Vinemont molding shop helping produce medical face shields for hospitals across Alabama

VINEMONT, Ala. – Many small manufacturers across the country, professional and amateur, began turning out components for medical face shields on 3D printers in response to shortages due to COVID-19, but 3D printing can be a slow process that does not lend itself to mass production. That is where Vinemont-based industrial injection molding shop The Robson Company comes in.

Tool and die maker Chris Robson has produced an injection molding die that can turn out shield frames rapidly, fast enough to have produced almost 14,000 frames in the last week.

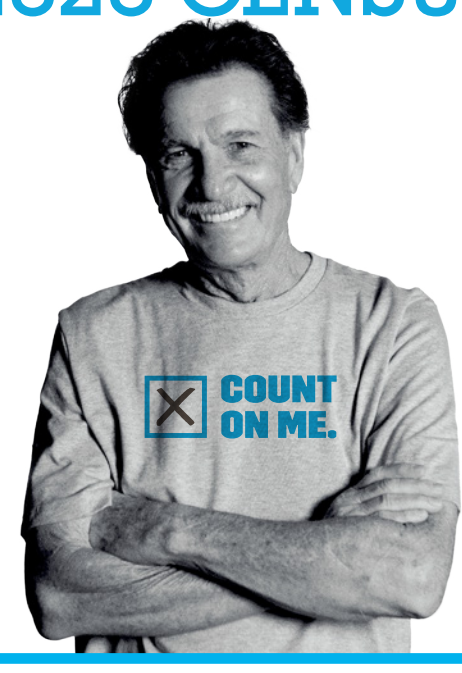

While a 3D printer can take up to three hours to produce a single frame, the injection molder is turning out a finished piece every 33 seconds!

On top of that, the frames come out of the mold hot and sterile, and do not have to go through a separate 20-minute sanitizing process used on the printed pieces, saving even more time.

Once packaged and boxed by volunteers working in five-hour shifts, the frames are sent to a group named Huntsville Fighting COVID, where volunteers fit clear shields to the frames and ship them out to hospitals across Alabama. Shields with Robson's frames have already gone to Birmingham, Huntsville, Auburn, Montgomery, Mobile and even Cullman Regional.

Huntsville Fighting COVID describes itself as "a bunch of nerdy engineers in Huntsville, and we are 3D print- » PAGE 3

ADOL launches UI Claims Tracker to assist unemployment compensation claimants

Tara Hutchison
Contributor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Alabama Department of Labor Secretary Fitzgerald Washington announced Thursday the agency has launched a new online tool to enable claimants to see the status of their claim, tell them what the next steps are, and what to expect from the Department. It includes the following information:

• What is My Claim Status? Tells you whether there is a claim in the system and whether it is eligible for benefits.

Allows you to find out if there are any issues stopping payment.

• What Happens Next? Tells you exactly what you need to do to move your claim or payment to the next step.

• When Will I Get Paid? Tells you how much you are entitled to each week. Tells you when your next payment will be made and when you can expect to see it in your bank account.

• What Have I Already Been Paid? Shows you each of the payments that have already been paid, when the payments were made, and whether there were any deductions.

• I need to reset my PIN: A link will allow you to reset your pin without assistance from ADOL staff.

"We have been working constantly to come up with innovative ways to help Alabamians get the answers they need during this period of uncertainty," said Washington.

"We hope that this tool will help people find the information they need without them having to spend hours trying to contact us.

"We continue to urge patience as we are dealing with record numbers of unemployment compensation claims."

Claimants can access the tool at www.labor.alabama.gov.

They will need their login information (SSN and pin) to access it.

Upcoming virtual field trips to feature beef cattle, honeybees

Mary Johns Wilson
Contributor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Alabama farmers will keep their Virtual Field Trips moo-ving and buzzing with upcoming tours of an Autauga County beef cattle farm and Auburn University's Bee Lab. The Virtual Field Trips are offered through Facebook Live on the Alabama Farmers Federation Facebook page every Friday at 10 a.m. through May 22.

On April 17, viewers will learn all about beef cattle as they explore Hickory Hill farm in Billingsley with farmers Taber and Grace Ellis.

"This one should be very fun for students because they'll get to see big livestock up-close and not just far off in a field," said Mary Wilson, Federation director of news services.

"They even plan to show how they use their horses to go out and check on the cattle, so viewers will be seeing a real life cowboy!"

Honeybees will be the focus of April 24's Virtual Field Trip as Geoff Williams provides a tour of Auburn University's Bee Lab.

"We've found a lot of people - students and adults alike - have questions about honeybees, ranging from whether or not honey helps combat seasonal allergies to how to help protect honeybee colonies," Wilson said.

"This field trip will allow researchers at Auburn to tell us more about what they're doing to help keep honeybee populations healthy and thriving."

Viewers are encouraged to ask questions through the comment section, and each video will include links to educational activities centered around the featured commodity.

Scheduled topics for May, subject to change, are:
- May 1 - Catfish
- May 8 - Greenhouse and nursery products
- May 15 - Forestry
- May 22 - Cotton and other row crops

To receive Facebook notifications about the Virtual Field Trips, respond as "Interested" in the event or follow the Alabama Farmers Federation page.

