CULLMAN, Ala. – It was a long year for the McNeal family. In March 2019, Sandre McNeal had just lost her father and was making arrangements for his funeral when she fell ill and had to go to urgent care, which sent her to Cullman Regional. After she was stabilized and released long enough to attend the funeral, she was sent to UAB Hospital where tests revealed that she was suffering from two different kidney disorders, one long-term but previously undiagnosed and the other acute. After two weeks of inpatient treatment, she was discharged but had to continue with home-based dialysis and steroid treatment. Over time, these procedures diminished in effectiveness to the point that the family and its physicians knew that something more drastic must be done. » PAGE 7

5-member Cullman County Commission bill to be introduced

Randall Shedd
Contributor

CULLMAN, Ala. – When the Alabama Legislature returns this session, the local Cullman County legislative delegation will introduce the long talked about local bill to increase public representation on the Cullman County Commission.

The idea has been discussed at community meetings for a long time and the legislative delegation has spent a lot of time on the details to try to have a county government structure that provides citizen representation for all and a structure that can respond to economic and infrastructure development needs of the future.

The following is a summary of the local legislation:

• The legislative delegation believes Cullman County's population growth has outgrown the three-member county governing body concept, and therefore proposes to add elected representation for all four corners of the county.

• Upon being fully implemented this legislation would not add additional cost to the taxpayers

• Rather than two full-time associate commissioners, this local legislation would add to the public's representation by having four part-time commissioners

• Four associate commissioners would represent the four sections of the county; northeast, southeast, northwest and southwest areas of the county by residency requirements.

• To promote countywide unity, all commissioners would run countywide.

• The chair could reside anywhere in Cullman County and run countywide.

• The legislation changes the title from Chairman to a gender-neutral title of Commission Chair.

• The legislation would require at least one meeting per month be conducted in the evening to provide the working public an opportunity to attend commission meetings.

• To ensure continuity, terms of associate commissioners will be staggered, with the two new commissioners serving a two-year term, then four-year terms thereafter.

• Beginning with the new commissioners in November 2022, part-time commissioners' salaries will be $25,000 per year.

• No change in the Chairman's salary

• Current associate commissioners would be "grandfathered in" at their current pay.

Cullman man facing arson charge in JCR Recycling fire

Wendy Sack
wendy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – A Cullman man is facing a misdemeanor third-degree arson charge for starting the fire that occurred at JCR Recycling in southeast Cullman Saturday, April 25.

According to Cullman Police Department Sgt. Adam Clark, Saturday's blaze was the second one started at JCR by the man, Joseph Theodore Fisher, Sr., 59. The first was in January of this year.

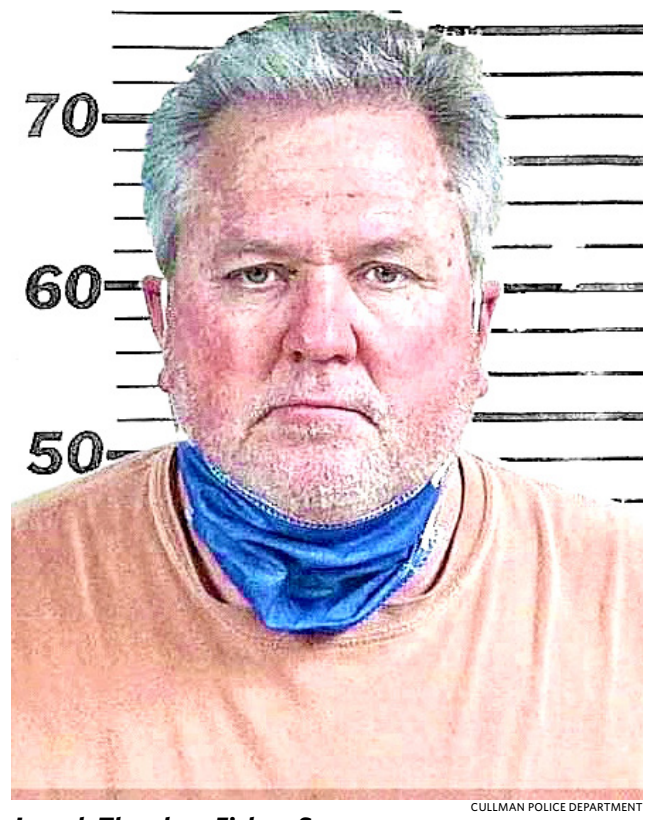

JCR Recycling, located at 1611 22nd St. SE, is owned by Fisher's son.

