Cullman County Courts issue instructions for child visitation/custody issues during state health emergency

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Recently, Cullman County Presiding Judge Gregory Nicholas issued an administrative order governing child custody and visitation issues during the state-declared public health emergency. Main points of the order include:

• Visitation and custody exchanges are to continue unless sufficient evidence exists to show that a parent is acting with disregard for the child's health or safety. Parents are required to adhere to CDC regulations and find "common sense solutions to protect their minor children;" Failure to do so could lead to modification or even suspension of visitation/custody orders.

• Supervised visitation will be conducted by one of several online video conference platforms. If a parent lacks such access, telephone visitation will substitute. Recording of such visitation is prohibited.

THE ORDER READS:

ADMINISTRATIVE ORDER 2020-08
Relating to Child Visitation during the Current COVID-19 Pandemic

As part of the local court response plan to contain the spread of COVID-19, it is hereby ORDERED, after consultation with the other judges in this circuit, that the following rules are adopted in all child custody or dependency cases within the jurisdiction of the courts of the 32nd Judicial Circuit:

1. Visitation and Custody Exchanges During COVID-19 Pandemic in Domestic Relations, Juvenile and District Court Custody Cases.

Ivey issues supplemental emergency proclamation to allow parole hearings to resume

Wendy Sack
wendy@cullmantribune.com

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Governor Kay Ivey on Monday issued a supplemental emergency proclamation, directing the Board of Pardons and Paroles to resume parole hearings amidst the COVID-19 pandemic, according to a media release from her office.

Ivey's office said, "Hearings will resume in a manner that reduces person-to-person interaction. At the same time, the Board of Pardons and Paroles will be preserving the right of crime victims, crime victim representatives, public officials and other interested parties to present their views to the Board."

"The health, safety and well-being of all Alabamians is paramount during this evolving health pandemic. It is vitally important we keep Alabama's criminal justice system functioning for the good of public safety," said Ivey.

"As we continue evaluating our efforts throughout this process, we have worked diligently to ensure efficiency and continuity of critical government services by allowing for virtual meetings. I appreciate the Board of Pardons and Paroles for collaborating with my Office to ensure we continue their important work."

Continued the release, "In the governor's ongoing efforts to combat COVID-19, any provision of Alabama law allowing individuals to appear in person at a meeting of the Board is suspended. The Board of Pardons and Paroles will also allow views to be presented to them through written or emailed statements, as well as by phone."

Bringing out the best: SERVPRO sanitizes Cullman Police vehicles

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Technicians from SERVPRO's Cullman office spent two days this week sanitizing vehicles for the Cullman Police Department (CPD), free of charge. The company approached the CPD to offer the cleaning as an act of community service.

CPD Capt. Gene Bates explained, "SERVPRO has donated their services to the police department, and they're disinfecting the vehicles for us, free of charge. They were here yesterday and today; we're getting day shift, night shift, all of the investigation vehicles, any patrol vehicles or investigation- any vehicles that the City has within the police department, they're disinfecting them for us. We appreciate it. I think every officer appreciates it. It's just the little things like we sometime take for granted. Transporting prisoners in the vehicles, normally, we don't think about anything; we just put them in the vehicle, we take them to jail. A lot of times, we don't really think about possibly getting a disease or anything like that."

He continued, "The coronavirus, obviously it's on everybody's mind. At least, this way, it gives the officers peace of mind to know that their vehicles are disinfected, they're clean. We're going to try to, from this point going forward during the pandemic, we're going to try to use a jail van to transport, and not transport people in the vehicles if we don't have to. We still can in emergencies, if we need to, but going forward, if we arrest somebody, we'll try to call for the van, try to cut down on the chance of getting our vehicle contaminated. Something to think about: the officers are in their vehicles 12 hours a day, so they spend a lot of time in the vehicle, so they definitely don't want to get it contaminated."

W.C. MANN/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

A SERVPRO technician wipes down a CPD vehicle Friday afternoon.

SERVPRO's Galon Miller told The Tribune, "We're concerned; we try to help out where we can, regardless. They just needed our services. This is donated, and we're not trying to make any kind of headway either way, and we're not trying to show off or anything else. We're trying to help out."