Previous Virtual Farm Tours and educational resources may be viewed online at www.alfafarmers.org/virtual-field-trip. Row crop farmer Jonathan Sanders of Coffee County kicked off the program April 3, focusing on peanut production.

The April 10 Virtual Farm Tour featured sisters Cassie Young and Allie Logan of Barbour County who discussed raising fruits and vegetables at their Backyard Orchards.

The Federation is Alabama's largest farm organization with more than 340,000 member families.

Judson College announces new full scholarship

Mary Amelia Taylor
Contributor

MARION, Ala. – Judson College has announced a new full scholarship opportunity for freshman and transfer students enrolling at Judson College in Fall 2020. The scholarship is made possible by a significant estate gift of the late Tommie Louise Caudle, Judson College class of 1942. Ms. Caudle's generosity has made a limited number of full scholarships available to first-time Judson students majoring in Religious Studies and expressing a call to Christian ministry. The Caudle Scholarship will cover a student's tuition, room and board, and an allowance for books and fees after gift aid from federal, state, or other sources is applied to the student's account. Application for the Caudle Scholarship is available to accepted and confirmed students enrolling at Judson College in Fall 2020 who meet scholarship qualifications and complete the Caudle Scholarship Application Form.

Born June 5, 1919 in Sylacauga, Alabama, Tommie Louise Caudle entered Judson College as a freshman during the college's centennial session, the 1938-1939 academic year. She served as a member of the Baptist Young People's Union on campus, participating in program planning on prayer, Bible study, devotion, doctrine, missions, and church loyalty. At the conclusion of her freshman year at Judson, she joined South Central Bell Telephone Company in Sylacauga, where she remained employed until her retirement in 1974. Though Caudle's time as a Judson student was short, she remained a loyal and devoted alumna of the College, keeping her involvement active with the East Central Alabama Chapter of the Judson College Alumnae Association. Caudle nurtured a strong faith in God throughout her life. She was a lifelong member of First Baptist Church of Sylacauga. She celebrated her 100th birthday with friends and Judson alumnae and administrators in June 2019. Caudle died on August 2, 2019.

For more information on the Tommie Louise Caudle Scholarship, including specific eligibility requirements and application documents, visit www.judson.edu/caudle-scholarship or contact the Judson College Office of Financial Aid at 334-683-5170.

ing face shields to help protect workers from airborne splatter.

"Even as we 3D print shields to fill the immediate need, we are rapidly moving forward to even more efficient manufacturing methods like die cutting and injection molding so that we can protect as many people as quickly as possible."

In addition to his contribution to the Huntsville project, Robson has also been contacted by groups in Guatemala and the Czech Republic about molds for their own production facilities.

On Thursday, Robson told The Tribune that being part of the COVID-19 response "is the closest thing to church, as I stated on Facebook.

"Considering how we're so separated, to bring people together by just the simple task of what we're doing is such a wonderful, wonderful feeling, and doing something to help someone else without our own regard."

Please note that The Robson Company cannot distribute shields directly. Orders must go through Huntsville Fighting COVID.

Farmers (from Front)

Mary Johns Wilson
Contributor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Alabama farmers and forest industry personnel continue working to ensure a steady supply of food, fiber and timber during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Jimmy Parnell, president of the Alabama Farmers Federation, said farmers, like other small businesses, are adapting to weather the economic storm.

"We're all experiencing COVID-19 and how it's changed our lives," Parnell said. "It's spring of the year in Alabama. Farmers are beginning to plant crops. Baby calves are being born. All those exciting things are happening. They are happening every day, but it's different. Just like other businesses, our farms are suffering from economic challenges. Prices have been low for a number of years in agriculture and something like this just makes it worse."

Changing production to meet new retail demand

Stay-home orders have created a shift in consumer demand away from restaurants and toward grocery stores. In turn, food processors are having to adjust, because food items are packaged and processed differently for the wholesale market than for retail customers.

"Restaurants — they buy big packages," Parnell said. "Most of us, for our family, want a family-sized package. So that has changed the demand significantly. When you're selling a pound or two at a time versus 100 pounds at a time, it changes that flow of things. So as food has been purchased at a different place, we have seen it change demand, and we're dealing with that."

Parnell said news of meat and poultry packers closing or slowing production is affecting farmers, but he assured shoppers the supply chain is strong and safe.

Additionally, Alabama's two toilet paper manufacturers have ramped up production to meet demand, and distributors are working overtime to keep shelves stocked.

Alabama fruit and vegetable growers innovate, see increased demand

Social distancing requirements mean farmers markets have a different look than usual, such as more space between vendors and the addition of sanitizing stations. Farmers who sell direct from the farm are innovating as well, using drive-thru or car pick-up options and distancing customers at U-picks.

"Some of our farmers that are marketing direct speak of families and groups that are coming to the farm in larger numbers maybe than they've seen in the past because kids are out of school. They can run out there and do that," Parnell said. "(That's a) good opportunity for them to buy some food that's really good, really fresh, but also see where it's grown and meet the farmers. And getting to know those farmers can be a real positive — know that they care about you, that they're growing a good product, and they are willing to share their farm with you."