"The fire was started by Joseph Fisher, Sr." said Clark. "He works there for his son. His son owns JCR Recycling. He said he brought a trailer back from Georgia. It had a pallet and some other trash in it and some rats in there. So he pulled all that stuff out and lit it on fire. He said he was approximately 20 to 30 feet away from the building. He said he checked on it a couple of times, and the last time he checked on it, it had just gotten away from him and it lit the building on fire."

Clark continued, "The problem is, that is the second time that he's caused a fire at JCR Recycling. The problem with it is, is that number one, he doesn't have a burn permit, and number two, it was really windy that day. He shouldn't have been burning anyway, especially that close to a building. Because of that, he is going to be charged with arson third, which is a misdemeanor, which is basically reckless burning which then causes a structure fire."

Clark explained why Fisher is being charged with arson.

"The fact that he was recklessly burning stuff and he should not have been burning anything," he said, "I mean, we're going to charge him. He's wasting our resources- fire department, water, police. You got several police officers down there, two fire trucks. Investigators get called in. You're wasting water."

CULLMAN POLICE DEPARTMENT

Joseph Theodore Fisher, Sr.

Clark said Fisher was arrested Saturday on felony warrants in an unrelated case.

"He had a felony grand jury indictment for two counts of theft first (degree) and two counts of receiving stolen property first (degree)," he said.

Fisher is the owner of Cullman Logistics.

Wallace State offering Young Farmer Entrepreneur Camps

Gail Crutchfield
WSCC

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – Wallace State Community College will host two three-day camps for teens and young adults interested in learning about building their own farming business. The Young Farmer Entrepreneur Camps will be held June 1-3 on the main campus in Hanceville and the other June 15-17 at the Oneonta campus.

Wallace State Farm Manager and Instructor Travis Kress said area high school students who are looking for ways to earn money during the summers might consider farming as an option.

"They could farm and have the flexibility of setting their own hours and create a cash flow," he said.

Another important fact to note, Kress said, is that the average age of the American farmer is the late 50s and that age has been increasing by a decade with each census.

"That age increase tells you that there's nobody coming in behind them," Kress said. "They're looking into retirement; who's going to take their spot?"

Kress added that with the ongoing pandemic, it's more important than ever that we secure the future of America's food supply.

"It really ought to open eyes about our food supply," he said. "If we get 10 to 15 years down the road and something like this happens again and all the current farmers are retired, where's our food security? With imports being shut down, we're relying more on domestic food now than we ever have."

The camps will cover the subjects of:

• Soil Science to understand the different soil types, what crops grow best in those types and how to manipulate the soil for specific purposes

• Fertilization to understand how to read soil samples and how to apply the proper type of fertilizer

• Agriculture Equipment Usage and Safety to learn how to safely mount and dismount tractors and how to hook and unhook implements

• Marketing to learn how to develop a marketing plan, the difference between retail and wholesale markets and other options for selling products

• Business Planning to learn how to plan crops from start to finish to determine where a farmer will make money and funding options

• Agriculture Assistance Agencies for Young Farmers to learn what programs are available for assistance

• Vegetable and Fruit Production Basics to learn how to grow and maintain fruit and vegetable crops

The camps are for ages 16 and up and will be limited to eight participants each to comply with social distancing. The camp fee is $100, but participants can save $25 by registering by May 15.

Wallace State's Carter Goodwin named NJCAA Division I Honorable Mention All-American

Russell Moore
WSCC

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – Wallace State men's golf sophomore Carter Goodwin continues to rack up individual honors. Goodwin was named a National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) Division I PING Honorable Mention All-American this week by the Golf Coaches Association of America (GCAA), a week after being named to the NJCAA Division I PING All-District IV Team by GCAA.

Goodwin is the 23rd NJCAA All-American in the program's rich history.

Goodwin, a Spain Park graduate, tallied seven Top 10 finishes during his Wallace State career, capping it with a fifth-place finish at the Coastal Alabama Invitational in February.

He was an All-Tournament selection in the inaugural Dan York Memorial Tournament last September, placing third overall.

Goodwin, who has signed to golf at Appalachian State next season, was among the golfers to help Wallace State finish ninth nationally last spring at the NJCAA Division I National Championships.

Wallace State golf coach Sylas Elliott is among the 1st-team NJCAA All-Americans in program history.

2004 SEC Championship Game: MVP Jason Campbell recalls unbeaten Auburn season

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Sixteen seasons later, Jason Campbell vividly remembers Auburn's plan for the 2004 SEC Championship Game.

"I remember a lot of games, especially big games," said Campbell, the SEC's Player of the Year in 2004. "I remember a lot of intense games, big-moment games."

