United Way preparing for 2nd round of COVID-19 Community Relief Fund grants

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – As United Way of Cullman County (UWCC) held its virtual 2019-20 campaign celebration Wednesday, The Tribune got to sit down with Executive Director Becky Goff to get caught up on the agency's COVID-19 Community Relief Fund.

Goff reported that UWCC has raised more than $30,000, so far, for COVID-19 relief efforts from many donors, including large gifts from the Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Cullman Lions Club, Jack's Family Fund, Regions Bank, Havoline Xpress Lube, The Daniel Foundation, Truist Foundation and Wells Fargo.

"We launched the relief fund mostly the week right after the event occurred, and our board released the emergency funds of $5,000 to get it started," she said. "From that point on, we've been able to collect donations from community volunteers here in our community, but we've been really blessed to get a lot of foundation grants and national partnerships through our United Way worldwide, and our state of Alabama United Way board that we work with has enabled us to bring resources to the community.

"That is another blessing of having a United Way presence here in Cullman County. We're bringing resources to the community that we, otherwise, would not have been able to get to help bring relief to our community."

Goff continued, "It's been a real blessing to see, not only community folks donating and helping to support our community, but also being able to benefit from those national and statewide foundations who recognize the value that United Way brings to the community, and how we can quickly respond to needs and disburse those resources appropriately to the organizations who can do good work with them."

UWCC's first round of donations was mostly given as emergency funds to food pantries and organizations offering feeding programs.

The following organizations received $500 grants at that » PAGE 8

Vinemont Middle School finishes refurnishing gym floor

Sammy Confer
sammy@cullmantribune.com

VINEMONT, Ala. - Vinemont Middle School just wrapped up a big project this week, repairing the gym's floor. Principal Johnny Whaley explained the whole process and how long it took to get the project done.

"It all got started a couple of years ago with a fundraiser," Whaley said.

"Premier Bank partnered with us through the whole process and the plan quickly became a reality. The floor had not been done in 20 years, so it was overdue for a refurnishing and a new look.

"The process, from start to finish, took approximately two weeks. We had a professional floor company complete the project. They also redid our high school floor too.

"The students, parents and our community supported us through this whole thing."

Despite the students not being able to come see the new floor due to the pandemic, Whaley posted a video of it on Facebook and the results were not surprising at all.

"There was a video of the rebuild on Facebook," Whaley said. "The reactions to the video were very overwhelming.

"We had a floor plan on what it would like. We can't wait for the students to come and look at the court. We're very excited."

There have been some challenges for local schools during these hard times, but Whaley talks about the biggest challenge that they've endured during the pandemic and how he hopes this project will affect the Vinemont community.

"The biggest challenge right now is missing our students," Whaley said. "We love them and care for them.

"This will help bring some excitement for our students, our student-athletes and the community. We're really close. We have a saying here, "We are Vinemont."

Whaley has seen some tremendous support from the whole Vinemont community, and he's been completely overwhelmed and happy to see the whole community get closer and closer each day.

"It's brought us all close together and we've relied on each other and we're getting closer reach day," Whaley said.

"The level of compassion and unity through these challenging times has been overwhelming. We have a really great community at Vinemont and we really love our school district."

Whaley, along with the rest of the staff at Vinemont, has been extremely busy in making sure that the students will have everything that they need when school opens up in late August and he had a message for the VMS students.

VINEMONT MIDDLE SCHOOL

Vinemont Middle School finished refurnishing its gym floor this week.

"The teachers have been working very hard in making sure that the kids have everything that they need when they come back to school," Whaley said. "We miss them, we love them, and we can't wait for them to come back to school."

PREP BASKETBALL

Tim Bellmon named Lady Bulldogs head coach

Nick Griffin
nick@cullmantribune.com

HANCEVILLE, Ala. – After spending last season as an assistant on the sidelines with the Lady Bulldogs, former Wallace State assistant coach Tim Bellmon is taking over as head girls basketball coach at Hanceville High School. Bellmon is replacing Head Coach Christina Watson who served six years as head coach. Tim is also the father of former Bulldogs standout Tyson Bellmon who recently signed to continue his playing career at Marion Military Institute.

Bellmon began his coaching career at Victory Christian Academy in Dallas in 1998 and spent nearly 20 years coaching in the Lone Star State, making several stops to fill assistant and head coaching positions.

