Census Bureau to resume drop-off of 2020 Census packets at homes of those with P.O. Boxes

Alabama League of Municipalities

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – The U.S. Census Bureau on Wednesday reopened 2020 Census field offices in Alabama while continuing to follow all current health and safety guidelines.

The resumption of activities come as part of a phased restart by the Census Bureau in select areas of the country. The Census Bureau said all returning staff will receive safety training to observe social distancing protocols in the COVID-19 environment.

The bureau ordered Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) for all field staff, including those who work in field offices.

These materials will be provided to staff prior to restarting operations, according to the Census Bureau.

As part of the phased restart of operations, the Census Bureau will resume the drop-off of 2020 Census invitation packets at front doors of households in areas where mail is received through P.O. Boxes.

The Census Bureau began delivering census materials to these households on March 15; however, this operation was suspended March 18 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. As such, many of these households have yet to receive an invitation.

This process requires no face-to-face interaction, as Census workers will simply leave a packet of bagged information on doorsteps. Approximately 82,000 Alabama households are included in this process.

To date, almost 55% of Alabama households have self-responded to the 2020 Census and may continue to do so at www.my2020census.gov by calling toll-free at 1-844-330-2020 or by returning their paper form.

The Census Bureau's Alabama field offices are located in Mobile, Birmingham and Huntsville and cover operations for the entire state.

‘They’ve got to have something to do’

Smith Lake Park Campground operating as normal

Christy Perry
christy@cullmantribune.com

NICK GRIFFIN/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE
Smith Lake Park Campground is seen Wednesday, May 6, 2020.

CULLMAN, Ala. – Smith Lake Park Campground and other parks around the state of Alabama remain open during the COVID-19 pandemic. Parks, including campgrounds, have been allowed to remain open while playgrounds remain closed and beaches only recently reopened with restrictions. Cullman County Parks and Recreation Director Doug Davenport said he and his staff are staying on top of all protocols set forth by the State of Alabama and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Of camping at Smith Lake Park, Davenport said, “I’ve talked to Point Mallard, Guntersville, Oak Mountain and a few others.

“Their camping is about like we are. Camping is as usual, except for the playgrounds and their cabins.”

Cullman’s parks attract guests and campers from out of state and there are no restrictions regarding interstate travel.

Said Davenport, “I haven’t been told anything to do differently.

“I check with what the CDC is saying and the (Cullman County) Commission usually sends out a letter if they want something changed.

“They told me to just keep an eye on them and follow whatever the State is doing.”

He continued, “We are telling them (campers) to not be in groups of more than 10 and observe social distancing rules with other campers,” Davenport said. “That’s why you go camping, to sit around a fire by yourself, or get out and walk your dog or enjoy your family.

“If they are sitting outside, it’s like a couple or maybe their kids or something. They’ve got to have something to do. We are about to go crazy if they don’t get back to something being a little bit more normal.”

The offices at Sportsman Lake Park, Smith Lake Park and Stony Lonesome OHV Park are open, but guests cannot go inside. Each has a walk-up window to help visitors check in. Some amenities remain closed, such as train rides, putt-putt golf and pavilion rentals, but camping is still available.

Website (from Front)

heather@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Two weeks ago, the Cullman Economic Development Agency (CEDA) announced it would be creating a website that would compile the operating information for local businesses into one convenient place. Wednesday, the site went live. Until Wednesday, the only thing visitors saw when they went to https://cullmanis.com/ was a submission form for businesses to enter their information.

Visitors can now browse the different tabs for retail, restaurants and services to see when their favorite businesses are open and learn more about any restrictions that may be in place.

“Business owners who have not yet registered are still able to do so.

CEDA Retail & Workforce Development Manager Susan Eller said in a statement to The Tribune, “During the COVID-19 event, we notice citizens asking when businesses are open, do they deliver and many more questions.

“The mayor and council felt by providing a site where local business information can be found easily, it would help these businesses be able to survive.”

Eller credits the Cullman Parks, Recreation & Sports Tourism’s technical department with developing the site and David Warren of Cullman Aerial Photography for the site’s header image, expressing her gratitude to both.