Auburn defeated Tennessee 38-28 on Dec. 4, 2004, at the Georgia Dome. Campbell completed 27 of 35 passes for 374 yards and three touchdowns, adding 57 rushing yards to earn MVP honors. Two months earlier, the Tigers had defeated the Volunteers 34-10 at Neyland Stadium.

"Coming off the first game, we put it in the air a good bit in the first half," Campbell said. "We attacked their defense really well. The second half, we called the dogs off and ran the ball a lot because we were already in control of the game. We had a lot of stuff planned for that game in Knoxville that night that we didn't call."

Having so many leftovers from the first matchup made game planning easy for offensive coordinator Al Borges in the rematch, Campbell said.

"We just went back to the original game plan and practiced things we didn't call in the first game that was really good stuff," he said.

"I think we caught them off guard in the SEC Championship Game because they came out expecting us to do some of the same things we did the first game, and we hit them with some of the stuff we had packaged that we didn't get to."

Some of that stuff included targeting Courtney Taylor, who made six catches for 111 yards and a touchdown.

"We liked the Courtney Taylor matchup," Campbell said, recalling that Auburn took advantage of Tennessee's man coverage in the first matchup.

"We figured they would change up and go zone. We figured we could attack their zone; we felt like we could lose their corners in space.

"That's why we opened the game with an out-and-up to Courtney Taylor. We were able to open the game with a huge play."

The Tigers would go on to defeat Virginia Tech in the Sugar Bowl to finish an undefeated (13-0) season. Four months later, Campbell joined Ronnie Brown, Carnell Williams and Carlos Rogers to give Auburn four first-round selections in the 2005 NFL Draft.

"The unselfishness of our football team," said Campbell, describing the key to Auburn's 2004 success. "We had two running backs who were high draft picks and didn't complain about who was getting more carries or touches.

"Some games we came out and threw it a lot, we had really good receivers who could go get the ball. Some games we came out and ran it more.

"You're able to accomplish a lot when you have unselfish players."

With a versatile offense, Auburn attacked opponents based on defensive vulnerabilities. No one, says Campbell, whined when a teammate played a larger role.

"If we would have had any one person on offense who would have been selfish, a receiver who raised a lot of sand, if Ronnie or Cadillac would have raised sand about touches, we wouldn't have been able to be as successful as we were. Or If I would have raised sand about not getting to throw the ball as much, it would have been hard."

TODD VAN EMST/AU ATHLETICS

2004 Auburn football team celebrating the SEC Championship.

Campbell credits stability on Auburn's coaching staff after a rocky 2003 season for setting the stage for 2004's run. Co-offensive coordinators Hugh Nall and Steve Ensminger remained in their positional roles coaching offensive line and tight ends, respectively, while head coach Tommy Tuberville brought in Borges to take over play calling.

"All our staff was intact," Campbell said. "Nobody changed. That was a key for us. That's why we were able to be so successful because everyone knew each other."

That key unlocked the door to an SEC championship and a perfect season that left an indelible mark in Auburn football lore.

HOLLY POND, Ala. – Family, friends, teammates, coaches, teachers and more gathered at the baseball field at Holly Pond High School Monday night to celebrate the lives of two student athletes taken far too soon. Dayden Floyd, 16, and Josh McGinnis, 17, were killed in a car accident Sunday night and a crowd of current and former students along with their families came together Monday evening to support one another.

Principal Steve Miller shared a few words with the crowd of supporters, recommending faith as a path to recovery after this tragedy.

"I think we're all still in shock, I think we're all still in a place where that didn't happen. I don't want to tell anyone that I remotely know how you feel because I can't even imagine where you are but I do know I serve a God that knows exactly how you feel," Miller said.

"He cares about you and he loves you and has a great deal of respect for life and people and you can find hope in him when you can't find it anywhere else."

Miller then led the crowd in prayer before students began making their way out onto the field. After gathering at the mound and releasing balloons at sunset, the students shared another moment of prayer with one another.

Both young men played baseball at Holly Pond High School and McGinnis was on the Broncos football team as well. Floyd made several standout plays on the diamond at Holly Pond but his most impactful moment came before he ever reached high school. Dayden famously rescued a young child from Lake Guntersville on Mother's Day in 2017 to earn a reputation as a citizen before he ever began earning one as a ballplayer.

A tragedy like this is never easy for a school or a community to go through and this time of social distancing can only make it more difficult. Monday night's show of support was important for everyone to begin healing but it's only the first step of recovery for a hurting Bronco community.