CULLMAN, Ala. – As a thank you to essential employees during the COVID-19 pandemic, local State Farm Insurance agent Tesha Brewer is hosting a Feeding Our Frontlines and Blood Drive event Wednesday and Thursday, April 15 and 16 from 11 a.m. – 1 p.m. at her State Farm Office, which is located at 909 Fisher St. SW Cullman.

On both days, free lunch will be available for the first 100 essential workers. Wednesday's event is for plant and grocery store workers and Thursday will be for medical personnel and first responders.

Brewer said workers will be asked to show an ID to obtain meals, which will include a sandwich, chips, cookie and water. The sandwiches are provided by Sweet Peppers Deli (Wednesday) and Chick-Fil-A (Thursday).

On both dies, LifeSouth will be onsite overseeing the blood drive. Anyone from the community is welcome to donate.

Brewer shared, "We just want to give back to our community. We're not asking for anything in return; anybody is welcome to come give blood, it doesn't have just be the people we're feeding. So, anybody that's an essential employee or anyone that is out is welcome to come give blood. They're (LifeSouth) practicing social distancing, so we are following those guidelines. We'll be set up outside the office under a tent."

She continued, "We just want to show our appreciation to those helping on the front lines, that's it. We just want to tell everyone thank you for still being there for us, being able to provide groceries and being able to provide for our needs."

Nick's Picks: Top 10 Basketball movies

Nick Griffin
nick@cullmantribune.com

With COVID-19 shutting down schools, businesses and seemingly everything else across the country, both movies and sports are experiencing an unprecedented hiatus. This is as good a time as ever to stay home and try to enjoy both sports and movies as best we can and the best way to do that will be combining the two. This week we'll be breaking down the top choices for films to enjoy based on each major sport, starting with baseball and ending with sports comedies. Today we'll be talking about my top 10 choices for the greatest basketball movies of all time. Feel free to share your own personal favorites as well, there is plenty to discuss.

10. Teen Wolf (1985)
Scott Howard, played by Michael J. Fox, is a high school student on a struggling basketball team. He is desperately seeking another girl who just doesn't seem to notice him, until he begins turning into a wolf. Once this change occurs and it is accepted at school and social events, Scott turns into the most liked and talked about person in town.

He gets the girl and the basketball team is doing great, but he begins to want things to go back to normal. However, his father warns him about turning into the wolf out of anger. Scott must watch his anger and do what he can to win the High School Basketball State Championship game.

This might be the most fantastical and over the top entry on the list but Teen Wolf at its core is a classic coming of age story with basketball right in the middle of it. Michael J. Fox's performance is also critical for audiences to get on board and he helps make this a solid high school movie with one of the most memorable endings in the genre.

9. Blue Chips (1994)
Until recently, Pete Bell, played by Nick Nolte, has been a winning coach for Western U's basketball team, but this year has been different. Bell knows that if his team continues to lose, he will lose his job.

He has no choice but to recruit more talent. He begins his search for better players and finds three good prospects: Chicago player Butch McRae, an accurate shooter played by Penny Hardaway; Ricky, an enormously tall boy form French Lick, Indiana played by Matt Nover; and Neon, an emotional giant played by Shaquille O'Neal. Together these three make Western a real contender if Bell can get them to sign. But it's not easy.

The first two make big demands involving a lot of cash, new homes, and farm equipment. Neon asks for nothing but gets a new luxury car. Coach Pete is already dealing with allegations of shadiness and does not want to give in, but he is forced by the alumni organization leader and has to cope with the guilt.

We all love an energetic, frantic Nick Nolte performance and Blue Chips gives us one of his best. I'm a sucker for movies and shows about the shady side of recruiting in college sports and this one is a fun, brisk version of that. With some pro athletes filling out the cast as well, Blue Chips is an interesting story about winning at all costs with a pretty satisfying finale to wind things down.

8. Hoop Dreams (1994)
This documentary follows two young African Americans through their high school years as they perfect their skills in basketball in the hopes of getting a college scholarship and eventually play in the NBA.

Arthur Agee and William Gates both show great potential and are actively recruited as they look to enter high school. They start off at the same high school, but Arthur is forced to withdraw and attend the local public school after being unable to pay an unexpected bill for tuition fees. The film follows them through their four years of high school and their trials and tribulations: injuries, slumps and the never-ending battle to maintain their grades. Through it all, their hoop dreams continue.