Eller said approximately 80 businesses have been registered already, and she is working to help get the information for about 80 more.

Shop Local. Eat Local. Support Local.

While there are plans to use the site in the future to help advertise local festivals and parks and rec events, Eller said that the site is currently focused on restaurants, retailers and service providers, as there will not be any events or festivals in the near future, and these businesses are the ones who are affected more acutely.

The site’s statement of purpose reads:

“Many of our local businesses are experiencing the pain of COVID-19. These are our friends, business partners, sponsors of little league sports, sponsors of our schools, and participants in fundraisers for our sick. Now is the time we can step-up and help them.

“If you don’t need anything at the moment, buy a gift certificate to use later. If you need a gift, buy a gift certificate to put in the mail.

“You may want to help out a family that is struggling by buying a gift certificate from one of the local restaurants.

“We will get through this event that has almost put a halt to our economy and way-of-life. When our state and community reopens, we want our go-to restaurants, and our go-to stores, to be there for us. This is the time for us to be there for them.

During these times, we all have questions like: Who is open; what are their hours of operation; do they ship or deliver purchases; and many more.

“This website allows you to have all this information in one place. If you are looking for food, clothing, gifts, or a service, scroll down and check out one of our local merchants.”

Rumors (from Front)

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Rumors Deli cranked up in time for early lunch Thursday, but the doors to the dining room that had opened to customers Wednesday were once again closed. Owner Annette Harris cited a warning from the Cullman County Health Department that she could lose her health permit and see her restaurant temporarily shut down if she again allowed on-premise dining in violation of Alabama’s Safer at Home Order.

Early Thursday morning, Harris addressed online followers live via social media from the sidewalk in front of Rumors, saying, “I got a phone call this morning from the health department.

“OK, I’ve already been speaking with lawyers; nothing can be done about this. I will have my license to operate taken away today if I open these doors and let you people in to eat. That’s what I’ve got looking at me.

“If I open these doors right here, if I unlock these doors and let you in to come eat like decent human beings ought to be able to do, damn it, then they’re going to come and pull my license because Gov. Ivey told them to.

“Is that right? Hell, no. I can’t even own my own damn business; can’t even have my own business. I can’t even stand up for myself. It’s not right, people. It is not right, and I don’t like it worth a damn. But you know what? I can’t do a damn thing about it.

“It’s not the health department’s fault, because they work for the man, too, okay? They got to do what they got to do.

“So I asked around, found out, what if I just did it anyway? What if I just opened up, even though they said I can’t do it? What if I did it anyway? What would happen to Rumors Deli? Well, they will come and they can chain my place up to where I can’t get in, to where my employees can’t get in, and there won’t be any Rumors Deli.

“I won’t have a place to run, I won’t have jobs for my employees, I won’t be able to fulfill my projects to help the community from the donations that I have been given, I won’t be able to finish my catering jobs that I have booked, I won’t be able to feed the community and I won’t be able to do a job that I love, because they will immediately come and they will put chains on my doors if I decide to go against the order.”

Harris asked for her viewers to share the video and come visit Rumors’ drive-thru window for lunch.

As the restaurant was opening at 10 a.m., Harris said in a live streamed interview with The Tribune that she had expected the call she got from the health department, and noted that the person who spoke to her was “very nice about it.”

According to Harris, “She said, ‘If you do (open the dining room), we’re going to have to come over there and-’ they would have to take my operating permit. And I said, ‘What exactly does that mean?’ And that means that I wouldn’t be able to operate at all. And I said, ‘Well, okay. What happens if I do it anyway?’ And if I do something like that, then they can put chains on my door. I can’t get in, my employees can’t get in. It’d be horrible.”

Harris reiterated the need to act with the donations she has received for community projects, along with catering projects and special orders for Teacher Appreciation Day Friday.

Said Harris, “I can’t do that to my customers, you know. And I feel bad, because I feel like I’m being chicken, you know, just rolling over and giving up everything I’ve tried to stand for.

“But honestly, you know, my employees aren’t going to have a job, either. And I said, ‘When can I get my permit back?’ And that can take forever: three months or more, if- even if- I could get it back. So I’m kind of backed into a corner.”