After serving as an assistant coach at Texas Wesleyan University from 2009 to 2014, Bellmon made his way East to Hanceville to join John Meeks' staff at Wallace State as an assistant. In 2018, Bellmon shifted onto the Lady Lions' sideline as an assistant for Coach Jessica McBrayer before filling the same role at Hanceville High School for the Lady Bulldogs in 2019.

Bellmon began his coaching career in high school and has made his way back after spending the better part of 20 years coaching at the college level.

The decision to return to high school coaching wasn't something Bellmon was thinking about when he came to Hanceville but felt he had to take advantage of the opportunity when it became available.

"Well, at 51 years old being on the road recruiting all the time isn't as big of a thrill as it used to be. So, this is kind of the perfect situation to be able to come up on the tail end of a 20-year career in the business.

"It was a good fit with me already being in Hanceville for a few years at Wallace and then just transferring over to the high school," Bellmon said.

"I'm already familiar with the area and I've had a great working relationship with Coach (Christina) Watson and Mr. (Jimmy) Collins and to be honest with you I didn't even come to Hanceville to coach. I came here to be a sub and it turned into coaching volleyball and basketball."

As of now, Bellmon plans to continue working with the volleyball team as well as the basketball team.

The most glaring issue that Bellmon will deal with on the court next season is the absence of former Lady Bulldogs star Kelly Pickett, who will be playing at Shorter University when the season begins.

"The good news is that there will be plenty of shots for new faces to step up and take this year, and Bellmon is excited to see how his players respond to the challenge.

"The biggest thing is I hope it gives the girls a lot of confidence. Kelly was always our safety valve and she's a really good safety valve but I think we have some girls that are way more talented than they have shown and they're going to have a stage to step up and show that they can do some things that I know they can get done."

With his first season as head coach on the horizon, Bellmon's goals for his team are already clear.

"My goal is just to get better every day. I want us to be judged by not how we look at the beginning of the season but by the end of the season," Bellmon said.

"I want to make sure that we're better in March than we are in October and that happens by continuing to get better every day."

Bellmon is thankful for the chance to take over the sideline for the Lady Bulldogs and wants to credit both his predecessor and his principal for helping him get to this position.

"For me this is just a true blessing. God puts you in situations for a reason and I never thought this opportunity would come about so I feel truly blessed and I plan on taking advantage of this opportunity," Bellmon said. "I can't thank Coach Watson enough for what she's done for the program and what she's done for me to be able to slide over one seat and of course I want to thank Mr. Collins for giving me this opportunity."

'Truest calling': Former swimmer Jordan Anderson answers COVID challenge

Greg Ostendorf
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Jordan Anderson will never forget his first trip to Auburn. It was his official visit. His flight from Virginia to Atlanta was delayed, so he didn't get on campus until well after midnight. And on top of it, the airline lost his luggage.

It was on that trip, though, in 2005 when Anderson was first introduced to Auburn swimming and diving. At the time, the men's team was coming off a national championship. Both the men and women had won it all the year before that. A standard had been set, and on that particular weekend, he vividly remembers watching both teams go through this intense four-hour circuit training Saturday morning.

"It was just this incredible energy but also this incredible passion," Anderson said. "You could see in every person's eyes that they wanted to win a championship. They had this incredible confidence and this incredible strength they derived from one another, and I wanted to be a part of it. It was this transformational type moment.

"Going through those same experiences as a swimmer, it allowed me to see that I was capable of much more than I thought I was. And I think I've continued to carry that same type of excitement about new opportunities, new challenges throughout my life."

Over the last two months, Anderson has had to face a new challenge, a challenge he never expected to face. As an Internal Medicine resident physician at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, he has been on the front lines day in and day out fighting against the Coronavirus pandemic that has killed hundreds of thousands of people across the world.

While at Auburn, Anderson was a part of two national championship teams – one as a freshman in 2007 and again in 2009, his junior year. He earned All-America honors as a member of the 400 medley relay squad at the 2009 NCAA Championships, and he also finished second individually in the 100 butterfly at the SEC Championships that same year.

More importantly, Anderson might not be doing what he's doing now – working on the COVID units in the hospital – if not for what transpired during the 2008-09 season.

Auburn head coach Richard Quick was diagnosed with brain cancer in December 2008. Anderson, who credits Quick for his development in and out of the pool, watched as his coach and their family battled this medical condition. The Tigers rallied behind Quick, winning the SEC and NCAA Championships that year, but Quick ultimately passed away three months later in June 2009.