Hoop Dreams is one of the most critically acclaimed documentaries of all time. It's a rich, complex, heartbreaking and deeply rewarding film that uses high school hoops as a jumping-off point to explore a wealth of social issues in modern America. It's hard to describe it in much greater detail without just telling you to see it.

7. Space Jam (1996)
The owner of the amusement park planet Moron Mountain is desperate get new attractions and he decides that the Looney Tune characters would be perfect. He sends his minions to bring them to him, whether Bugs Bunny and Co. want to go or not.

Well-armed for their size, Bugs Bunny is forced to trick them into agreeing to a competition to determine their freedom. Taking advantage of their puny and stubby legged foes, the gang selects basketball for the best chance of winning. However, the Nerdlucks turn the tables and steal the talents of leading professional basketball stars to become massive basketball bruisers known as the Monstars. In desperation, Bugs Bunny calls on the aid of Michael Jordan to help them have a chance at winning their freedom.

Space Jam holds a special place in the heart of all 90s kids. An ingenious mashup of some of the world's most famous athletes and some of the world's most famous cartoon characters make for a fun, nostalgic time at the movies. Bill Murray swings by as well just to put the cherry on top of one of the 90s' most memorable sports flicks.

6. Love & Basketball (2000)
A young African American couple navigates the tricky paths of romance and athletics in this drama. Quincy McCall, played by Omar Epps and Monica Wright, played by Sanaa Lathan, grew up in the same neighborhood and have known each other since childhood. As they grow into adulthood, they fall in love, but they also share another passion: basketball. They've followed the game all their lives and both have talent on the court. As Quincy and Monica struggle to make their relationship work, they follow separate career paths through high school and college basketball and, they hope, into professional ball.

Obviously, basketball is a key component in Love & Basketball, but the point of this film is the relationship between the two main characters. Any nitpicks or flaws you can find are outweighed by how much you pull for them to succeed on their individual paths. Writer/director Gina Prince-Bythewood has put together an endearing, smart story about two characters connected by both love and basketball.

5. Glory Road (2006)
Based on the true story, in 1965, the coach of a high school girls basketball team Don Haskins, played by Josh Lucas, is invited by the Texas Western Miners to be their new head coach. He recruits seven talented, and rejected, black players to play with five white players and forms a legendary team that would go on to win the 1966 national championship against the powerful Kentucky Wildcats.

The most recent entry on this list, Glory Road tells an important story in the history of sports in America while also being a well-made, entertaining movie. The younger cast does an excellent job as the players and Jon Voight gives a great supporting performance as Adolph Rupp but Josh Lucas' performance as Haskins and James Gartner's direction are what puts the film over the top.

4. Coach Carter (2005)
In 1999, Ken Carter, played by Samuel L. Jackson, accepts the job of basketball coach for his old high school in a poor area of Richmond, CA. He's unhappy with the poor attitudes of his players as well as their performance on the court and Carter sets about to change both. He imposes a strict regime with written contracts that demand respectful behavior, a dress code and good grades for players. Any initial resistance is soon silenced as the team becomes an undefeated competitor under Carter. However, when the overconfident team's behavior begins to stray with many doing poorly in class, Carter takes immediate action. To the outrage of the team, the school and the community, Carter cancels all team activities and locks the court until the team shows academic improvement. In the ensuing debate, Carter fights to keep his methods in place, determined to show the boys that they need good values for their futures and eventually finds he has affected them more profoundly than he ever expected.

Samuel L. Jackson's performance and the way he works off the younger actors in the cast completely carry this film. Sports movies are often about underdogs overcoming adversity on the court but almost all the adversity in this one comes from off the court. Jackson's character, Coach Carter himself, also stands out as one of the most memorable fictional coaches ever put on screen.

3. White Men Can't Jump (1992)
Billy Hoyle, a white con artist who hustles basketball games with black players played by Woody Harrelson, lulls his victims into the misguided notion that white men can't match up with black players on the court. One of his victims, Sidney Deane played by Wesley Snipes, becomes Hoyle's "agent," arranging his various inner-city scams. Deane doesn't feel as though he's selling out his own people and goes along with Hoyle to provide a better life for his wife Rhonda, played by Tyra Ferrell, and son. The dynamic between Snipes and Harrelson is what makes White Men Can't Jump great. If two other actors were cast and couldn't build the same on-screen chemistry, this movie would not be as loved or as quotable as it is. Writer and director Ron Shelton landed on the top spot of yesterday's baseball list with Bull Durham and his dip into basketball has earned him one of the top spots on today's list as well.