Along with fruit and vegetable farmers, beef cattle and pork producers who sell direct to customers are increasing in popularity.

Sweet Grown Alabama is maintaining a list of member farmers who have produce, meat and other products available. The list includes details on how customers can buy while social distancing. For the list, visit tinyurl.com/findlocalnow.

Saving perishable farm products and helping food banks

Fortunately, thanks to increased demand for early fruits and vegetables such as strawberries, lettuce and broccoli, there is no widespread issue in Alabama with crops spoiling in the field. Alabama has many small-scale, diversified fruit and vegetable farmers, meaning they grow a greater variety of produce on fewer acres than other states. Additionally, Alabama fruit and vegetable farmers who grow for wholesale mostly sell summer crops, which won't be ready to harvest until June or July.

Large-scale fruit and vegetable producers and dairy farmers in other states have had to dump or destroy produce and milk because they've been unable to get perishable items into the food supply chain in a timely manner. Parnell said farmers would much rather donate those items, but at times, that's impossible.

"(The problem is) getting it from that mass-produced, large volume of product to a product that the consumer can actually handle," Parnell said. "I could give you a tanker load of milk, drive up to your house with 5,000 to 8,000 gallons of milk, and you wouldn't know what to do with it. But if you could get it in a gallon jug, you'd be proud to have it. So that's the challenge there."

Many Alabama farmers donate to food banks and other charitable groups to ensure minimal waste while helping those in need. Also, the American Farm Bureau Federation is working with Feeding America to match farmers who have perishable products with charitable organizations that are able to accept and distribute those items.

What can consumers do to help farmers and the supply chain?

Through all of the uncertainty, Alabama farmers and food processors are continuing work to ensure the supply chain remains strong. However, Parnell reminds shoppers that they also play an important role.

"The first thing I would say to the consumers is please do not hoard," Parnell said "There's no reason for that. There's no reason for you to go buy a month's worth of food. If you normally buy a week, buy a week's worth of food when you when you go to the store. Cook for your family. That's something special. Also, all those restaurants that we all have visited for years, they are struggling a little bit right now. So I would encourage you to go by those restaurants and buy some take out. Help those folks stay in business because you're going to want to go back there later."

The Alabama Farmers Federation's role

Parnell said the Federation is working with state and local officials to help farmers impacted by the pandemic.

"We stay in constant communication with our legislators, U.S. Department of Agriculture, everybody that's involved in the system... the governor, everybody involved in the system that we can — to help our farmers to express their needs, and the things that we need those individuals to do to help our farmers," Parnell said.

Hope for the future

While times are tough, Parnell encouraged Alabamians to focus on the good that springs out of challenges.

"Those positives are our family, our friends, our neighbors, our faith — those things that we have all probably looked at a little differently of late than we were looking at when we were so busy a few months ago," Parnell said. "Know that food is abundant and available and safe — the most affordable (food) of anywhere in the world is produced here. That is something we can all be proud of."

Alabama Men's Basketball lands the No. 16-ranked signing class in the nation with 4 additions

Five-star guard Josh Primo, graduate transfer Jordan Bruner, JUCO All-American Keon Ellis and freshman standout Darius Miles headline the newest additions

Aaron Jordan
UA Athletics

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. – The Alabama men's basketball team added four signees to its 2020 signing class during the late signing period, head coach Nate Oats announced on Wednesday. The newest additions, along with fall signee Keon Ambrose-Hylton (Toronto, Ontario/Andrews Osborne Academy [Ohio]), combine to make up the 16th-ranked class in the nation by Scout.com and the No. 18 overall class according to 247Sports.com.

In addition to having a top-20 class, Oats also welcomes one of the top available graduate transfers in the country in Yale's Jordan Bruner, who earned First Team All-Ivy League this past season.

Bruner led the conference in overall rebounds (9.2) and defensive rebounds (7.4) per game, ranked fourth in assists (3.8 apg) and was third in blocked shots (1.7 bpg) while adding 10.9 points per contest during the 2019-20 campaign.

Headlining the other signees is five-star prospect Josh Primo, who is rated by 247Sports.com as the No. 27 overall player and the No. 7 overall combo guard in this year's class. Primo, a native of Toronto, Ontario, plays on the same AAU team as Ambrose-Hylton and reclassified from a 2021 recruit to the class of 2020 after completing his prep requirements early from Royal Crown International.

Primo is joined by NJCAA Second Team All-American Keon Ellis out of Florida SouthWestern State. The Fort Myers, Fla., native is rated by 247Sports.com as the No. 3 overall JUCO player and No. 1 combo guard in the nation. Meanwhile, freshman standout Darius Miles is tabbed the 26th-best small forward in the nation by Rivals.com and comes to Tuscaloosa from IMG Academy in Bradenton, Fla.

The group joins Ambrose-Hylton, who signed as a consensus four-star prospect and is rated the No. 2 overall player in Canada's National Player Rankings.

