the shelter would reopen, residents can visit the shelter's Facebook page (https://www.facebook.com/cullmancountyanimalshelter/) for updates.