2. He Got Game (1998)
He Got Game Tells the story of Jesus Shuttlesworth, played by Ray Allen, the most highly recruited high school basketball prospect in the country. Jesus and his dream to make it to professional basketball are overshadowed by his father, Jake, played by Denzel Washington, who is spending his life in prison for killing Jesus' mother.

Like most films that include Denzel Washington, he dominates nearly every scene of He Got Game that he's involved in. Spike Lee has put together dozens of films in his lengthy career, several of them in the sports genre, but this one sits at the top of his sports pile.

1. Hoosiers (1986)
In one of basketball's most well-known stories of redemption, this film features a volatile coach and a former star player-turned alcoholic leading a small-town basketball team on an unbelievable run to the Indiana high school state championship game. Coach Norman Dale, played by Gene Hackman, runs into several obstacles on the way there: a teacher determined to keep the best player from going out for the team, a town full of second-guessing fathers, and a group of undisciplined young players. The story of the film was inspired by the Milan Indians' state title of 1954.

For a lot of people out there, including myself, this is the quintessential basketball movie. It's a classic story about underdogs overcoming adversity both on the court and in their personal lives. Just a few years before he would go on to direct Rudy, David Anspaugh made an inspirational, classic basketball film built on stellar performances from Hackman, Dennis Hopper and Barbara Hershey among several others. Anytime you're in the mood for an uplifting story and a sports movie, Hoosiers is as good an option as any other.

With the next pick: Auburn DB Jeremiah Dinson

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Not getting invited to the NFL Scouting Combine served to further motivate safety Jeremiah Dinson, not that he needed it.

"If you know me, I always have a chip on my shoulder," said Dinson, who served as a team captain in 2019. "Trust in God is what got me here today. When I heard I didn't get a combine invite, it was tough at first. I questioned myself. I look at my journey. How I got here today and that was trusting God. I still believe in Him. I still believe in His plan. It is what it is."

Dinson didn't get to go to Indianapolis, but the NFL scouts still came to him for Auburn's Pro Day on March 6.

"A lot of teams want to see how I move, if I stay low in my transition," Dinson said after his Pro Day workout. "Do I have good hips? No wasted movements coming out of my steps. That was my big emphasis. You can throw the bench out. You can throw the 40 out. That pro agility L drill, none of that is on the field. You've got to play ball at the end of the day. That's what I feel like I did."

A three-year starter in Auburn's secondary, Dinson overcame the adversity of a season-ending knee injury as true freshman in 2015. After redshirting while recovering in 2016, he became a team leader, amassing 214 career tackles in 48 games.

Dinson believes he can be similarly productive in the NFL. All he needs is an opportunity.

"Versatility and a coach on the field. Those are things I bring," he said. "You can plug me in any position on defense. Also, I can pick up on the playbook like that. I'm a good learner, I'm a smart learner, I'm a quick learner. Those are things I bring to the team."

SIGNATURE MOMENT
From start to finish, Dinson delivered during his senior year.

In Auburn's season-opening win over Oregon, Dinson led the Tigers with 13 tackles, including two tackles for loss and his first career sack to earn SEC Defensive Player of the Week honors. He was at his best against Auburn's toughest opponents, averaging double-digit tackles against LSU, Georgia, Alabama and in the Outback Bowl.

Wallace State raising funds to support students affected by COVID-19 pandemic

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – The Wallace State Community College Future Foundation is accepting donations that will support students who have been affected in some way by the COVID-19 pandemic. The emergency aid drive is aimed at helping students overcome unexpected challenges including food insecurity, technology needs to complete their education remotely and loss of income.

"The coronavirus pandemic has created additional burdens on many of our students who, in some cases, were already facing financial roadblocks before it began," said Suzanne Harbin, director of advancement at Wallace State.

"These donations will go to help these students directly to ensure they can complete their education and realize their dream of earning a certificate or degree that will help them improve their lives."

