U.S. Space and Rocket Center launches $1.5M fundraising campaign to prevent permanent closure of museum and Space Camp

NASA.GOV

The U.S. Space and Rocket Center drew large crowds during the 2019 celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moon landing.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. – The U.S. Space and Rocket Center has been fascinating kids and adults alike, giving the west side of Huntsville one of the most distinct skylines in the United States since its opening in 1970. The museum opened shortly after the second Apollo moon landing, hosted Space Camp for the last 38 years and in 2019 hosted a huge celebration of the 50th anniversary of the first moon landing.

Now, only a few months after marking its own 50th anniversary, the largest space museum in the world, called one of the "seven wonders of America," could be closing its doors for good.

On July 28, center officials announced that the COVID-19 shutdown in the spring, coupled with extremely limited attendance at the museum and its 38-year-old Space Camp, is facing a $28 million shortfall and seeing the last of its regular funding sources dry up. Officials predict that, without the help of outside donors to raise at least $1.5 million, the museum will run out of money in October and close permanently.

At a broadcast press conference Tuesday, Alabama Space Science Exhibit Commission Chairman John Nerger said, "This morning I will be blunt; I will not mince any words. The coronavirus pandemic has created a dire situation at our beloved Space and Rocket Center, and we are now struggling for our very survival.

"We closed in mid-March to comply with state health orders. Our museum opened in late May with limited attendance; Space Camp resumed in late June at a mere 20% of capacity to abide by safe distancing requirements.

"Low attendance has meant a two-thirds reduction in revenue, an amount that means we are not financially viable. Space Camp will have to close its week-long programs again in September, due to the lack of enrollment from our international students and our school groups.

"We continue to seek local, state and federal assistance, but we » PAGE 5

Federal grand jury indicts 2 for kidnapping resulting in death of 3-year-old Kamille 'Cupcake' McKinney

Cullman Tribune staff
Contributor

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – A federal grand jury on Wednesday indicted two people for kidnapping and conspiracy to kidnap a minor victim, announced U.S. Attorney Prim F. Escalona and Federal Bureau of Investigation Special Agent in Charge Johnnie Sharp, Jr.

Separate indictments filed in U.S. District Court charge Patrick Devone Stallworth, 40, and Derick Irisha Brown, aka Quentesa Jackson, 29, each with one count of kidnapping and one count of conspiracy to kidnap a minor victim arising out of events which occurred in October 2019 involving 3-year-old Kamille "Cupcake" McKinney.

"This case is an excellent example of the seamless cooperation and coordination by federal agencies and our state and local partners," Escalona said.

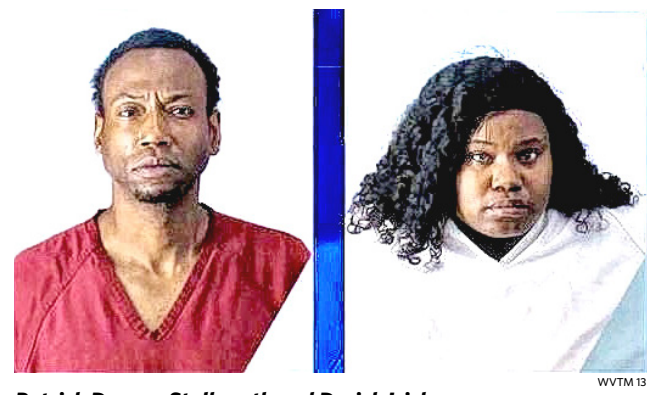

"Federal law enforcement stands ready to assist whenever our help is needed."

"The kidnapping of a child is one of a parent's biggest fears," First Assistant United States Attorney Lloyd C. Peeples said.

"Despite their best efforts, federal, state, and local law enforcement were not able to bring the 3-year-old victim home to her family.

"However, we hope that today's charges will be a step towards bringing justice for her and her family."

If proven that death resulted from the charges alleged in the indictments, Stallworth and Brown, would face a minimum sentence of life in prison, or death.

WVTM 13

Patrick Devone Stallworth and Derick Irisha Brown, aka Quentesa Jackson

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Birmingham Police Department and the United States Marshals Service all participated in this investigation.