"We're ecstatic about the five players we're bringing into our program," Oats said. "We wanted to bring in young men with high character that fit our system, and we feel we've done exactly that throughout the entire class. We have five skilled, long, athletic players that all fit into an up-tempo spread system we've implemented since we've arrived on campus. We feel all five of these players will immediately help us reach our goals of making this one of the best programs both in the SEC and nationally."

Below is a breakdown of each of the newest signees and a quote from coach Oats on each player.

Coach Oats on Jordan Bruner
"We felt like Jordan was the best grad transfer available this season based on what we needed. He provides us a big that impacts the game tremendously on both sides of the ball. Offensively, he's a big that is capable of being a playmaker on the perimeter while also providing a presence inside. His basketball IQ and overall skill level are exactly what we needed to put us in a position to contend on a nationally relevant level. Defensively, he can provide rim protection, move well enough to switch and guard perimeter players, rebound the ball and then push the ball in the break to help our transition game. He's played in multiple NCAA tournaments and pushed Yale to unprecedented heights in his time there. We're looking for him to do the same in his year with us."

Coach Oats on Keon Ellis
"Keon is dynamic scorer that's proven he can score at a high-level while being efficient as well on offense. He plays the defensive side of the ball as well, being a long perimeter defender with quick instincts. While his offensive production has us really excited, we're equally excited for his defensive contributions he will provide as well. He's a proven winner having played on the top-ranked junior college team in the country this season. He led them in scoring while shooting over 40 percent from three-point range. He's exactly what we're looking for in a scoring guard in both our offensive and defensive systems."

DARIUS MILES

- Signed with Alabama over Minnesota, Memphis, Georgetown, LSU, Texas A&M and Boston College, among other schools

Coach Oats on Darius Miles
"Darius has tremendous upside as a big wing that can play multiple positions. He's exceptionally skilled for his size on the perimeter. One of the best aspects of his game as I watched him was his passing ability from his position. His outlet passes and ability to handle the ball in the break will enable us to play even faster than what we had before. He has all the tools to be a great defender and rebounder as well. Playing his last year as a postgrad has given him a head start on what will be required of a freshman at a high major D-I level. We think once he's fully into our program he can contribute to our overall culture of winning up-tempo basketball and play multiple positions for us."

JOSH PRIMO
Toronto, Ontario – Royal Crown International

- Chose Alabama over the likes of Creighton, Ohio State, Arizona State, Auburn and California, among others

Coach Oats on Josh Primo
"Josh gives us that other ball-handler in the backcourt to play alongside our other guards. His size at the guard position allows us to play multiple guards on the floor together as we like to do. He's a big-time gym rat that's shown great improvement even here recently. His play in February showed he's ready to immediately contribute heavily for us as we compete for an SEC title. We love Josh's overall versatility, play-making ability, shooting and his experience playing on Canadian national teams. He's a proven competitor on both ends of the floor on an international level of play."

'I want to help people': former Auburn student-athlete nurses fight on COVID front lines

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Four years into her nursing career, former Auburn volleyball student-athlete Mary Hannah Arrington noticed how quiet hospitals can be when family members of patients aren't there.

"It's really eerie," said Arrington, a 2016 graduate of Auburn University's School of Nursing. "Then I get to my assignment and see that I'm floated to a COVID unit and you walk into this hot zone and your mentality completely shifts.

"'Whoa. This is it. We're taking care of COVID patients.' I'm not going to lie, the first time I went up there, I was pretty scared. Going from that quiet hallway to walking into that hot zone, it's definitely a big shift."

A second-generation nurse, Arrington kept her fear to herself, making sure her personal protective equipment defended her against an invisible invader.

"Then halfway through the day, you're just taking care of patients just like you normally take care of patients," said Arrington, an intensive care unit nurse at Emory University Hospital in Atlanta. "You forget that you're in a COVID unit just because you're so focused on trying to take care of these patients and get them better.

"That first morning, I was so anxious and hyper aware. Yes, there's a lot of PPE, and yes there are sick people, and yes there are a lot of things going on, but the teamwork, the nursing care, everything. It's our job, you do it every day."

Mary Hannah and former Auburn volleyball teammate Alyssa Ivey are teaming up again. This time, their opponent is the coronavirus and the illness it causes, COVID-19.

Ivey began a new ICU position this week at Saint Thomas Midtown Hospital in Nashville, working on the COVID unit.

"Honestly, I think if you're a nurse you're mentally prepared for that to begin with," Ivey said. "If you're an ICU nurse like Mary Hannah, it's all that we've known. You know you're going to jump into it and still do the best that you can.

"This summer, I did travel nursing and was in the burn ICU. I learned a lot and came out a better nurse from it. That's kind of all we can do right now."

Exhausted after 12-hour shifts, Alyssa and Mary Hannah draw encouragement from the appreciation expressed to health care workers during the pandemic.

"To see the community being so supportive of what you do, I'm so grateful and thankful," Arrington said. "It's crazy. I'm just going to work. I'm just doing my job. This is what I love to do, I want to help people. I do this every day."