"That experience was very powerful for me in terms of seeing someone that I was very close with, that I cared deeply for and who had a very impactful effect on my life go through a very difficult medical issue," Anderson said. "Seeing he and his family work through that, work with doctors – it really motivated me to want to do something like pursuing medicine to be able to help people in that way."

Anderson turned his focus to medicine where he found his calling in helping people.

In November 2009, he became Auburn's first Rhodes Scholar since 1980. After graduation, he spent two years at the University of Oxford in England on a graduate fellowship. He returned to the U.S. and worked with a healthcare startup before moving to Boston and beginning med school at Harvard Medical School. He graduated from there in 2018 and started work at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

At no part on his journey did Anderson ever envision he would be battling a global pandemic.

"It's a truly remarkable moment in history as everyone's aware," he said. "Being a physician or really any type of healthcare worker right now is just such an unbelievable moment in time."

When the Coronavirus first broke out in the U.S. in March, Anderson was on the second wave of staffing people. He worked from home, on call if there was a need, and continued to do patient outreach to his patients who were at home and could not go to the hospital.

In April, he transitioned to the hospital and worked in the non-COVID general medicine unit taking care of patients who were not COVID patients. He worked 12-hour shifts, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., six days a week. The paranoia was almost just as high working with the non-COVID patients because of the high rates of asymptomatic transmission and inaccurate testing results.

However, as of two weeks ago, Anderson moved over to one of the COVID ICUs, working directly with the COVID patients. He also moved to night shift, working 7 p.m. to 7 a.m.

There's a fear that comes with his new role, but there's also a sense of responsibility.

AU ATHLETICS

Former Auburn swimmer Jordan Anderson.

"I think when you have other people who are relying on you and you have a skill set and an ability to help them, it's what you feel like you are called to do," Anderson said.

"What's really struck me about this moment, the Coronavirus pandemic moment, is that I think for a lot of healthcare workers there's this feeling that going back for years and years and years of preparation and training and education, we've all been prepared for a moment like this where our friends, our colleagues, our neighbors need us and they need us to be there for them.

"That's the truest calling of being a healthcare professional is to be there in times of need and to be there with patients when they're at their most vulnerable and when they really need help."

Though he might not have envisioned anything like this ever happening, it's not to say Anderson wasn't prepared for it. Beginning with that first trip to Auburn in 2005, which gave him a direction for his path, he's taken bits and pieces from various mentors and experiences along the way that shaped him into who he is today and gave him the mental and physical fortitude to fight this battle.

With the Coronavirus came a challenge unlike any the world has ever seen. But like he has done time and time again throughout his life, Anderson has responded to the challenge.

"This is a really scary moment for our country and for our world, but we're seeing people stepping up to the challenge and taking it and inspiring one another and inspiring others," Anderson said. "In many ways, at least for right now, that's the silver lining. It's that we're coming together.

"Amidst a very polarized world, we're coming together for one another."

United Way of Cullman County postponed the 2019-20 annual meeting celebration due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The meeting was to take place on May 20 where United Way Board members, volunteers and long-time community partners planned to celebrate the accomplishments of the 2019-20 campaign and recognize local business and employees for their support.

For 40 years, volunteers and business partners have contributed from their paychecks to help improve our community. An unmeasurable amount of volunteer hours has been spent –this year alone we estimate our community benefited from over $74,000 in volunteer time and in-kind contributions made possible by United Way volunteers. Most importantly, thousands of lives have been changed.

This year we are not able to gather to celebrate, but we certainly want to recognize the accomplishments of our campaign and the individuals who have made an impact on our community on behalf of this organization.

In the release, Goff recognized the Top 10 Outstanding Workplace Campaigns:

1. Wal-Mart Distribution Center #6006
2. Publix
3. Rusken Packaging
4. Topre America
5. Alabama Cullman Yutaka Technologies
6. Louisiana Pacific
7. REHAU
8. Cullman Regional Medical Center
9. Cullman County Board of Education
10. Wallace State Community College

UWCC Resource Development Specialist Carol Berry takes pictures as Board Member Jennifer Parker and Executive Director Becky Goff get festive Wednesday morning.

Goff said, "We are disappointed that we could not personally recognize the volunteers and businesses that helped us pass our goal this year, particularly Wal-Mart Distribution Center whose Foundation made a special $30,000 grant to our annual campaign. Between the employee pledgees, corporate matching funds and the new grant, Wal-Mart Distribution and their employees have pledged over $100,000 to support our work in the community. We would also like to thank Publix Super Markets and Publix Charities for their support. Together they have pledged $82,000 to United Way."