First Assistant U.S. Attorney Lloyd C. Peeples and Assistant U.S. Attorneys Robin Mark and Blake Milner are prosecuting the cases.

An indictment contains only charges.

A defendant is presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Colony issues certificates of election; mayoral seat only race on ballot

W.C. Mann
craig@cullmantribune.com

WVTM 13

Eric Carwell and Jasmine Cole, two of Colony's incoming town council members, attended Tuesday's council meeting.

COLONY, Ala. – The Town of Colony on Tuesday issued certificates of election for its entire town council, since no candidate- incumbent or otherwise- is being challenged in the Aug. 25 Municipal Election. Only the mayor's seat is being contested, with incumbent Donnis Leeth facing a challenge from Councilman Curtis Johnson.

The councilman and mayor had been at odds, both personally and professionally, for some time before Johnson's announcement. At Tuesday evening's town council meeting, Leeth invited Johnson to schedule a debate, but Johnson declined, saying that he would share his platform via paid advertisements in local papers.

Colony Town Council

- Place 1 – Eric Carwell (In place of incumbent Melvin Hammond, who is stepping down for health reasons)
- Place 2 – Samuel Ashford, incumbent
- Place 3 – Mary Parker
- Place 4 – Jasmine Cole (In place of Curtis Johnson, who is challenging incumbent Mayor Donnis Leeth)
- Place 5 – Ethel Alexander, incumbent

The new council will officially be seated in November.

The council also approved the following election officers:

- Inspector – Gwendolyn Purifoy
- Clerks – Earline Johnson, Margaret Dimbo, Mary A. Hall, Evelyn Timmons

CARES Act grant funds supplying COVID-19 safety and sanitation materials

Town Clerk Patricia Ponder told the council the Town has spent approximately $14,000 of nearly $39,000 in grant funding available to Colony under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act (CARES Act), making facility modifications like adding plexiglass shields, sanitizing facilities, and supplying masks, gloves and sanitizers to local residents. She also cautioned that the Town will have to wait to make its next round of purchases until it receives reimbursement from the State for the purchases already submitted.

Council discussion items

Councilwoman Ethel Alexander told the council that Desperation Church, which came to Colony's gym for a day of service in July, will return the second Saturday in August to continue cleaning and painting.

The church team will arrive at 8 a.m., and Alexander said she hopes to see the town's children and youth come out to help.

Alexander also shared that she is working on application for two grants, one for the community garden and another supporting community historical preservation.

Councilman Melvin Hammond presented a letter that he will send to TSN Construction concerning continuing roof leaks at the Educational Complex that the company was supposed to have repaired. In the letter, the Town gives the company until Aug. 10 to complete repairs.

Ponder told the council that three air conditioning units at the Educational Complex are not working; two can be repaired, but one will have to be replaced. Due to a shortfall of Town funds until CARES reimbursement arrives, she said, in order to make repairs now, the Town will have to borrow approximately $10,000 from the Capital Improvement fund, then reimburse the fund when CARES reimbursement arrives.

Leeth talked about an act of vandalism at the gym, in which windows to the women's restroom were broken. He said he has contacted the Cullman County Sheriff's Office and the incident is under investigation. He said he is considering offering a reward for information leading to whoever broke the windows.

The mayor added, "He will be found."

Leeth also circulated a letter of thanks to Desperation Church for the council members to sign, and noted that work on local roads is currently on hold until CARES reimbursement arrives and some pressing needs are met.

The Colony Town Council meets for a work session at 5 p.m. the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month at Colony Town Hall, with its regular meeting following immediately after the session. The public is invited to attend.

A message to supporters of Alabama Athletics

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. -

- 27 National Team Championships
- 99 National Individual Championships
- 192 Academic All-Americans
- 106 Southeastern Conference Championships

No question there has been a lot to celebrate being part of the Crimson Tide. Whether you witnessed the goal line stand of the 1979 Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, or you were sitting in Mercedes-Benz Stadium watching the overtime win over Georgia in 2018 to win our 17th national championship, these are memories that will last a lifetime for all of us.