A nearby neighborhood provided breakfast, lunch and dinner each day to Arrington's COVID unit.

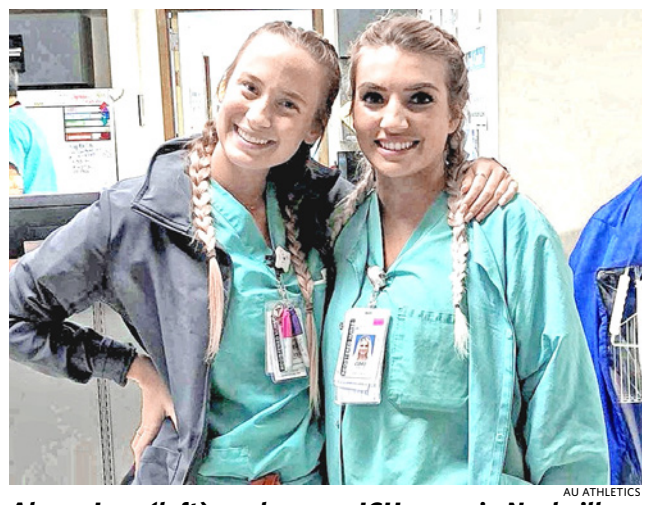

"The Midtown community claps and cheers every night at 8 p.m.," she said. "It's really cool to see the Atlanta community come together in a time like this when everything is so scary. It's incredible."

Ivey believes the renewed appreciation for her profession will prevent nurses from burning out.

"I think it will continue after this too, which is special," she said. "It's hard because patients can't have their families there with them because we can't have any visitors, so we're kind of their family and support system right now, too, so they've been really thankful."

Drawing on some of the skills they developed as student-athletes, Ivey and Arrington are fighting on the front lines of a global conflict.

"Nursing, it's almost all teamwork," Ivey said. "Especially in a pandemic like this, you've got to ask for help because it's something we're not super familiar with.

"Especially Auburn, it's all about family and teamwork, I feel like that has helped me so much throughout all of this, being able to rely on coworkers. It definitely has helped me in all aspects of life. It was tough, but now looking back on it, it's gotten me very far in life."

"You're never alone," Arrington said. "Everyone's working together. Emory's logo is 'We're all in this together,' and you really are.

"It's intense, but you have to remember those teamwork skills that you've learned as a student-athlete. I think that's really helped me, especially right now when you're on a whole new team that you're not used to."

Not all heroes wear capes. Some, like Mary Hannah Arrington, Alyssa Ivey and millions like them, wear scrubs, gowns, gloves, goggles and masks.

EDUCATION

‘Music education is alive and well!’

Maggie Darnell
maggie@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Everyone knows students’ courses of study have been drastically impacted due to the COVID-19 pandemic, but some wonder and some forget about the electives-things like fine arts. The Tribune spoke with longtime Cullman City Schools educator Tim Clemmons, who teaches music at both East and West Elementary Schools and is the director of the sixth-grade chorus, the “Star Singers.”

“My sixth-grade chorus was impacted significantly,” said Clemmons. “The week before getting out for the school year we were to perform at the Alabama State Choral Assessment in Florence.

“It was canceled, and the students were heartbroken. They had worked so hard and looked forward to sight reading and performing their two songs before adjudicators. I am sure they would have done well. We were also preparing for an end-of-the-year spring concert at the two elementary schools.”

He continued, “The sixth-grade general music classes were to start our last unit using Orff instruments (e.g. xylophones, metallophones and glockenspiels). The piece is always challenging, but very rewarding once it all comes together. There is no way to teach this online.

“The fourth graders are learning to read music with recorders. I would have loved to give them their recorders so that they could practice. I do have a wonderful online resource for them to continue learning, but they would still need my guidance. The second and third grades were going to sing many songs. I will try to incorporate some of the music into the lesson plans next year.”

Clemmons talked about his online curriculum.

“After spring break, my lessons were made available on the East and West Elementary websites. The students are encouraged to continue further study in some of the areas we did not finish in class. The lessons are geared to encourage further exploration and interest in music over a varied curriculum.

“For example, second graders are learning about instruments of the orchestra, third graders are learning about Beethoven, fifth graders are learning about different genres of music, and so forth. Students will find educational websites, video clips, and movies that reinforce and/or supplement what we would have learned in the classroom.”

Clemmons said he doesn’t see this move to online learning as something that will have long-lasting negative effects on his students.

“Even though our students have missed a great deal of music education instruction, our students will be fine,” he said. “Through my 38 years in education, I have learned that if you are going to be a successful teacher you have to be flexible. We are bending, but we are also adapting. This is not an insurmountable problem. Music education is alive and well!”

Clemmons said there are many areas where music education is so vital in a child’s life, expounding:

“One: We sing songs in different languages from many cultures all over the world. This helps them to have an appreciation for diversity.

“We can all work together as a global society if we understand one another better; two: Memory skills are enhanced through singing and/or playing music. Music notation must be memorized and followed at precise times in a performance. Lyrics of songs must also be sung from memory; three: Comprehension is also necessary for performing music.