Donations can be designated to one of five specific funds: Tame Hunger Meal Cards, Mane Miles Gas Cards, Finish with Pride Completion Scholarship, Laptops for Lions – Chromebook Loan Program, Lion's Den Dorm Deposit.

The donations will help students currently dealing with immediate needs and assist students in the future as they rebound from pandemic's far-reaching effects.

Donations can be made individually or on behalf of an organization.

To make a donation, visit www.wsccfuturefoundation.org/emergencyaid or contact Harbin at 256-352-8144 or suzanne.harbin@wallacestate.edu.

CULLMAN COUNTY, Ala. –In the middle of an already strange Easter weekend due to the current COVID-19 pandemic and social distancing guidelines in place, the Southeast was pummeled by severe weather Sunday afternoon and evening. The National Weather Service in Huntsville, as of press time Monday, had confirmed four tornadoes in north Alabama: an EF-2 in Boaz/Marshall County, and EF-1 in Shiloh/DeKalb County, an EF-1 in Johnson's Crossing/Cullman County, and an EF-0 in Collinsville/DeKalb County. NWS meteorologists are still investigating.

NWS Huntsville confirmed an EF-1 tornado on a track from Good Hope to Johnson's Crossing, and meteorologists continue to investigate other sites in Cullman County.

Roads and bridges all over the county were temporarily flooded, with "a long list" of roads washed out completely, according to Cullman EMA Director Phyllis Little. (Check www.CullmanTribune.com for the very latest. We'll post the list of closed roads once it's available.)

Little said the NWS suspects the most damage done in the county was by a single tornado that hopped across the county. She said the damage started in Cold Springs and stretches in a pattern from Johnson's Crossing, where the most damage was done, to Hanceville, then Walter and Welti and on toward Holly Pond.

"It's taking them a little bit longer to get their assessments done because they're doing them singly," she said. "They usually have two people together doing them, but they're doing them with one person instead of two due to the COVID restrictions."

OPINION

The Sovereignty of God, no. 14

Tom Fillinger
Tribune Columnist

As I write this article on March 11, 2020 as a nation and world we are immersed in a global pandemic (if you believe the media posts). What a great opportunity to believe in the absolute Sovereignty of God.

My times are in His hands and so are yours. Understand and rest in His wise control. We cannot add one hair to our head or one cubit to our stature. As Mrs. Beaver said in the "Chronicles of Narnia" said, "He is King and He is GOOD!"

Today we continue in our study of the Sovereignty of God.

Ah, that is something I cannot fathom! Such grace, such love, "passes knowledge." But if my mind is unable to discern a reason, my heart can express its gratitude in praise and adoration.

But not only should I be grateful to God for His grace toward me in the past—His present dealings will fill me with thanksgivings. What is the force of that word "Rejoice in the Lord always!" (Phil. 4:4) Mark, it is not "Rejoice in the Savior," but we are to "Rejoice in the Lord" —as "Lord," as the Master of every circumstance.

Need we remind the reader that when the apostle penned these words, he was himself a prisoner in the hands of the Roman government.

A long course of affliction and suffering lay behind him. Perils on land and perils on sea, hunger and thirst, scourging and stoning—had all been experienced. He had been persecuted by those within the church as well as by those without!

The very ones who ought to have stood by him—had forsaken him! And still he writes, "Rejoice in the Lord always!"

What was the secret of his peace and happiness? Ah! had not this same apostle written, "And we know that all things work together for good to those who God, to those who are the called according to His purpose" (Romans 8:28). But how did he, and how do we, "know," that all things work together for good? The answer is: Because all things are under the control of, and are being regulated by—the Supreme Sovereign! And because He has nothing but thoughts of love toward His own people, then "all things" are so ordered by Him—that they are made to minister to our ultimate good. It is for this cause we are to give "thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Ephesians 5:20). Yes, give thanks for "all things" for, as it has been well said "Our disappointments, are but His appointments!" To the one who delights in the sovereignty of God—the clouds not only have a 'silver lining' but they are silver all through, the darkness only serving to offset the light—

"You fearful saints
fresh courage take The clouds you so much dread,
Are big with mercy and shall break
In blessings o'er your head!"