Cullman Council grants 10-year tax abatement to HomTex, accepts $7M state loan for sewer improvements

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – The Cullman City Council on Monday evening approved an ordinance to accept a $7,110,000 loan from the State Revolving Fund via the Alabama Department of Environmental Management (ADEM) and the Alabama Water Pollution Control Authority for improvements to the city's sewer system. According to the ordinance, "The award of the loan to the City will be of substantial economic benefit to the City and the public by reducing the amount of interest that would be payable by the City if the funds were provided from sources other than from the Authority Loan."

In order to obtain the loan and cover costs associated with obtaining the loan, the ordinance authorized the issuance of a General Obligation Warrant guaranteeing that the City will repay the loan from its tax revenues over the next 20 years at an annual percentage rate of 2.2%.

According to City Clerk Wes Moore, the loan will fund a multi-phase project to replace sewer lines across a substantial portion of the city, delineated on a map provided to media.

Mayor Woody Jacobs said that the project is a proactive move; the current sewer system is safe, though it does become overwhelmed at certain points during heavy rain events.

The plan is to upgrade the system before a major problem occurs.

The ordinance passed on its first reading, when the council voted to suspend its regular rules of procedure.

Tax abatement to HomTex for facility expansion

The council also approved a 10-year tax abatement to HomTex, expected to total $286,650 over the 10-year period.

The company is planning a capital investment of $5 million in an expansion that will add approximately 100 new jobs and enable the company to begin producing disposable filter masks in addition to the reusable masks it recently began producing. The amount abated does not include an expected 10-year total of $298,000 that HomTex will continue to pay.

The council previously approved a $1.5 million loan to HomTex for the purchase of mask production equipment. The expansion is expected to allow the manufacture of 400 million disposable masks per year and generate $8 million in annual sales.

The council also passed resolutions:

- to rezone 25.8 acres located in the Windbrook Subdivision from R-1 (low density) Residential District to R-2 (medium density) Residential District.
- to move the next council meeting from May 4 to May 18, 2020. The other May council meeting will take place on May 11.
- to authorize City Attorney Roy Williams to collect delinquent accounts and fines.

The Cullman City Council meets next at 7 p.m. Monday, May 11, 2020 in the Cullman City Hall auditorium. Public access may be limited in accordance with state social distancing requirements, but The Tribune will livestream the meeting on its Facebook page.

The proposed sewer system upgrade will cover a substantial portion of the city.

Cullman now has pet-friendly storm shelter at Sportsman Lake

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – On Monday, the City of Cullman announced that its storm shelters on Sportsman Lake Road across from the Cullman County Fairgrounds will now feature a space open to families with small pets.

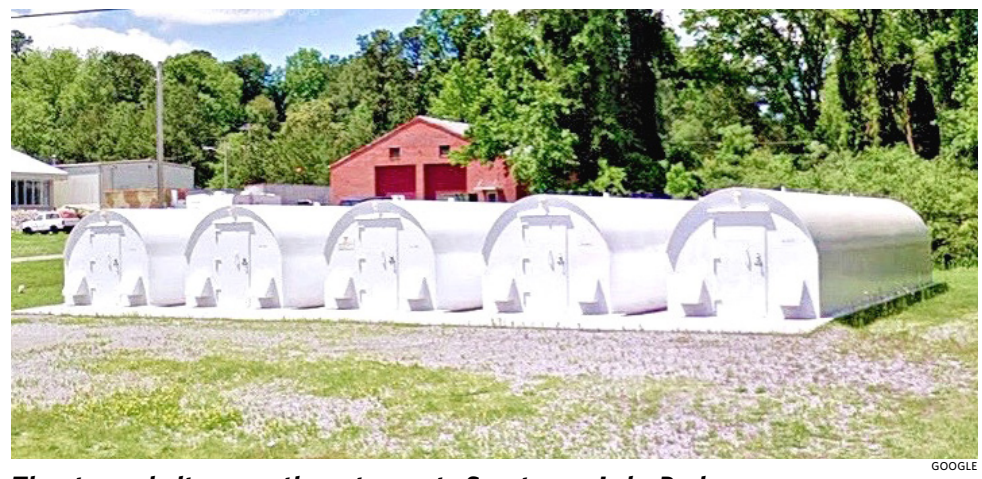

At Monday evening's City Council meeting, Police Chief Kenny Culpepper explained, "We have converted part of the Sportsman Lake tornado shelter into a pet-friendly shelter, like we talked about. We're looking, not forward to having tornadic weather, but if we do, to being able to accommodate, at least on a limited basis, some people with pets."