“All the lyrics, notes, and music symbols must be understood so that a proper interpretation can be rendered; four: Teamwork is key when making music together. Singers and instrumentalists can only be successful in ensembles when everyone is working toward a common goal.

“It is so rewarding for the students, and the music teacher, when after long rehearsals the music is finally mastered. The sense of accomplishment builds confidence; five: Music being one of the fine arts is not only cerebral, but aesthetic. Music can help children to feel a wide range of emotion. Children love singing songs that make them laugh, but they also need songs that are reflective.

“Music is not only to be learned, but ultimately has to be felt. Musicians learn to listen to others, sense emotion, and react with greater depth and understanding; and six: One of the most useful benefits of music education is the increased ability to process situations and find solutions mentally. Those with musical training have been found to have higher levels of grey matter volume in their brains, which are directly tied to auditory processing and comprehension.”

Agriplex (from Front)

maggie@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – The North Alabama Agriplex normally has a bounty of programs for children and adults to enjoy. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, however, that schedule has been disrupted. The Tribune spoke with Agriplex Director Rachel Dawsey for an update.

“All of April is canceled,” she said. “We are waiting to see about May. For Earth Day, we had to cancel at Cullman City Primary School for Earth Day on the 22nd, so we’ve been sending alternative resources for the teachers. We have been posting a lot to our social media from other agencies’ resources.”

But while programming may be paused for the moment, the Agriplex has introduced the Cullman Grown Drive Up Market, an online farmers’ market with drive-thru produce pickup to help consumers as well as local farmers.

How does it work?

“We distribute produce from local farmers. You order the produce you want from Monday noon to Tuesday noon and you can pick up your order Wednesday between 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the North Alabama Agriplex. The products we distribute change week by week - depending on the weather and availability.”

The Agriplex is located at 1714 Tally Ho St. SW, Cullman, AL 35055.

Dawsey encouraged those interested to stay up-to-date on the market and other resources the Agriplex posts by following its Facebook page at www.Facebook.com/NorthAlabamaAgriplex.

Museum (from Front)

christy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – The Cullman County Museum’s doors might be closed at the moment, but the museum director Drew Green invites everyone to join him on Facebook for Stories from the Museum. Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Green selects an interesting object found at the museum and tells its story and its importance in the history of Cullman County.

Green is hoping everyone enjoys his Stories from the Museum videos during the COVID-19 pandemic.

“I was doing them every day and then when I realized this was probably going to be longer than a month,” Green said.

“I’m spacing it out and doing it every other day. I am still posting the regular historical photos, and then we are also sharing items we have for sale in the gift shop because we can mail those without having any contact with people.”

The museum has always worked with the area homeschoolers, but with the public and private school students at home, Green is trying to help everyone with his fun history lessons.

“We are in this organization, The American Alliance of Museums, and its museums from all over the country,” he said. “It’s small ones like we are and big ones like The Met (Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City).

“They have a daily dispatch, they call it ‘Dispatch from the Museums,’ and it’s all the people sharing ideas about how they are staying relevant. That’s where I got the idea.”

Green’s favorite video he has done so far is on the topic of the Native Americans, Cherokees, and “the three sisters.” Other topics he has covered are Big Jim Folsom’s shoes, stereoscopes, the Civil War and Colonel Cullmann.

The American Alliance of Museums has encouraged its members to use the hashtag #virtualmuseumtours. This helps people find and join in on the fun stories from museums around the country.

April would normally be a very busy time for the Cullman County Museum.

Green explained, “This is when a lot of the ‘snowbirds’ in Florida usually head back home. We get a lot of visitors stopping by on their way back home.”

The Alabama Department of Tourism’s April Walking Tours are another big draw for the museum, and those walks have been canceled for 2020.

Said Green, “We’ve really been growing it and it’s been really successful, but they had to cancel it this year because of the social distancing.”

Green said there are a few ideas he is considering for possible virtual walking tours in the near future.

Green welcomes your suggestions and topic ideas.

“If someone is studying something or they know of something we have, and they are interested, I will be glad to do that,” he said.

Send suggestions to cullmanmuseum@gmail.com or call Monday-Friday from 9 a.m.- 4p.m., 256-739-1258.

He added, “For any students or teachers, any way we can help them get through this, we will try.”

Follow the Cullman County Museum on Facebook to see previous videos and to make sure you catch the new ones.

Green said, “We are hanging in there and we’re waiting for this journey to be over and looking for brighter days. In a few of my videos, I say, ‘When you can come back to the museum.’ I’m trying to do teasers. I’m trying to think of things that are interesting and also educational for the kids that are using it for school.

“Also, to kind of keep people’s interest in the museum and create an anticipation of our reopening and a desire to come and see what we have in person.”

7 p.m. on WVTM
The Blacklist

A new episode called "Gordon Kemp" revolves around a blacklist case that forces Liz (Megan Boone) into the uncomfortable position of having to choose between Red (James Spader) and the Task Force. Meanwhile, Red does everything he can think of to calm a panic-stricken Ilya Koslov (guest star Brett Cullen), who can't shake the feeling that he is under surveillance. Diego Klattenhoff also stars.