Cullman County Health Department/Alabama Department of Public Health

The Tribune reached out to the Cullman County Health Department for comment on the matter, but did not get a response from the local office. Alabama Department of Public Health Northern District (which includes Cullman County) Environmental Director James Congleton contacted the paper, though, to answer questions.

Congleton said, “There’s an order in the state of Alabama by the State Health Officer that there is no on-premise eating or drinking in food establishments at this time. You know, that order’s been out there quite some time, now, and it has not been rescinded at this time.

“What we do at the health department is, some situation like that, if we have a complaint, then we are obligated to investigate the complaint, and then we go from there. There’s remedies to such, but we’d have to first confirm that there is some order of the Health Officer not being followed, and we don’t have information; we have not confirmed any such thing ourselves at this time.

“But, of course, anyone that’s violating an order that we did observe or have admission that the order was being violated, of course, we would speak with our legal counsel at the state health department to seek a remedy. And one remedy to not following an order would be a possible permit suspension. And a permit could be suspended, but it could be reinstated- probably within minutes- by just following, making a plan to say how the order will be followed. That’s basically how it would work; we don’t take any other dramatic actions other than that.”

Congleton told The Tribune that his office has investigated several similar cases across the district.

“The whole goal,” said Congleton, “is that the order is followed to protect citizens, the public and employees.”

According to the director, a county health department would not act on its own against a violator or seal access to a facility, but could inform the violator that permit suspension was possible, while submitting a complaint to the district office for investigation.

As of lunchtime Thursday, he said, his office had received a complaint but had not begun an investigation, though he added, “We’ll be taking whatever action is necessary to investigate that complaint.”

Congleton confirmed “there was a discussion this morning” between health department staff and Rumors, but explained, “If someone was having that discussion, that would be a possible remedy, would be a permit suspension until being in compliance with the order. And that’s very simple to be. You can be in compliance with the order in just a few minutes by not allowing on-premise dining at a food establishment.”

He added, “Everything that we do, we normally give people an opportunity to inform them of the requirements and give them time to fix the requirement.”

Congleton concluded, “Hopefully, (on-premise dining is) going to be back in order soon, but we don’t know when. We just have to take it week by week, as far as what orders change and what things do change. You know, the order’s changed several times and been updated.

“And there’s some discussion that on-premise dining could be back off the list of not being allowed in the future, but we don’t know when that date is, yet. There’s been some discussion (about re-opening on-premise dining) in the middle of May, but I don’t know; that’s based on other factors that comes from our State Health Officer and the information that they have, and working with the Governor’s Office and so forth.”

Cullman city government responds

On Thursday afternoon, the City of Cullman issued this statement:

Cullman Mayor Woody Jacobs said the mayor and city council do not have the authority to override a State Health Department order prohibiting Rumors Deli, or any other business, from opening.

“I am sympathetic with the businesses that have been forced to close,” Jacobs said. “This is not a decision that is in the hands of local government.” He noted that the city, the mayor, or the city council did not instruct any business to close.

“The State Health Department, not the city, prohibited the operation of restaurants and instructed Rumors not to open.

He says city officials have relayed complaints and concerns from businesses wanting to reopen to Montgomery, federal legislators and other officials. Cities and counties want resumption of business, but local government cannot make that decision.

On April 8, 2020 the State Attorney General provided written guidance to Alabama municipalities about their use of power during a state of emergency. Steve Marshall wrote, “A municipality cannot enact an ordinance that is inconsistent with the general laws of the state.” A local government cannot impose regulations or ordinances less restrictive than the state of emergency restrictions.

On April 30th at 5 p.m., Governor Ivey’s “Safer at Home” order went into effect. It allowed for the opening of several types of businesses, but did not include restaurants. She said restaurants are to remain closed for in-person dining, but can provide to-go or curbside service.

“We expect some time next that Gov. Ivey will announce business will be able to reopen with some restrictions. I hope the health threat in Cullman continues to decline as our citizens practice social distancing and disinfecting,” Jacobs added. “We are all anxious to safely return to more normal operations.”