Smaller pets only

Culpepper cautioned, "Because it is a shelter designed for people, they will have to have their own pet carrier to carry the pet, and it's primarily going to be small pets that they can either hold the carrier in their lap, or slide it underneath the bench."

Each of the City's shelters, at Sportsman Lake on the north side and the Beech Center on the south, will have a police officer and a paramedic onsite when they are open, to assist anyone with special needs or medical conditions.

At the Sportsman Lake shelter, according to Culpepper, residents with pets should wait to enter until they have received instructions from the officer on duty.

United Way supports local causes with COVID-19 response fund, food pantry forum

CULLMAN, Ala. – With increased numbers of people out of work during the COVID-19 shutdown, organizations that work to meet the basic needs of those hardest hit are doing crucial work- in current parlance, we can call it "essential"- and as the days go by, those organizations can run low on the resources they seek to provide. That, at least around here, is where United Way of Cullman County (UWCC) comes in.

UWCC created the COVID-19 Community Response Fund to support organizations that are working to support others.

In a message to The Tribune, UWCC director Becky Goff wrote: "In March, United Way created the COVID-19 Community Response Fund and committed $5,000 to establish the fund.

"This fund provides Cullman County with an opportunity to give with the reassurance their donations will be responsibly invested and quickly deployed where they are needed most.

"In addition to individual donations, we are thankful to Trust Foundation Grant (formerly Sun Trust/ BB &T) for their donation of $2,600; The Daniel Foundation for their gift of $2,885, The Lions Club of Cullman, $1,000, and Regions Bank for their donation of $5,000 to support our COVID-19 Community Response Fund."

UWCC has approved several local organizations for the first round of $500 grants to support feeding programs, including:

- Cullman Caring for Kids
- Pilot Light Home
- Victim Services
- Parkside Outreach Program
- The Link of Cullman County
- Daystar Church
- First United Methodist Church
- North Alabama Agriplex Foundation
- Restoring Women Outreach

Additionally, Brooks' Place Child Advocacy Center was approved for a grant to help purchase technology that will allow counselors to continue providing services online by video conference.

In a note to The Tribune, Goff wrote, "Living UNITED, means helping ALL of our Cullman County neighbors, especially the most vulnerable, as we navigate this pandemic.

"Our staff, board of directors and volunteers have been working collectively to offer support and resources to our community and are proud of our accomplishments to date.

"There is no doubt that this is a difficult time for our community, but we are doing all we can to make it better."

An ongoing process

The funding process was not a one-shot deal. UWCC's website says:

"We anticipate multiple phases of funding to address both the acute needs from the outbreak and the longer-term impacts of recovery.

"In this first phase, we are prioritizing community-based organizations that are serving communities and individuals who are immediately and disproportionately suffering from this crisis. In this first round, we are not able to prioritize organizations who have lost revenue or are likely to lose future revenue due to canceled events or programs.

"We recognize these challenges, and as the crisis and long-term impacts continue to unfold, we will continue to work with our partners to assess and evolve our funding strategies."

Resources for nonprofits

Goff shared, "We have established the Food Pantry Forum which has been meeting virtually. These community conversations allow nonprofits across our community to connect, explore collaboration, share resources or find ways to support each other.

"Working with our corporate partners like Walmart DC 6006, we were able to supply cleaning supplies and other resources to nonprofits in our community.

"We coordinated a food drive thanks to Coke of Cullman that resulted in over 1,500 pounds of food for local food pantries. We also facilitated a donation from a Golden Flake vendor to supply snacks to local pantries.

"These collaborations with our network ensure the continuation of services for our community, and help us to share the resources quickly."

Encouraging volunteers

Goff said, "United Way of Cullman has rallied local volunteers to support Cullman Caring for Kids and our homebound senior meal program through Commission on Aging. We have distributed over 500 'thank you bags' to health care workers in nursing homes and assisted living facilities thanks to our Women United Board.

"Volunteers have contacted us to share their skills and experiences to encourage and support our community."

UWCC's Young Professional Board is also planning its annual Stuff the Bus event to help prepare more students for the upcoming school year.

Said Goff, "Whether students are participating in online learning or return to the classroom, we want to be sure they have the tools they need to succeed."

Goff concluded, "Our community is at its best when we connect with one another and leverage strengths and partnerships for the greater good. Navigating the sometime-difficult landscape of public and nonprofit assistance can be challenging.

"For many, the financial and emotional strife caused by COVID-19 represents their first time needing support from human services such as food banks, rent assistance and more. We want the community to know we are here to help."

Get involved: donate, get funding or get help

Goff said, "As we move to the next phase of the recovery process, we will need the continued support of everyone in the community."