UWCC received more than $475,000 in pledges prior to the COVID-19 shutdown.

Goff noted, "We know that there will be some pledge loss due to the recent economic impact to our community, but we also know that Cullman County is a very generous community and everyone will do all they can to help us meet the needs of our most vulnerable neighbors."

Each year, United Way invests in local nonprofits and programs that work diligently to transform our community in the areas of health, education and financial security.

The following programs have been awarded financial support from United Way after participating in a citizen review process that took place in February.

- American Red Cross
- Commission on Aging
- Cullman Caring for Kids
- Cullman County Center for Developmentally Disabled
- Easter Seals
- 4-H
- Girl Scouts
- Good Samaritan Health Clinic
- Hope Horses
- Hospice of Cullman County
- Pilot Light Home
- 2-1-1
- Senior Companion Program
- Foster Grandparent Program
- Victim Services of Cullman

United Way would like to thank our sponsors for their support of our events and fundraising as well as each individual that supported United Way through their payroll deduction or donation . . . The Annual Report to the community will be released later this summer.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Alabama Gov. Kay Ivey on Thursday presented the State's amended Safer at Home Order, which will go into effect Friday, May 22 at 5 p.m. Ivey, along with State Health Officer Dr. Scott Harris, continued loosening restrictions, specifically related to entertainment venues (e.g. arcades, theaters, bowling alleys), athletic activities, schools, day care facilities and summer camps.

"It's not realistic to think we're going to be able to keep everyone totally isolated from each other forever," Ivey said before outlining the amended order.

"To that end, effective Friday, May 22 at 5 p.m. and running through July 3, we're going to expand the number of businesses that will be allowed to re-open, while maintaining a 6-foot distance and by adding an extra layer or two of prevention and precaution on those who own these businesses, as well as those who frequent these businesses."

Ivey continued, "It takes all of us being vigilant and adhering to these social distancing guidelines in order to stop the spread of this disease...If we start going in the wrong direction, then we reserve the right to come back in and reverse course."

See Ivey's full remarks at https://bit.ly/2Zq9VVP.

Movie: Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets

A mysterious force threatens Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry in the totally captivating second movie adapted from J.K. Rowling's novels (and directed again by Chris Columbus). Harry, Ron and Hermione (Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint, Emma Watson) must find out what is causing people known as Mudbloods to become petrified — or else, the school will be closed. Robbie Coltrane, Kenneth Branagh and Richard Harris co-star in this 2002 tale.

Movie: San Andreas

This hit 2015 disaster movie depicts the havoc that ensues following tremors along the title fault line in California. The special-effects wizards are as much stars of the film as Dwayne Johnson, playing a rescue helicopter pilot who saves his estranged wife (Carla Gugino), then heads off with her to rescue their daughter (Alexandra Daddario). The fine supporting cast includes Paul Giamatti, Archie Panjabi ("The Good Wife") and Ioan Gruffudd ("Forever").

All on the Line

The bluefin tuna season in the waters around Gloucester, Mass., is nearly over for many boats, but this new unscripted series follows two strong-willed crews that are fighting to land even larger tuna as the brutal winter season sets in. In the face of even more daunting natural challenges, the plucky crews aboard the Julia Nicole and the Subdivider fishing boats have developed a special, more cooperative relationship in an industry that usually encourages and even demands cutthroat competition.

AKA Jane Roe

FX Networks' first documentary feature, this new film from producer-director Nick Sweeney profiles Norma McCorvey, the defendant in the historic Roe v. Wade Supreme Court case in 1973. That ruling found that state laws banning abortion were unconstitutional. The documentary chronicles how in the years after that, McCorvey dramatically changed her views on abortion, particularly after undergoing a religious conversion in 1995. She later would say that she considered her involvement in her landmark legal case the biggest mistake of her life.

Movie: The Daydreamer

The prolific production team of Arthur Rankin Jr. and Jules Bass are perhaps best known to fans for their long string of stop-motion animation specials that still air heavily in syndication, particularly around the holidays. The duo also collaborated on this delightfully whimsical 1966 feature that blends live action with stop-motion animation to chronicle the childhood of Hans Christian Andersen (Paul O'Keefe), with Jack Gilford as his father and Ray Bolger and Margaret Hamilton as local characters. The voice cast also includes stars ranging from Tallulah Bankhead to Hayley Mills.