The Tribune reached out to Gov. Kay Ivey’s Office, but had not received a response before going to press.

Former Auburn golfer Alex Harrell follows her passion as a nurse

Greg Ostendorf
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – For the past month, Alex Harrell has been like the majority of America. Stuck at home and doing her part to help stop the spread of COVID-19. That's hard enough for the average person. But for Harrell, a travel nurse who is currently in between contracts, it's all she could do to not go help people.

"It breaks my heart," Harrell said. "I'd rather be in the hospital right now helping and doing my part. But I'm also doing my part like everybody else is – staying at home, only going out for the necessary things."

Home now, Harrell – who played golf at Auburn from 2012 to 2016 – was working in the Pediatric ER at Children's Hospital in Colorado when the coronavirus pandemic first began to escalate. Because of social distancing and schools being out, the number of patients the hospital saw was down, but there was still plenty of fear and anxiety.

Every child who came in, regardless of the reason, was treated as if they were positive out of precaution, and one of Harrell's patients did ultimately test positive for COVID-19.

"You could tell everybody was nervous," Harrell said. "Parents were concerned. There was a bunch of confusion from the parents, and we have to educate, which is obviously our main job as nurses and healthcare workers in general. But we've been able to do a lot of education, and when they came in, they were able to calm down and they feel a little better about what's going on."

It takes a certain passion to do what nurses do, especially during a pandemic where they are putting their lives at risk every day. For Harrell, that passion and her desire to work specifically with children originated while in Auburn's nursing school.

She went in not knowing what type of nurse she wanted to be. During her pediatric rotation, her pediatric clinical instructor, Ann Lambert, pulled her aside and said, "You really care."

"Yeah, I love kids," Harrell responded. "I've always loved kids."

Harrell had also spent a lot of time around nurses, especially pediatric nurses, while growing up. Her brother had a chronic condition and was in and out of the hospital for 21 years.

Former Auburn golfer Alex Harrell.

He passed away a week and a half before Harrell began nursing school.

"For me, it's always been personal," she said. "I grew up helping my brother and helping my parents, and just seeing what he went through, I want to be the nurse that makes someone smile during a hard time because we had nurses that were like that.

"I don't regret it. I love it so much. I love working with these kiddos. I work with just out of the womb to 19 years old and sometimes 21 years old if they're chronic. So, I don't always just get kids. I love the teenagers, too, because I can joke with them. They're hilarious. It's fun to work with this age range."

As a travel nurse, Harrell has worked across the country in cities such as New York City, San Diego, Providence before her latest stop in Denver.

It was great for the former golfer who would travel throughout the year to play in various tournaments at Auburn.

However, Harrell's traveling days are over for now. She recently accepted a permanent job in the Pediatric ER at Piedmont Columbus Regional, not far from her hometown of Phenix City, Alabama. She will begin work there next week.

Though the coronavirus might look different than it did a month ago when Harrell was working in Colorado, her message to the people of Auburn still rings true.

"I just want to tell the Auburn Family to continue what they're doing with social distancing," she said. "Alabama was one of the last states to do the stay-at-home order but definitely take it seriously. Only go out for necessary things. Stay at home. If you have kids, make sure they're getting outside if you can. Play new board games. Continue to stay active and stay healthy. And make sure everyone is washing their hands."

Alabama will face Clemson in Atlanta in Holiday Hoopsgiving quadruple header

UA Athletics

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. – The Alabama men's basketball team will take on Clemson as part of the Holiday Hoopsgiving quadruple header, which will be played on Dec. 12, 2020 in Atlanta at State Farm Arena – home of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks. The event is being organized by the VII Group.

"We're excited about participating in this year's Holiday Hoopsgiving event," UA head coach Nate Oats said. "First, we will be able play the game in the home arena of the Atlanta Hawks and in front of our fans who may not otherwise have a chance to see us play in person.

"It also gives our program an opportunity to increase exposure on a national level. On top of everything else, we will face a quality ACC opponent in Clemson which will certainly strengthen our schedule and help build our resume. We couldn't be more thrilled to be a part of this event."