If you want to help or have questions, call 256-739-2948 or visit www.uwaycc.org.

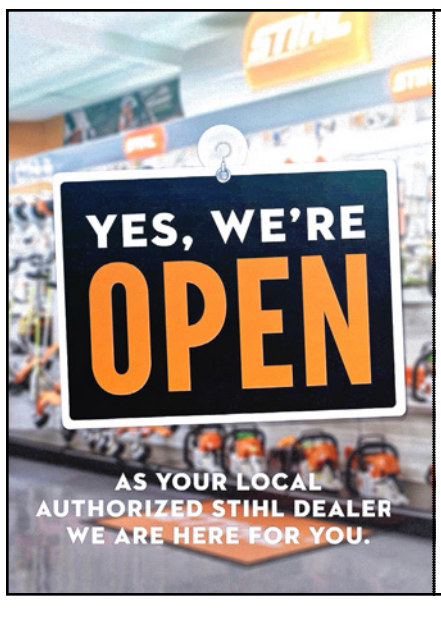

If your nonprofit organization is responding to community needs related to COVID-19 and you need help keeping up the good work, or if you would like to donate to the Community Response Fund, visit www.uwaycc.org/2020-community-response-fund.

Please note that, according to UWCC, "Grants are limited to 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations, groups fiscally sponsored by a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization or other charitable organizations able to receive a tax-deductible contribution, such as schools, faith-based organizations and other public entities."

If you need help, a call to 211 provides real-time accurate information on a wide array of available resources. The line is open 24/7.

Spy in the Wild: A Nature Miniseries

Season 2 of "Spy in the Wild: A Nature Miniseries" is a four-episode follow-up to a popular 2017 wildlife presentation, but this sequel places even more animatronic spy creatures in the middle of some of nature's greatest events, which these artificial devices are able to film at close range because the animals around them accept these "spies" as one of their own. The miniseries opens with "The Tropics," which investigates the wildlife that thrives there. Featured animals include hippos, red flying foxes and pygmy forest elephants.

CULLMAN, Ala. – Local retailers were given the green light Tuesday morning by Governor Kay Ivey to reopen their doors beginning Thursday, April 30 at 5 p.m.

Under the State's new Safer at Home Order, retailers can open, but must follow the following rules:

• Emergency maximum occupancy rate. Occupancy shall be limited to no more than 50% of the normal occupancy load as determined by the fire marshal. This "emergency maximum occupancy rate" shall be posted in a conspicuous place, and enough staff shall be posted at the store entrances and exits to enforce this requirement.

• Social distancing. An employee of the retail store may not knowingly allow customers or patrons to congregate within 6 feet of one another.

• Sanitation. The retail store shall take reasonable steps to comply with guidelines on sanitation from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention ("the CDC") and the Alabama Department of Public Health.

This was great news to the business owners The Tribune spoke to in Cullman's Warehouse District following the governor's press conference. They were busy making the necessary preparations for what they hope will be the first step towards business as usual.

Stevie Whitney, owner of O-Baby Children's Boutique, is beyond happy to be able to open her doors to customers Thursday.

"I've been down here almost every day filling orders," she said. "Thank God I had a website. It's still nothing like being open."

Besides the retail space, O-Baby also has a space for baby showers.

Whitney said, "A lot of people just canceled their baby showers."

Even prior to the COVID-19 pandemic becoming a health concern, Whitney said she already went to great lengths to keep her retail store clean and sanitized. Even so, they have made a few more changes to help keep their customers safe.

She explained, "We try to keep it clean anyways. We were Lysoling, wiping down doors and rails.

"We have one pen so if someone uses it, we sanitize it and put it back. They aren't touching the keypad like at Wal-Mart."

Whitney had recently moved O-Baby to the former Mae's Food Hall space and the drop-in business was especially difficult, but due to online sales and Tuesday's news she sighed, "We are going to make it!"

She continued, "My biggest concern is all the people who aren't able to go back to work."

O-Baby could allow 75 people inside to shop based on the 50% occupancy restriction, but Whitney has chosen to set the number at 20. She will have gloves for customers to wear if they so choose.

She has the floor marked every 6 feet to help customers stay mindful of their distance from others.

She added, "I ask if you are sick to please not come into the store and to use our website."

Across the street at Monograms Plus, owner Lynsey Todd and her staff were also preparing for the re-opening.

"I think people want to get out and do something different," said Todd. "We were told we could do 50% of occupancy. Our number is really high because we have a large store so we are actually lessening that to 10 at a time. We'll only have one door open at a time versus most of our doors just so we can keep up with people going in and out."