While we remain unsure of what is to come for the 2020-21 season, we continue to work through a multitude of scenarios and cost-savings measures to operate as efficiently as we possibly can in these unprecedented times. Despite the unknowns, we remain committed to the core of our mission, which is centered on educating, serving and developing the best student-athletes.

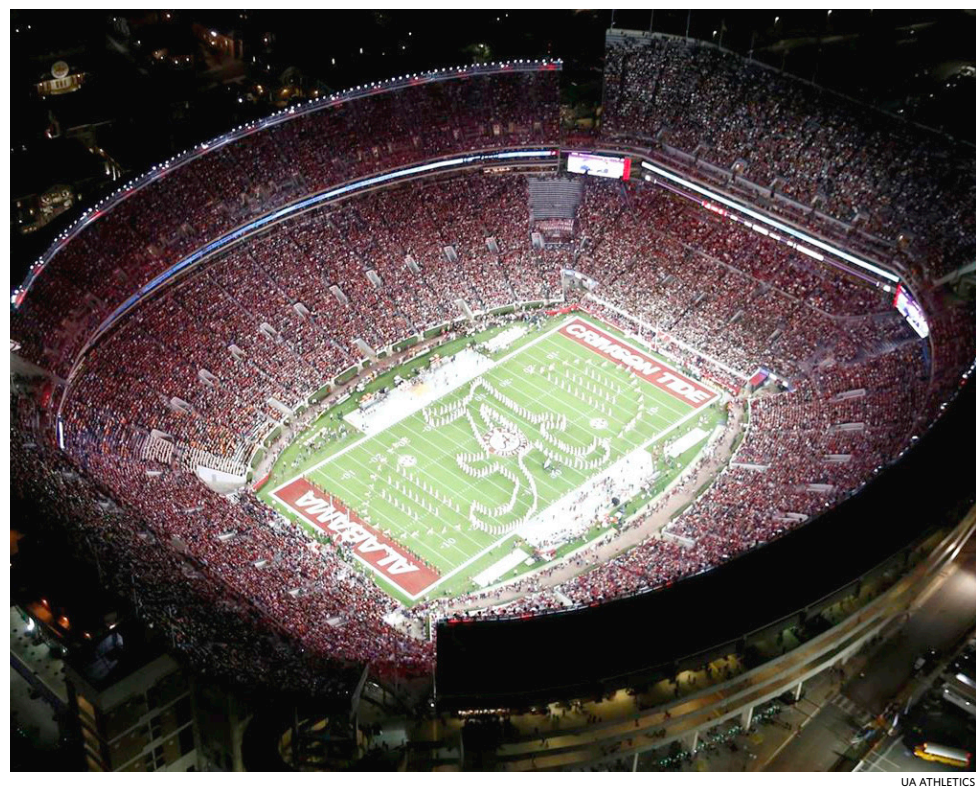

With the financial challenges Alabama Athletics is facing due to the COVID-19 pandemic, we've already taken steps to help offset revenue shortfalls including a decrease in operating budgets for all of our departments and sports, a freeze on vacant non-coaching positions as well as facility operating and energy savings.

We have a number of other strategies under review that we will look at implementing as decisions are made for the fall, however donor contributions, season ticket purchases and TIDE PRIDE memberships are vital to our operation and we could not be where we are without the support of so many of you.

Under normal operations, a large percentage of our annual budget comes directly from ticket sales and TIDE PRIDE memberships. In the event we have to adopt a modified seating model at Bryant-Denny Stadium, this number will be impacted significantly. While we don't yet know the effects on individual ticketholders, we do know that we will need your continued and generous support.

As plans become clearer, the Crimson Tide Foundation and TIDE PRIDE/ticket office will work with you to provide options to continue supporting our core mission, including the opportunity to donate TIDE PRIDE contributions and ticket purchases as a potentially deductible gift to the Crimson Tide Foundation. Those affected will also have the option to elect a complete or partial refund of TIDE PRIDE contributions and ticket purchases.

While we are still living in a world of unknowns, we do know that because of people like you, we will come out of this together. We would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you who have generously supported Alabama Athletics over the years. You play a crucial role in the experience of our over 600 student-athletes, and we are forever grateful.