In addition to the Crimson Tide, the event features a total of four Southeastern Conference teams who will all square off against high-profile programs for the single-day event. The other SEC programs include Mississippi State, who will take on Dayton, LSU, who faces off with South Florida, and Auburn, as the Tigers pair with Memphis.

Tickets, game times and television designations will be announced at a later date.

For all the latest information on the team, follow AlabamaMBB on Twitter, Instagram, and Facebook. General athletic news can be found at UA_Athletics on Twitter and Instagram and Alabama Athletics on Facebook.

Auburn to play Memphis in Atlanta for Holiday Hoopsgiving

AUBURN, Ala. – The Auburn men's basketball team added a challenging non-conference opponent to its 2020-21 schedule as the program is set to play Memphis in the 2020 installment of Holiday Hoopsgiving.

The battle between the two Tiger teams is slated to take place Dec. 12 in Atlanta, Ga. at State Farm Arena as part of a quadrupleheader that also features Dayton vs. Mississippi State, Alabama vs. Clemson and LSU vs. South Florida.

"We are very excited about playing in State Farm Arena in downtown Atlanta, home of the Atlanta Hawks," Auburn head coach Bruce Pearl said.

"What a great opportunity for our student-athletes to compete against a top program in Memphis.

"We have so many great fans and alumni in Atlanta, and I'm challenging them to sell the place out.

"Congratulations to Chris Williams and the VII Group for putting on what promises to be a great event.

"We are also pleased with the event's support of the Mike Slive Foundation for prostate cancer research."

Auburn has played Memphis just one time in series history, winning 78-64 on the road on Jan. 2, 1953.

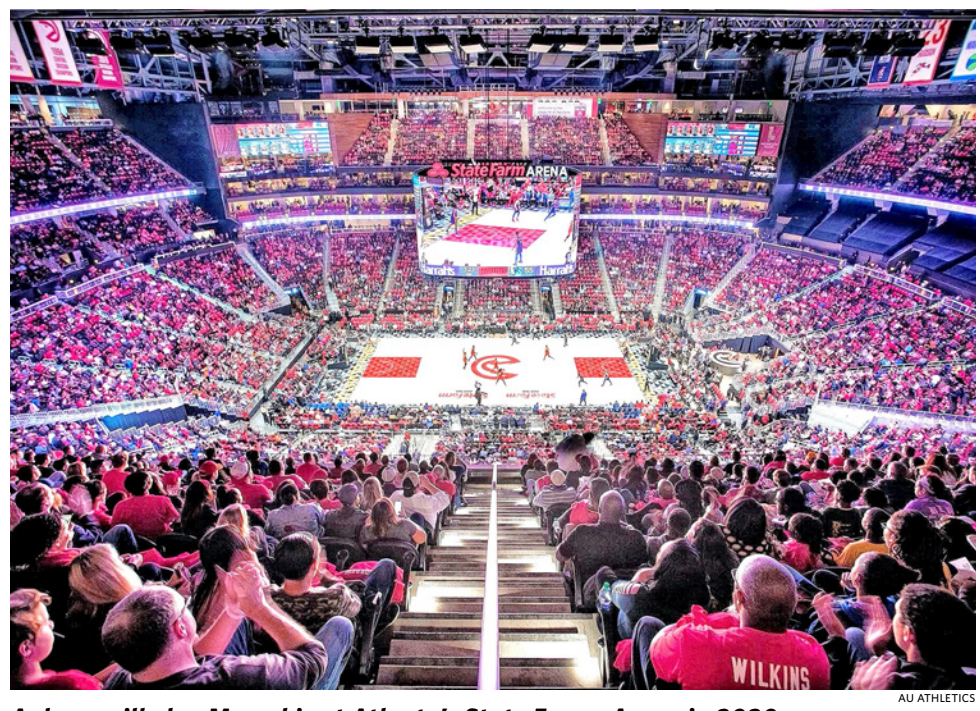

Auburn is 61-41 all-time against teams from the currently constructed American Athletic Conference.