They are also ready with Lysol and hand sanitizer to wipe everything down throughout.

During the restrictions, Monograms Plus has tried to keep busy.

Todd said, "My staff has been back for the last two weeks. We've had a lot of social media sales and phone sales. We sell on Facebook and Instagram. We've done Facetime sales and a ton of texting."

Monograms continued to provide curbside pickup.

Despite finding innovative ways to survive, Todd said, "It's still nowhere near what we typically do. Especially leading into Mother's Day. That's one of our biggest holidays."

Also re-opening Thursday are Platform and J K Taylor. Owner Rita Dean and her staff were also busy and excited about the news of Ivey's loosening of restrictions.

Dean said, "We will open (Thursday) at 5 p.m. and we will stay until 8 p.m. We are disinfecting EVERYTHING.

"We've got hand sanitizer on hand. We do want to social distance. We have a lot more square footage here (Platform) than we do at J K Taylor so we are allowing 10 people at a time over here, which we could get away with more than that. I think to be safe I would like to say 10 people and five over at J K Taylor."

There will be a few incentives and sales, but Dean said, "We are trying to think about that carefully because all our sale items are on one rack and we just want one person at a time shopping on those racks."

Dean said she has been following all the suggestions including making sure she is the only person opening packaging as it is delivered.

She added, "We will follow suit with whatever Governor Ivey suggests. If it means wearing masks, that's what we will do. If it means wearing gloves, that's what we will do of course. We have been educating ourselves on the difference between cleaning v. disinfecting, and we want to make sure we do both. Certainly, the high-traffic places that are touched like the doorknobs, the dressing rooms, all the iPads and all the phones and stuff like that. Just being diligent about cleaning and that's all we know to do."

Dean and the staff at Platform have also been busy while the store has been closed.

Dean explained, "We kept our online sales going. The doors have been closed and locked the whole time.

"My girls have been working and steadily putting things on Instagram and Facebook to keep our customer base alive and watching what we are putting up. Our online sales have very much increased, but it's still just a fraction of what it would be if our doors had been open. We've been pleasantly surprised."

Dean has remained optimistic throughout the Stay at Home Order.

She said, "I am a teacher and that's my first occupation, but I am retired. So, my stores are just a blessing really from God above and this is my happy place. I am just thankful people come and shop with us, and every purchase made is just a blessing.

"I am not going to knock Wal-Mart or anybody else that's open. I'm just thankful that they are there, and I hope that everybody will be able to open their doors when this is all over. I don't want to see anybody close down at all."

Heart (from Front)

Daughter Shannon McNeal related, "We had a lot of family conversations about transplant, and actually, every single member of my family- or all the direct family members: my two brothers and I and my dad- we all got tested to see if we were matches for transplant."

The family was tested in December 2019 and all four members were found to be matches to Sandre. The family began studying numerous aspects of possible procedures, but somewhere along the line, husband Paul McNeal knew that there was only one right answer for him.

According to Shannon, "My dad really wanted to do it. He wanted to be the one, and so my parents came to that decision: that my dad was going to donate."

Paul told The Tribune, "Sandre and I have been blessed in many ways: blessed with each other and three wonderful children. It was another blessing that I was a match and was given an opportunity to help her. It was an easy decision. I love her."

Heading to the hospital, Paul had numerous concerns, saying that he was "worried that we'd all be okay in the end . . . worried about the kids, worried about Sandre and hoping that everything would work out well."

The transplant took place Feb. 26, 2020, as Alabama and its healthcare systems were beginning to face a new issue known as COVID-19.

The simultaneous operations came off without any immediate problems. The new kidney, which can often take days to begin working, cranked up immediately, and Sandre was out of the hospital five short days after the procedure, staying in a Birmingham hotel so she could visit the hospital for daily lab tests.

A short time later, Paul suffered post-surgical complications that required a second operation. Despite an easy procedure, he spent five days in the hospital. But then, all was well and he was on his way home.

On Sandre's last day before heading home to Cullman for good, though, her last set of lab results came back with something not right. Doctors were able to rule out organ rejection, but could not immediately identify the problem, so she was readmitted.

Then nearly the worst possible news came: the acute disease that had helped shut down her old kidneys had appeared in the donated organ. The condition was treatable, but would require the patient- who was taking standard post-transplant drugs to suppress her immune system- to sit for over two weeks in a room at UAB Hospital just as the facility was becoming the epicenter of COVID-19 response in the state.

Paul said of the staff at UAB, "I would have to say that they were all great. They were as eager to get us out of there- and Sandre out of there- as we were. They were very sensitive to what was going on. We had some terrific staff.