Our staff remains hard at work and is here to serve you. Questions for the Crimson Tide Foundation can be directed by phone at 205-348-9727 or email at ctf@ia.ua.edu, while inquiries specific to the ticket office and TIDE PRIDE can dial 205-348-2262 or email ticketoffice@ia.ua.edu.

Devan Barrett senior spotlight: 'Know what's important'

Anne Jackson McClure
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – A highly recruited running back in the Class of 2017, Tampa Catholic product Devan Barrett had already begun to make his mark as a star athlete when he chose Auburn to further his career at the collegiate level.

Barrett looked at other schools in his home state of Florida, including UCF, Florida and Florida Atlantic, and while they were all great schools, he quickly realized that Auburn was "just different." He loved the fans and the coaching staff, whom he respected for their transparency.

As a true freshman, Barrett hit the ground running. He scored his first touchdown on a 4-yard reception against Arkansas and finished his freshman season on the SEC First-Year Academic Honor Roll.

However, because of his versatility, his sophomore season would be full of change. First, there was the move from running back to wide receiver during spring practice.

Then at the end of fall camp, he made an even bigger when he switched over to defense as a cornerback.

It took time to find his comfort zone in a new position, but Barrett took the challenge head on. It was all about trusting his ability.

"Switching from one position to another is difficult in so many ways, so I focused on what I needed to do to better my teammates and myself at my new position," he said.

Barrett made the grade, contributing not only on defense but also on special teams where he returned a blocked punt for a touchdown against Alabama State in that 2018 season. Last year, he played in seven games as a reserve cornerback.

Now, as he approaches his senior campaign, Barrett has gone from an unknowing freshman to one of the seasoned veterans on the team who is telling the younger players to trust the coaches and showing them how to take care of their bodies by maintaining good nutrition.

"He wants to savor this last year, though, because it's that bond he will miss most when football is over.

"Cherish what you have with your teammates," he said.

That bond is the reason why one of Barrett's favorite moments playing football for Auburn will be the tradition of when the team prays together in a circle before every game.

"Religion is a huge part of my life," Barrett said.

"It's very important to my father and my family, and it's been important to me since I was a kid.

"God comes first, and it's very meaningful to be able to share that feeling with so many of my brothers."

Looking beyond football, Barrett has high hopes for the future.

He plans to graduate in the spring 2021, and then he would love the opportunity to intern for Auburn in its broadcasting department with the hopes of one day becoming a sports commentator or television anchor.

Barrett, who is studying in the College of Liberal Arts, credits his success in the classroom to a strict schedule and his time-management skills.

"Know what's important and know what's a priority," he said. "Get what you need to get done and don't procrastinate."

One thing that will always be important to Barrett is his connection with the Auburn Family.

"Whenever I hear 'War Eagle,' I know that person is part of my family," Barrett said.

"I know it's someone from Auburn and we are more than classmates or fellow alums – I look at that person as family. That's what makes Auburn special."

UAB Athletics launches Blazers Allies: Dedicated to Diversity

Ted Feeley
UAB Athletics

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – Director of Athletics Mark Ingram and the UAB Department of Athletics have launched Blazer Allies, a detailed program devised to listen, educate, act and provide a platform which allows sports to be a catalyst for change and empowerment regarding diversity and inclusion.

Blazer Allies serves as a support arm of the UAB Department of Athletics and is charged with listening, aiding, educating and developing strategic action on areas of diversity, inclusion, social justices, gender equity, LGBTQIA+, disabilities and social economic status. Blazer Allies is comprised of the entire department, student-athletes, coaches and administrators, along with university and community partners.

"We are fully committed to diversity and inclusion and will continue to take a stand against racial injustice," Ingram said. "We remain dedicated to amplifying athlete and staff voices in response to systematic racial injustices in our country, and are continuing to take steps within our department to embrace the cultural differences among our student-athletes and staff."

The UAB Department of Athletics and its student-athletes have had several dialogues about race and inequality in light of recent events surrounding Ahmaud Arbery, George Floyd, and Breonna Taylor, among others. Blazer Allies is a platform for UAB Athletics to continue to create a culture of inclusive excellence.