Since the 2017-18 campaign, Auburn and Memphis have each amassed three 20-win seasons.

Auburn is 81-24, while Memphis is 64-37 over the last three years.

With the addition of Holiday Hoopsgiving on the schedule, Auburn is set to play in Atlanta for a regular season non-conference game for just the third time since 1990, having played Illinois in 2013 and Georgia State in 1990.

Ticket information will be available at a later date. For more information, please visit www.theviigroup.net.

OPINION

Op-Ed: Remembering my father and the Greatest Generation

Alabama Governor Kay Ivey

It has been 75 years since the end of World War II. Today, May 8, we celebrate V.E. or Victory in Europe Day, the unconditional surrender of Nazi Germany. Later this summer, we will also celebrate the 75th anniversary of V.J. or Victory in Japan Day, the formal surrender of Imperial Japan on the deck of the USS Missouri on September 2, 1945.

Commemorating World War II and remembering those who fought is of special significance to many of us who are children of "the Greatest Generation."

My father, Boadman Nettles Ivey, was a captain in the field artillery and fought in the Battle of the Bulge.

He also landed at Normandy six days after D-Day, a fact that made my first-ever trip to the Normandy American Cemetery last year extra special. Looking at all those graves of soldiers who landed at Normandy but didn't come home alive is something I'll never forget.

As an only child, I was extremely close to both my parents and always had a special respect for my father's contribution to this war.

His service taught me that we truly stand on the shoulders of our previous generations. It is because of efforts of the men and women who served in World War II that we can live in such freedom today.

Growing up during the Great Depression, the men and women of "the Greatest Generation" saw a scary political landscape form across the globe that led to World War II. The lights of freedom were dimming as unspeakable atrocities were unleashed on innocent men, women and children – both in Europe and Asia.

My father was just one of millions who loved his country, understood the grave risk and proudly served in the military.

He and my mother knew that he would be in harm's way, and there would be no guarantee of his safe return.

This anxiety was the norm for people all over the country who prayerfully hoped the war would reach a successful conclusion and their loved ones would return home safe and in one piece.

Unfortunately, an estimated 405,000 families received the devastating news of loss. Their unimaginable grief was in a small part soothed by the conviction that their loved one's sacrifice had made a profound impact on the world.

For those like my father who were fortunate to return from war, most came home, went back to work and tried to get on with their lives. Few were recognized as the hero they were and more times than not, declined to be publicly acknowledged for their service.

In fact, it is not uncommon for family members to learn of their loved one's service and say "I never knew that."

The vast majority of those from "the Greatest Generation" lived the remainder of their lives in their community doing the mundane things that individually seems unremarkable but, collectively, help make America great.

Things like folks working at their jobs, providing for their families, and expressing their faith by volunteering and serving in leadership roles in their community are ideals that are so uniquely American.