"There's a section of the hospital that just deals with transplants and this kind of transplants, and that staff was just unbelievably excellent.

"The kidney transplant team: I can't say enough great things about them and the coordinators. There's a lot involved in something like this, needless to say, but they were very aware and doing everything they could to get us out of there."

Sandre added, "We had, really, two things going on. One was just the transplant care, which was just outstanding with the kidney transplant team, and the surgeons and nephrologists that are specific to kidney transplant, and the nurses on the transplant hall that are very attuned to everything that needs to transpire with the transplant patients. And that was just fabulous care; I can't say enough good things about all of them.

"At the very same time, the COVID-19 just really starting up right about this time that we went in for transplant.

"Then, when I went back in the hospital the second time, we were really all very concerned especially then, because we started seeing more cases of COVID-19 in Jefferson County and hearing about it a little more in the hospital.

"And the staff at the hospital was just getting used to what to do to their procedures, and to wear the protective equipment, and to wear extra gloves and use the sanitation devices, all that kind of stuff."

Sandre saw staff taking extra precautions and putting on extra gear when they came to visit, and found them working hard to get her out of the hospital and into outpatient care as rapidly as possible.

Said Sandre, "I was really impressed that, within a two-week period of time, they were taking a lot more precaution among the staff, and started really kicking things into high gear in the hospital. That was really impressive, and I was very thankful.

"Just in our room, we had Lysol spray and Clorox wipes, and hand sanitizer and masks. And when people would come in, they said, man, we had a fresh-smelling room because we really kept it wiped down in there.

"The doctors would come in and use our spray, and they were all grateful for it. We were just doing everything we could at the time to keep me safe and get me back home to be with Paul, and out of that environment."

The couple got out of UAB as healthy as they could be under the circumstances, and since that time, the condition has steadily improved. Sandre is home, where both she and Paul are safely quarantined and resting. He is once again back close to normal and she no longer has to receive dialysis.

Said Shannon, "Huge shout out to my dad, obviously, for donating! And it was really hard to go through that, for everything that he had to do.

"It ended up being a more complicated process than he had thought but, obviously, it was worth it in the end for everybody, because my mom's a lot better off, now.

"It was just a very stressful time, but it turned out really positive; it turned out for the best. I'm glad she went through with transplant. We're just basically taking it one day at a time, now, but everything's looking up."

Sandre said of her husband, "Paul gave me my life. I desperately needed a kidney - mine had completely failed and I was doing dialysis 24/7.

"You know when you say the vows 'for better or for worse, in sickness and in health...' when you're young and healthy, it's hard to grasp what they really mean.

"Paul showed me love in action. He's my everything. I love him completely and forever! He really is my hero, and I just can't say enough, because I love him dearly, and he put his love into action. We all say things, and it's different when you put it into action."

Mustard Seed Nursery hopes to be in new building June 1

maggie@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Mustard Seed Nursery excitedly announced April 22, 2020 its new building is moving closer to completion.

The Tribune spoke with owner Sandy Walker to learn more on the move and how the business has fared recently.

"We had an electrical fire in the wall last May that caused the building to burn. I would say the new building is more of a new chapter (of the business)," she said. "I loved the old house and hated that we couldn't save it."

Walker said she has high hopes for the new building.

"We hope it will increase business," she said.

"We will have more to offer year-round: Bird seed, dog treats, garden accents and more. The Sunflour Bakery will be coming back as well."

Walker is hopeful both businesses will be in the new building by the first of June.

She shared a brief history of her business, saying, "In November 1999 I started leasing Big Cedars Nursery.

"I was there for 10 years. In July of 2009 I purchased the property on County Road 222 and built greenhouses and areas for the shrubs. In 2016 the bakery (Sunflour Bakery) and I shared the building. They grew and expanded their menu and wanted to lease the whole building so I moved in a building out back.

"I'm very excited to be moving back upfront and into a larger building. I hope to be in by the first of June and fingers crossed the bakery also!"

So how has business has been impacted by the pandemic?

"We have had the busiest spring in the 20 years I've been in business," smiled Walker. "I feel as though people had more time to get out in their yards and get them looking how they wanted them; they have had more time to beautify their yards and add more color with flowers.

"With us being mostly out in the open, I feel as though they felt safer shopping with us.

"We have held off on moving into the new building because of the pandemic just so the customers would feel a little bit more at ease being in the open."

Mustard Seed Nursery is located at 324 County Road 222 in Cullman. Find out more at www.facebook.com/Mustard-Seed-Nursery-351492967281.