Blazer Allies has implemented Student-Athletes and Administrators with Voices, a social media platform designed for all to reflect and support the social movement through their own voices.

Blazer Allies will continue with WE not ME dialogues within the department and partner with entities within the industry and local community.

Katreshia Louis-Verrett, UAB's Senior Associate Athletic Director, will serve as the new Chief Diversity Officer and spearhead Blazer Allies.

"I am honored to serve and continue to work with the amazing committee members and department to lead these efforts," Louis-Verrett said. "This is important and requires tough conversations, yet these are discussions that must be ongoing within intercollegiate athletics and the university landscape."

UAB ATHLETICS
UAB Athletics announced it was launching Blazers Allies Tuesday.

Along with continued dialogue and a social media presence, Blazer Allies will also provide student-athletes, coaches and staff with educational programs and resources, including guest speakers, virtual and in-person trips to study history, as well as other initiatives throughout the academic year.

Caroline Curtis earns Co-Medalists honors at Women's Western Amateur

Haley Peterson

FRANKFORT, Ill. – Alabama women's golf rising sophomore Caroline Curtis emerged in a victorious tie for the Margaret Lenz medalist trophy at the 120th Women's Western Amateur. Curtis tied for first in stroke play with Mississippi State senior, Blair Stockett at Prestwick Country Club in Frankfort, Ill.

"Being able to get back into tournament play after all the COVID-19 craziness has been really great," Curtis said.

"It felt really good to be able to get back out there and be in control of my game and to make match play.

"I'm very excited to get match play going tomorrow and keep playing."

The Richmond, Virginia, native fired a 3-under par 69 on Wednesday to post a 36-hole total of 4-under par 140 and claim one of the top-two seeds in Thursday's opening round of match play.

Curtis closed stroke play with 10 birdies.

"There are a lot of great players on the field so to be able to put two great rounds together and to be able to come out on the top feels great.

"But, everything resets, and it is all about match play."

With the cut to the low 32, the first two rounds of match play are set for Thursday.

The match play quarterfinals and semifinals will be played on Friday, with the 18-hole championship match to be held Saturday morning.

Option (from Front)

realize their ability to help is limited. We just cannot afford to wait for someone wearing a cape to swoop in and rescue us."

Nerger laid out an aggressive plan of action for saving the space center and camp, including laying off more than 90% of the current workforce and launching the "Save Space Camp" fundraising campaign.

On its Go Fund Me campaign page, officials made this statement:

Space Camp has been on a mission for 38 years to educate and inspire students from all over the world about space and science, but now we need mission support.

Due to the Coronavirus pandemic, we have seen a dramatic reduction in attendance at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center museum and Space Camp, leading to a significant decrease in revenue and operating capital. We reopened Space Camp after a four months closure but at greatly reduced number this summer.

With limited admission from international students and school groups this fall and winter, we're forced to close our weeklong camp programs again until April 2021. These ongoing challenges have meant a devastating loss of two-thirds of our revenue.

At this time, we have exhausted all funding possibilities, and without your support the U.S Space & Rocket Center and Space Camp will have to close in October. However, we firmly believe that failure is not an option, so we are turning to you.

We need the support of our fellow science enthusiasts, Space Camp alumni and anyone who believes in the spirit of exploration to help all systems return to go.

In its first 15 hours, the "Save Space Camp" campaign raised more than $290,000. By 4:15 p.m. Wednesday, that amount was $416,362.

Prior to the COVID-19 shutdown, the U.S. Space and Rocket Center hosted more than 500,000 visitors per year and, in 2017 saw almost 800,000.

From 2013 through 2019, it was the no. 1 paid-admission attraction in the state. Since 1982, Space Camp has graduated more than 900,000 students, many of whom now work in aerospace industries and a few of whom have actually gone to space.