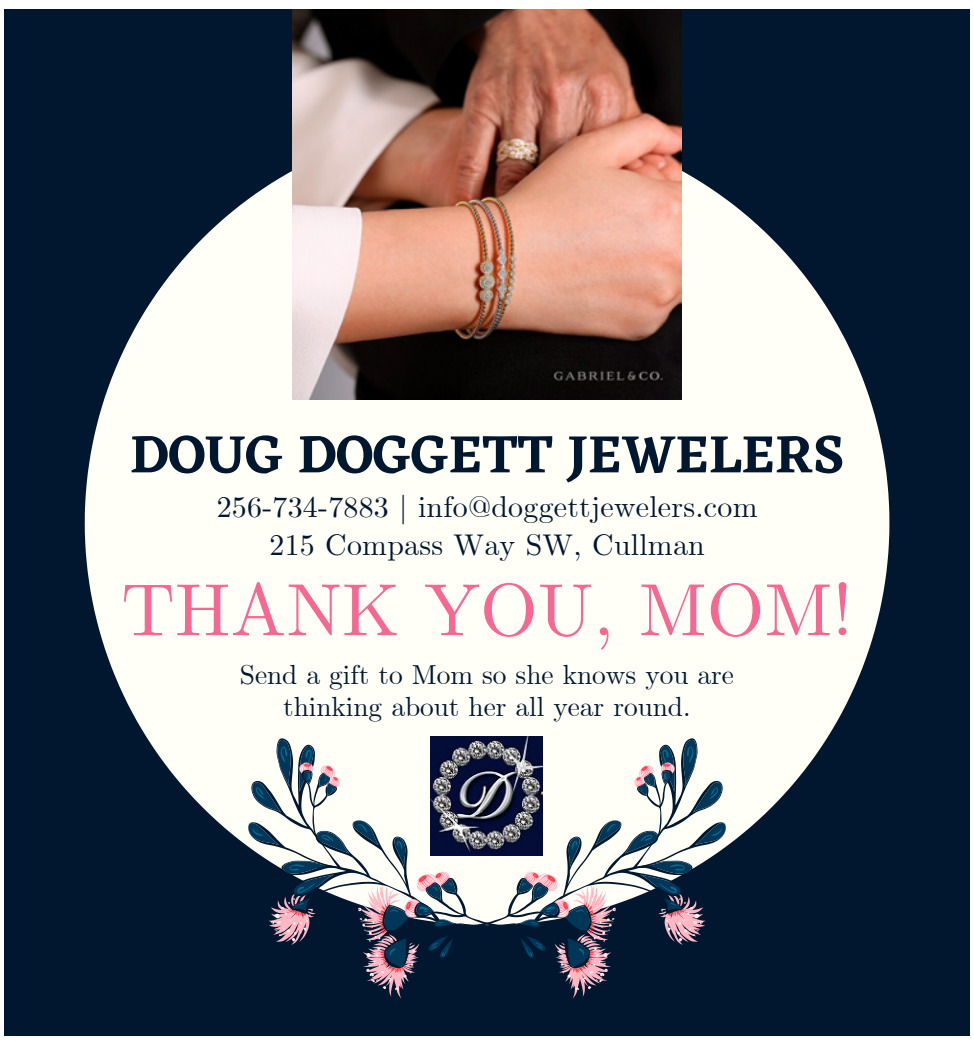

As we honor the members of "the Greatest Generation" who served 75 years ago, let us pause to reflect on the selfless work that these ordinary Americans accomplished.

On both V.E. Day and V.J. Day, I hope you'll join me by saying a prayer of thanks for those who served our country in World War II.

Also, let it serve as a reminder to us that it is the uncelebrated roles, doing the sacrificial, which is truly so important.

I'm proud to celebrate this day, not only as the conclusion of a horrible world conflict, but it was the beginning of peace. It was a peace built from the seemingly unremarkable men and women who returned home to live and work under the banner of freedom that continues to shine as a beacon for the rest of the world to see.

Today, I'm thinking of my father and the many loved ones that bravely fought for our freedom and returned to make a wonderful life for Alabama and the rest of our great nation. May God bless their memory, our great state, and the United States of America.