Issues (from Front)

be concerned about the safety and health of their minor children during the present health crisis and have legitimate concerns about their minor children leaving their homes to go to the home of their other parent.

However, under the law, each parent is presumed to be fit and to make the health of their children a top priority.

Sadly, we know from experience that this is not always true.

But unless one parent can present admissible facts that will support an assertion that the other parent is acting in such a way as to put the health and safety of minor children at risk, there will be no suspension or modification of court ordered visitation or custodial time.

Mere speculation and unsubstantiated fears will not constitute sufficient evidence to temporarily alter existing visitation or custody orders.

However, parents are expected to put the needs and interest of their children above their own wants and desires and are encouraged to communicate with one another about visitation and custody exchanges to arrive at common sense solutions to protect their minor children from COVID-19.

Parents shall comply with CDC Standards

As of now, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends that a person self-quarantine if he or she recently traveled from an area deemed a hot spot for COVID-19, if he or she has symptoms of COVID-19 or lives with a person with symptoms, or if he or she has come into close contact with another person who has been confirmed with COVID-19.

Individuals who should be in self quarantine should not be around others during the quarantine period and this would include their own minor children.

All parents with minor children are also expected to adhere to CDC guidelines and to obey the proclamations issued by federal, state and local government officials that are intended to slow the transmission of COVID-19.

The failure of a parent to follow those guidelines and government directives may be used as evidence that a parent is placing the health of a minor child at risk.

Upon proof that a parent has engaged in a pattern of disregard for the health and safety of a minor child that is subject to the court's jurisdiction, a temporary order may be entered suspending or modifying visitation or physical custody orders until such time as the present crisis has passed.

2. Court Ordered Supervised Visitations.

In any case in this judicial circuit that a Circuit, District or Juvenile court has ordered that visitation between a child and his or her parents be supervised, the following rules shall apply.

Video Conference Visitation

If there is an existing court order requiring that visits between a minor child and parent be supervised and the facility or third party is no longer able or willing to supervise visits between parent and child, all previously court ordered supervised visits between the child and his or her parent(s) shall occur using available video conference technology, such as Skype, Facetime, Zoom, Teams or any other software agreeable to the parties.

The parent who has been allowed supervised visitation only shall file a notice with the court clerk providing: (i) his or her name, (ii) the name of the minor child or children subject to the court order, (iii) the email address or telephone number the parent will use for the video conference visitation, and (iv) a list of all video conference software that is available to the parent.

The clerk shall maintain the information provided as confidential and the information shall not be accessible to the general public but may be shared with parties and counsel of record to facilitate video conference visitation.

If a parent does not have the capability to engage in a video conference visitation, telephone visitation shall be substituted in its place.

If the minor child or children of a party is in the legal custody of the Alabama Department of Human Resources, the parent shall also contact the caseworker assigned to the case and provide the worker with the same information provided to the court clerk so that video conference visits can be arranged between the child and parent.

In those cases, in which the Department is not involved, a parent exercising supervised visitation shall contact the custodial parent or guardian of the child to arrange for video conference visitations.

All video conference visitations shall occur at the same times and for the same duration as previously court ordered, unless the parties mutually agree otherwise.

Recording of Video Conference Visits

Unless expressly authorized by a court with jurisdiction of the parties, there shall be no video or audio recording of the video conference visitation by any party or any other person.

Failure to abide by this order may result in the offending party being held in contempt of court and punished for contempt as provided by law.

Moving (from Front)

"bring a lot of retail tax dollars into the city of Good Hope and we are just so proud to have him coming."

Gibbs Garden Center is owned by Dusty and Heather Gibbs. Dusty Gibbs spoke to The Tribune about the decision to relocate. He said, "Holly Pond has always been good to us and I consider it my home.

"We are just out of room where we are at," he said. "The last couple of years we've been looking at different options.

"Once we started looking, it became evident that we wanted to be by the interstate and try to have that exposure, and once we finally found that last fall in Good Hope, everything just kind of fell into place. We are really excited about it. It's bittersweet as far as leaving Holly Pond."

The current location in Holly Pond is on 5 acres, so the move to 39 acres will be a significant expansion.