10:40 p.m. on MAX
Movie: The Descendants

George Clooney earned wide acclaim for this superb, Alexander Payne-directed 2011 comedy-drama, casting him as an attorney stunned to learn of his wife's infidelity after an accident leaves her in a coma. He then decides to cross Hawaii with his daughters (Shailene Woodley, also excellent, and Amara Miller), not only to get a look at his rival but also to determine whether to sell land his family owns. Beau Bridges and Michael Ontkean ("Slap Shot") also appear.

Dwayne Johnson stars in "San Andreas" on TBS.

OPINION

Op-Ed: Census participation is not simply about you

Governor Kay Ivey
Contributor

Census 2020 kicked off in March, shortly before the word "coronavirus" entered our everyday vocabulary and upended life as we then knew it. And while the Census is not presently on the forefront of the vast majority's minds, it is enormously important to Alabama's future.

Alabama is currently reporting a 56.7 percent self-response rate, trending behind the current national 58.6 percent average — and well below the 72 percent total response rate in the 2010 Census. In Cullman County, the current response rate is 60.0 percent— showing there is a long way to go before we can count our participation efforts successful.

Some of you may say, "So what?" Some of you may say, "I don't want to participate or allow the government to have my information." Some of you may say, "It won't matter if I participate anyway — what's in it for me in the first place?"

Well, Census 2020 is not simply about you. Rather it's about your community and your family.

When you think about your life and the things you enjoy, but might take for granted, you should know many of those are impacted by the Census. Safe roads and bridges? Census. Good schools to educate our children? Census. Quality healthcare? Census. Job opportunities? Census.

How so? Alabama must exceed its 2010 Census count to keep its current number of federal representatives — representatives who fight for our state to be considered in times such as the current pandemic. Alabama must exceed its 2010 Census count to ensure that we provided the more than $13 billion in census-derived funding at stake that goes to our communities and to you. Alabama must exceed its 2010 Census count to be considered for new and expanding economic development opportunities — which will translate to future job opportunities for many of us.

Folks, we have to take action and participate. Alabama loses if we don't. If we fall short, we will be left behind.

Participation will determine whether life is tougher or easier for you, your children and your grandchildren over the next decade. If you cannot provide the six minutes needed to fill out the form, it will ultimately mean a tougher future for all of us.

How badly are people in your county and your city — particularly small business owners — suffering at present?

Reduced congressional representation means less voices advocating for the needs of our small businesses during national emergencies. Low participation can inaccurately skew a community's demographic data leading to reduced business opportunities.

Bottom line: take the Census. Take the time to respond, and know your information is protected by strict federal law. Whether online, via paper or over the phone, Alabamians can rest assured that their information is safe, secure and protected.

If you won't do it for you, do it for your family. Do it for already hurting businesses and individuals in your community. Do it so that, even during trying times such as this, our future can be bright for us and for those we love.

Remember, the 2020 Census is not simply about you.

Alabamians can participate in the 10-question Census online at www.my2020Census.gov, by phone at 1-844-330-2020 or by paper form — all without coming into contact with a Census taker. All participants' information is protected by strict federal law.

Rumors Deli feeds patients at Good Samaritan Health Clinic

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Rumors Deli paid a flavorful visit to Good Samaritan Health Clinic Thursday, delivering 100 meals for the clinic staff to give to its patients, thanks to a gift from a stranger in Virginia.

Rumors Owner Annette Harris explained, "Working late one night at the deli, I got a phone call. I normally don't answer the phone that late, but just thought I would. Answered the phone, and it was a man named Michael Wendel with AVW Technologies out of Virginia.

"I thought that was kind of strange, but he just told me that he wanted to help our business during this time, and he also wanted to let me help the community somehow. He just wanted to let me decide who needed the help, since I live here.

"So I thought about it, and wanted to help somebody that maybe has not had help. I thought about it, and he kind of wanted to help people that (are) less fortunate, which led me to call the Good Samaritan Clinic. I spoke with (Good Samaritan Executive Director Jolanda Hutson) and decided to do free lunches for these people. We were excited about it, and so we came up with this."

Wendel is president of AVW Technologies, a Chesapeake, Virginia-based defense contractor providing engineering analytical services to the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps.

According to Harris, he has a son at the University of Alabama but no previous connection to Rumors, and no connection to Cullman of which Harris is aware.