7 p.m. on DISN
Movie: Peter Rabbit

After the death of his longtime nemesis Mr. McGregor (Sam Neill), mischievous Peter Rabbit (voice of James Corden) and his friends take over the late farmer's manor in Will Gluck's cheeky 2018 adaptation of the classic children's stories of Beatrix Potter, which combines live action and computer animation. Rose Byrne co-stars as the animals' human friend, Bea, a character modeled on Potter; Daisy Ridley, Margot Robbie and Domnhall Gleeson also are heard. Although some Potter purists objected to the contemporary tone, a sequel is scheduled for 2020 release.

7 p.m. on HBO
Movie: War Dogs

Todd Phillips co-wrote and directed this 2016 comedy-drama, based on a Rolling Stone article by Guy Lawson, although the film takes liberties with a number of factual points. The story follows two international arms dealers (Jonah Hill, Miles Teller) who find themselves completely in over their heads after they land a $300 million contract to supply weapons to the Afghan military. Bradley Cooper, Kevin Pollack and Ana de Armas also star.

8 p.m. on FOOD
Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives

The new episode "Hometown Inspiration" finds host Guy Fieri hitting the road, hoping to meet some chefs who have drawn inspiration from their personal roots. In Logan, Utah, he finds a spot serving such memorable plates from Louisiana as a marrow butter burger and blackened chicken pasta. A Denver eatery noted for its Detroit-style pizza also offers a new take on french fries, while in Portland, Ore., vegan diners are flocking to a place that specializes in vibrant Israeli flavors.

9 p.m. on TCM
Movie: Deliverance

An ordinary rafting trip turns into a nightmarish journey for four businessmen in this 1972 drama. Burt Reynolds, Jon Voight, Ned Beatty and Ronny Cox star as the four men who brave the rapids of a backwoods river. But there is more to brave than they bargained for when they encounter two evil mountain vagrants (Billy McKinney, Herbert Coward). John Boorman directed the adaptation of James Dickey's novel.

9 p.m. on MAX
Strike Back

This intense international action drama calls it a day with a series finale that sees the S20 team receiving some shocking intel from an unlikely Russian informant. Acting on the news, they decide to reunite for one final mission to avenge their fallen comrades by tracking down the nefarious Arianna (Ivana Milicevic). This time around, though, they're going to do things a little differently. Warren Brown, Daniel MacPherson and Alin Sumarwata star.

9:30 p.m. on WBIQ
Dishing With Julia Child

In the first of two new episodes, "The Potato Show," Rick Bayless recalls Julia Child's memorable segment on preparing spuds, while on-camera collaborator and close Child friend Jacques Pépin talks about how much Child loved butter, and how she always wanted to meet the entire staff at any restaurant where she dined. Then, in "To Roast a Chicken," Vivian Howard and Marcus Samuelsson remember one of Child's most celebrated episodes and recall how she wanted viewers to grasp the value of using prime ingredients.

"Peter Rabbit" airs on Disney Channel.

"I don't want to start nuthin' . . .but I can't have a proper funeral." Those who knew Rev. Doug Reeves are laughing. He put similar posts on Facebook every day. Bro. Doug exchanged time for eternity at UAB hospital Monday, April 13, 2020. He is survived by his wife of 55 years, Judy Williams Reeves; daughters Dewana Fountain (Robert) and Dina Reeves; grandsons Douglas and Phillip Eady; step-grandsons Matthew and Jake Fountain; great-granddaughter and delight of his heart Naomi Grace Eady; step great-grandson Will Fountain; beloved sister Kathy Mobley (Denny); a host of nieces and nephews whom he loved dearly; and his faithful dog Ole Man. He was born Nov. 6, 1944 to W. C. Reeves and Naomi Turner Reeves. He is preceded in death by his parents; sister Faye; grandparents Samuel and Leona Denny Turner, and Thomas and Lela Amos Reeves. He accepted Jesus Christ as his Savior when he was 14 years old, and he accepted the call to preach when he was 17. He did the work of an evangelist, had Birmingham and Bessemer jail ministries, and Brother Bryan and Jimmie Hale ministries from 1969-1972. He accepted his first church in 1972, and was a full-time pastor for 44 years. At his retirement, he was pastor of East McFarland Baptist Church in Tuscaloosa, AL. where he served for 29 years. He loved sharing the gospel and he witnessed to others wherever he went. He had the gift of hospitality and enjoyed entertaining friends. He loved the Bible Lands and made close to twenty trips to the land of Israel and other Bible lands with his close friends, Dr. Donnell and Sandra Brown with Experiencing Bible Lands Tours. He took great delight in introducing others to the Bible Lands. Doug was a Godly man and a man of prayer. The Doug Reeves one saw in the pulpit was the same man at home and with family and friends. He was well disciplined, a man of integrity, loved people, and gave generously to others. He had an extensive prayer list and prayed daily for each person on the list. He studied his Bible and prepared sermons every week. The call to preach never left him. Doug was a humorist and could find humor in ordinary and even mundane things. He was a great storyteller and used his humor daily and from the pulpit. He loved to laugh and enjoyed making others laugh. There was always laughter in his home and everywhere he went. His laughter and storytelling will be sorely missed by family and friends. In December 2018, he was diagnosed with Acute Myeloid Leukemia (AML) and fought it for seventeen months. He suffered greatly, but continued to serve the Lord. During his sickness, he served as interim pastor at South Sauty Baptist church, Langston, AL. Viewing will be available to family and friends at New Hope #2 Baptist Church Friday, April 17, 2020 from 12:30 p.m. until 2:30 p.m. Due to the restrictions in place because of the Coronavirus, a limited number of people will be allowed into the church at a time. CULLMAN, Ala. – Easter Sunday marked the second anniversary for Cullman's popular eatery 412 Public House, and behind the restaurant's success in Executive Chef Ricardo (Rico) Nishimura. He moved to the United States 20 years ago from Sao Paulo, Brazil on a tennis scholarship and on Jan. 17, 2020, he officially became a United States citizen. The soft-spoken chef, sporting one of his many pairs of colorful Crocs and doughnut novelty socks, sat down with The Tribune to explain how Cullman, Alabama became the place he proudly calls home.