Cleo Elizabeth Lott McLeroy, 90, of Cullman died on May 6, 2020 with members of her family present. Her family held a private graveside service at the Cullman City Cemetery. Cleo was born Aug. 20, 1929 at her parents' home in Crane Hill, Alabama, the eighth of 10 children of Ulysses S. Lott and Effie Dale Milligan Lott. She was a pretty girl who, like most of her family, was pleasant and quick to laugh. In the fall of 1946, during her senior year at Cold Springs High School, she attracted the attention of B.F. "Buddy" McLeroy, who had returned to school that year after serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II. Cleo and Buddy married June 7, 1947, a few weeks after graduating high school. Their lifelong love affair over the next 68 years was an inspiration to many. Cleo was a devoted wife to Buddy and loving mother to their only child, Ronald Keith McLeroy, and was an absolutely beloved grandmother and great-grandmother by those who called her Mama Mc. She worked as Cullman High School's secretary and bookkeeper for 26 years and greeted everyone with a smile. She often bought lunches for students who did not have lunch money and became a confidant and advisor to many girls who worked as office aides. She was a member of Cullman First Baptist Church for more than 60 years. Cleo reluctantly entered two pageants during her lifetime. She was chosen as a Strawberry Princess in 1947, and 70 years later, she was selected as Ms. Woodland Village and a top 10 finalist in the Ms. Alabama Nursing Home Pageant. She traveled all over the United States with her family, but especially loved their annual visits to the Great Smoky Mountains. She enjoyed watching The Andy Griffith Show and reading John Grisham novels and frequently maintained in later years that her favorite activity was napping. Cleo was preceded in death by her parents; her husband Buddy; her son Ronny; five brothers Cecil, Alton, Charlie, Willie, and Donald; three sisters Venita Tucker, Mildred Abbott, and Shirley Haymon; and her three best friends Pat Boyd, Dorothy Sandlin, and Maryanne Guest. She is survived by her grandson Todd McLeroy and his wife Kathryn; her granddaughter Dana Schoenbachler and her husband Matt; her great-grandchildren Meghan McLeroy, Adam Schoenbachler, Ben Schoenbachler and his wife Audrey, Molly McLeroy, Sarah Beth Schoenbachler, and Myles McLeroy; her brother Jimmy Lott; her sister-in-law Elene Lott; her brother-in-law Ray Haymon; and a host of nieces and nephews. Cleo's family gives thanks to the staff of Woodland Village Rehabilitation and Health Care Center for their care and to Nellie Berry and Ralph Brooks for their friendship in recent years. Please visit www.mossservicefh.com to leave condolences for the family. Moss Service Funeral Home directing.

Folsom (from Front)

CULLMAN, Ala. – Cullman City Council President Jenny Folsom on Thursday said the council will not set public hearings on large rezoning requests until COVID-19 restrictions are relaxed, allowing for more access to the public.

Folsom's statement, in full, is below:

"It has been brought to my attention that one or more zoning requests at the Cullman City Planning Commission on Monday, May 4, 2020, had numerous interested parties attending.

"Due to the limitations of the COVID-19 virus rules for the public gatherings, those attending were not allowed to enter the auditorium, and it was difficult to participate in the meeting. Because zoning issues are of great importance to the community, and although the council has not officially received the recommendation of the planning commission, I believe it is only just for all parties interested in these zoning requests have reasonable opportunities, as allowed by law, to attend and participate in a meaningful way.

"The current limitations for gatherings, due to COVID-19, hinder such participation.

"From what I understand, there were no traffic studies, traffic controls, building schedules, need assessments, or drainage studies for the downstream effect of the project presented, all of which the council will need to consider in any largescale zoning request.

"Therefore, the council will not set a public hearing on this issue until the COVID-19 rules allow better access for the public."

Graduation (from Front)

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – Although the original graduation ceremony has been postponed to July 31, the faculty and staff at Wallace State Community College wanted to give the graduating class of 2020 a more immediate way to celebrate its achievements.

A sudden plan was devised during the WSCC cabinet meeting Monday, and just three days of preparation led to the college's first drive-in graduation ceremony, held just outside the Center for Fine and Performing Arts Thursday. Graduates drove up to the building in a parade of decorated cars to receive their diploma covers, tassels and free Chick-fil-A sandwiches.

Preparations were made for 700 graduates, and the number of leftovers afterward indicated that roughly 400 graduates participated in the ceremony.

Some graduates drove themselves, some rode with family (and in one case, both the mother and daughter were graduating together), while others rode with other students in a graduation carpool.

In every case, WSCC President Dr. Vicki Karolewics said she could see the "community college story" told through every vehicle.

"We had so many cars come through, and you could really see the community college story in each one," she smiled.

"We had cars with parents, children, dogs, cars with dents, with windows that didn't roll down, brand new cars... but in every car, there were smiles - smiles and tears."

She said the "community college story" is all about making a difference.

"Graduation is a big deal to us, and our students deserve to celebrate the great things they've achieved," said Karolewics.

"Just like they make will make a difference in the world, they also make a difference here during their time at Wallace, so we wanted to make a difference for them and the community that supports them and us."

A live stream of the event is posted on the WSCC Facebook page.

The official 2020 Commencement ceremony will be held Friday, July 31 at 6 p.m. in the Tom Drake Coliseum.