Harris admitted she initially thought the phone call might be a prank, and it took a second phone call from her to Wendel to seal the deal.

In a statement, Hutson said, "We are blessed to be a part of something really great today.

"I'm so thankful AVW Technologies in VA reached out to our community here in Cullman wanting to help. And I'm thankful that Annette thought of Good Samaritan Clinic and is enabling us to serve or 'treat'- pun intended- our patients in a less customary way.

"The United Way Food Bank is just across the street and we typically look to them and other organizations to provide for the food needs in our community. But today, thanks to a generous donor and Rumors Deli, Good Samaritan gets to help meet this need in our community specifically for our patients. It's a fun way for the staff and volunteers to get to serve our patients."

History (from Front)

craig@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – A City of Cullman construction crew working on the improvement project on First Avenue Southeast uncovered a small patch of the original brick pavement that once covered Cullman's downtown streets. The spot was found at the intersection of First Avenue Southeast and Second Street Southeast.

Crewman Wesley Benefield explained, "We located it this morning whenever we (were) milling up the road to repave it, and just found an old part of Cullman right there!"

First Avenue improvement project update

Mayor Woody Jacobs, who was with Benefield at the site, said that the removed asphalt will receive a temporary patch to make driving easier, and the entire stretch of First Avenue from the Festhalle to Second Street Southeast will eventually be repaved as part of an improvement project that will include:

• Accessible sidewalks compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act

• Festival lighting: string lights suspended over the narrowest part of First Avenue through the Warehouse District instead of lamp posts

• New landscaping with native plants throughout the area

• In a separate project, the district will also get a new parking area on a currently undeveloped lot on First Avenue.

Said Jacobs, "In the end, it'll all be new, but it's going to take about three months for the whole project."

Echoes of the old in the new

With a nod to Cullman's original streetscapes, the new street will feature intersections and pedestrian crosswalks covered with brick pavers in place of asphalt.

In addition to the aesthetics, according to Jacobs, "It marks the intersection for the pedestrians, but also traffic, it makes them- it's kind of a subliminal thing, almost- it makes them slow down, because of that difference in look."

time:

- Cullman Caring for Kids
- Pilot Light Home
- Victim Services
- Parkside Outreach Program
- The Link of Cullman County
- Daystar Church
- First United Methodist Church
- North Alabama Agriplex Foundation
- Restoring Women Outreach
- Cullman Little Pantry
- Child Advocacy Center

Its first round of grants considered a success, UWCC is taking applications for a second round of grants to 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations in our community involved in health or human service type programming, especially those impacted by doing COVID-19 relief, unable to hold scheduled fundraisers, seeing increased demand for services, having to purchase protective gear or cleaning supplies that exceed budgets or facing other problems due to the COVID-19 shutdown.

Said Goff, "We are going to be sending out a needs assessment to non-profits, asking them what is it that they could use some additional support from United Way's grant process, and kind of just tell us what their expectancy is as far as, maybe, their operational finances are stretched, or they've seen an impact. Those grants will be able to help them meet some of those needs."

Organizations seeking grants will have to complete an application to be submitted for review, and those that received a grant in the first round can re-apply.

Those with up-to-date documentation already on file still have to apply, but will not have to resubmit the same documentation.

Goff said, "We still keep everybody accountable, and we have to be very careful, making sure everybody's vetted.

"You can count on United Way to make sure that the agencies tell us where the money's being spent, and we're verifying that. So that's another blessing of giving to United Way: you know where your money's going."

Your organization does not have to be a UWCC partner agency to receive funds, as Goff explained, "We've extended our footprint because we know United Way is for the whole community. While we continue to support our network programs- and they are a priority for us- we want to make sure they're, because we know they're already vetted, and they're essential and have been delivering, for many years, some of their programming, so they are a priority for us.

"But we also know that there are a lot of other good organizations who haven't been able to receive funding from United Way but are still doing great work. We want to support them, too, because they help our community. And like I've always said, anything that benefits our community as a whole benefits each and every one of us. That's what United Way is here for."

UWCC will begin taking applications within the next 60 days. Review and approval can take as little as one to two days. Agencies already in the UWCC system will receive applications by email; those not in the system will be able to apply through the UWCC website at www.uwaycc.org.

Anyone who wishes to donate to the fund can also visit the website. You can mail checks to:

United Way of Cullman County, P.O. Box 116, Cullman, AL 35056.