"I moved here just myself. I got a tennis scholarship to play for Wallace State. I played tennis and soccer," Rico explained.

When he first moved to the United States, Rico moved to Bristol, Tennessee where he stayed less than a year before moving to attend Wallace State Community College.

Rico was one of the top ranked junior tennis players in Brazil.

He said, "Some agents came and said they were looking for some players to play junior college and so I sent a tape of me playing. That's how it got started."

When he came to Wallace State, Rico did not speak English, only Portuguese.

He said of his move to Wallace, "I love it. Everybody is always so supportive and helped me so much in terms of holidays and invited me for holidays because I didn't know anything. The culture and everything was so new for me, but I got so many help."

His entire family still lives in Brazil and visiting them has been hard with the new restaurant keeping him so busy.

While playing tennis and soccer in college, Rico found a job washing dishes at The All-Steak, which led to an interest in cooking.

"I just started getting an interest in cooking when I started working in some local restaurants.

"To be honest, I never did so much cooking. I started washing the dishes and helping the other chefs prep. I started moving up and working a little on the fry side and helping the chef with prep and I liked it," he said.

"There are so many things you can do and the interaction with people, that's what I love the most here. When I get to know the customers, the relationship we get to have with them- everybody is so nice here and I just love it."

Rico developed a passion for cooking and enrolled in Wallace State's Culinary Arts Program.

"Every chef has a different taste of things. One likes savory more and one likes a little sweeter. What I love about cooking is you can always do so many things. Every time I see a recipe, I always want to do it differently," he said.

After completing his program at Wallace, Rico continued working under other chefs and eventually felt he was ready to run his own kitchen. He worked with chefs at Terri Pines, Chamblee's and Brothers.

"I think working under them, it made me who I am. I think everybody I worked with got me better," he smiled. "They pushed me to be better because you can always learn something with anybody. I am still learning. Even if I hire somebody who has never cooked before, maybe they can always show me something like, 'Wait a minute, that's a better way to do it.'"

Rico likes cooking all things but especially loves pasta and seafood.

He added, "Pretty much anything, I love it. From taco to pizza to pasta, steak and seafood. My favorite has always been Italian food because I use always these ingredients you pretty much use on everything- garlic, fresh basil and more garlic and butter."

What does he make at home on a day off?

He laughed, "Honestly, I don't cook at home. All I have at home right now is... people say, 'You must be eating good at home' and I say 'No, I don't. I just eat microwavable food."

If he were to cook at home, he said, "Whatever is the easiest and doesn't include washing so many dishes later."

One dish he enjoys is peanut butter on a blueberry bagel with bananas.

As he learned the ways of the kitchen, becoming a U.S. citizen had been on his mind.

He said, "I'd been working for over 10 years for my citizenship. First, I had to get my green card, and after a few years to obtain the green card, you can apply for citizenship.

"It's been a long process, but it's always been my dream to be a U.S. citizen actually because I just love it. I love the culture, the people, plus, I've been living here now most of my life."

Rico will turn 39 years old later this year and has been in Alabama most of his adult life.

The process of becoming a citizen was long and Rico described it as "nerve racking" due to only having two chances to pass the test.

"I did Ok and passed first try," he said. "I was so relieved! It was something I had been trying for."

His work family organized a surprise party for Rico, and of his family back in Brazil, he said, "They were excited because they knew that's what I wanted. So they were really excited for me."

Rico considers himself blessed to not only be a U.S. citizen, but also to have the opportunity to run his own kitchen.

He said of his partners and staff, "They came to me to help me to fulfill my dream which is to have my own kitchen. They have been a big influence on my dream, too, so I couldn't have done it without them."

As for being homesick for Brazil, his parents, two sisters and three nephews, Rico said, "I did a lot, but now I don't think about it much. My first few years, it was hard. I thought I wasn't going to make it. I was like, 'I want to go home to my friends and my family.' Now, I think if I went home, I would get homesick for here. This is home now. It is."