Gibbs explained, "We are looking to really expand and have several more greenhouses- things set up more state of the art and more things automated. In doing so, I think we will be able to offer a higher quality job and workplace and also economically be able to provide some of the goods we are already providing in certain cases even at a cheaper price than what we are doing now."

Land clearing on the property has already begun, but the rain has caused a few minor setbacks.

There will be 16 new structures in the beginning, and Gibbs hopes that the expansion will allow the company to create a few more jobs.

His vision, he said, is "to build a destination garden center in the state of Alabama."

Gibbs and his staff will begin planting mums at the new location in early June in hopes of them being ready for sale when the center opens in the fall.

"We fell in love with dealing with the McElroys down there, and it's been in their family land for a long time. I think it was appealing to them that something was going there agricultural- or horticultural-type and growing stuff because their dad had done that for years there."

In other business

Bartlett addressed the severe weather experienced on Easter Sunday, saying, "The city of Good Hope has weathered the storm very well. We had several trees down last night. Our guys, we called them in around 10:30 and they were out here until after 2 a.m. last night. We appreciate all their hard work."

City crews were back out early Monday morning taking care of downed trees and other trouble spots around the city after Sunday night's storms.

City employees are still hard at work during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Bartlett said, "We just try to keep everybody safe. They have been keeping all our mowing done; we've had several projects we have completed in the last two or three weeks pertaining to culverts, roads, ditches and just general maintenance of the city. I am really pleased with how the city looks. We are picking up trash about three days a week and when you drive through, you can tell that these guys are working hard and we are just really proud."

Road projects the City has completed or are in the process of addressing include:

- Completed turn lane at Beech Grove Road at County Road 437
- Asphalted road and added sewer line on Rushing
- Grating and gravel work on County Road 435 beginning next week
- Dead trees removed on Ryan Road
- New culvert and headwalls on Megan Lane
- New headwall and larger pipe on Ryan Road
- Repaired sinkholes, a broken drain inlet pipe and added four guide poles on White Oak Circle in Deer Run subdivision

2020 Census

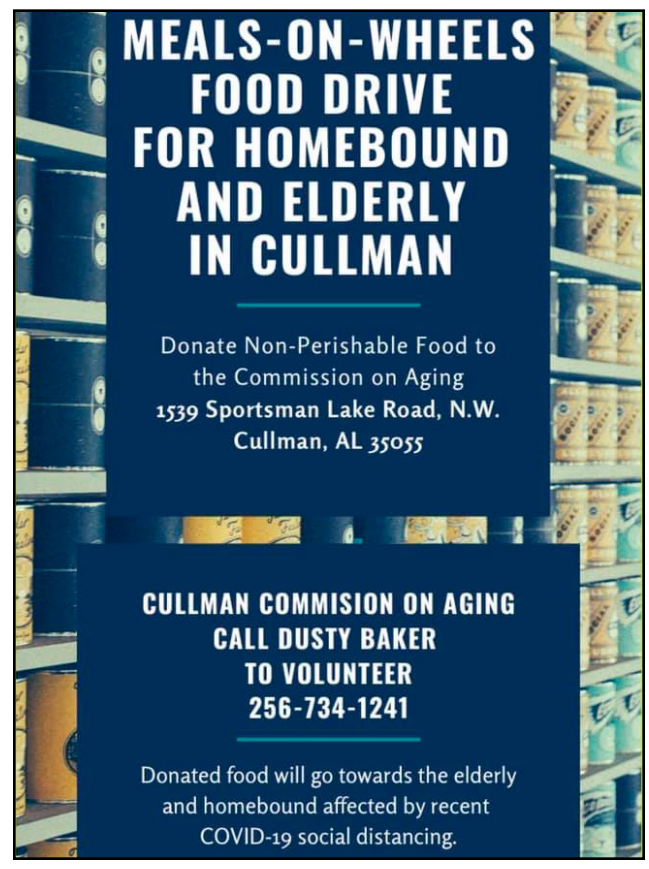

Councilwoman Susan Eller urges everyone in Good Hope and Cullman County to make sure to fill out complete the 2020 Census.

She said, "One of the things you will want to think about is during this event that we are having now, the way they know how much to send to our community is based on the numbers they gather during this count.

"It only happens every 10 years.

"If you want to make sure there is enough support when there are things happening in the community, this is the time to make that happen."