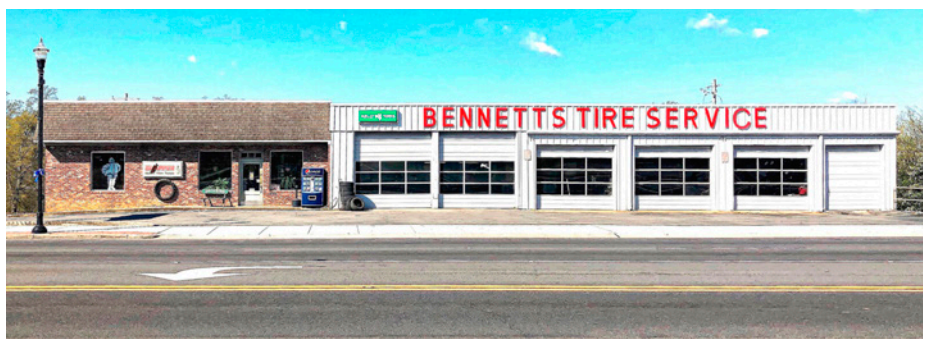

The joint facilities generated more than $100 million per year in revenue, and are considered major contributors to Huntsville's economy.

St. Bernard Prep issues instructions for return to class

Heather Mann
heather@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – St. Bernard Prep School on Wednesday issued instructions for the start of school in August, including the use of masks inside buildings.

Headmaster Fr. Linus Klucsarits issued the following statement: "St. Bernard Prep in Cullman, Alabama is open for business!

"SBP will be offering in person classes starting August 17th, 2020.

"St. Bernard Prep is committed to the value of in person education in the Benedictine tradition."

Instructions to students

Masks: Students will wear masks when inside buildings. This is for the protection of students and staff and in accords with the State's requirements. Masks will be provided by the school. Students will be allowed to bring their own masks as long as they are a solid color; blue, black, or white. No writing or pictures on masks permitted.

Daily temperature checks: All people arriving on our campus will have their temperature checked with hand held, touchless scanners. The procedure for this check has been emailed to you. Students with temperatures of 100.4 or above will be sent home.

Hand sanitizers: There will be hand sanitizing stations on each floor of each building.

Desk sanitizing: At the beginning of each class students will wipe down their desks and work areas. Students will use sanitizing wipes provided by the school.

Social distancing: The school will practice social distancing as much as possible. Large gatherings of students will be kept to a minimum. The seating in the lunch room will be spread out and juniors and seniors will eat in a separate dining area. Teachers will be encouraged to use outdoor space weather permitting.

Daily cleaning of the school: Each night a cleaning team will do a deep cleaning of all buildings in the school. All surfaces will be wiped down with disinfectant.

Earlier this summer, SBP President Fr. Joel Martin said, "Times are a bit challenging, but St. Bernard has been in Cullman since 1891, living through two world wars, an influenza pandemic in the early 20th century and many national and local upsets, but we're here, and will be, carrying out our mission of offering the best and fullest education possible: something that is found in Catholic schools – and nowhere else on earth."

Applications still accepted

Fr. Klucsarits also shared that St. Bernard is still accepting applications for all grades 7-12. Contact admissions director Brendan Flannery at 256-255-5890.

Fundraisers (from Front)

Christy Perry
christy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – During a normal summer you are likely to see smiling and waving kids with signs for car washes, bake sales and other types of fundraisers all over town. This year, due to COVID-19, even the simple effort to raise money for school activities has been disrupted, leaving booster clubs and school organizations looking for new ways to raise money. Some larger fundraising efforts are still up in the air due to the future's continued uncertainty.

Marching bands across the area are already hard at work preparing halftime shows for what is certain to be a very different fall football season.

The Cullman High School Bearcat Band's annual Bearcat Band Card sale kicked off this week but with some obstacles. Band members are not allowed to set up booths at local businesses in hopes of selling the popular discount cards.

Bearcat Band Booster President Leeanna Smith said she has had to make some major adjustments to normal fundraising.

"The band card sale is primarily for the students to assist with expenses toward their performance and trip," she said. "The band will delay the trip until spring. A percentage is kept by the band to assist with instruments and uniform upkeep. The band card sponsors were acquired in February to allow for printing so fortunately we had those locked in before the COVID shutdown."

Another way many bands raise money is through running the concession stands at football games.

Smith explained, "Money from the concession stand funds our travel to away games, as well as security. This one will probably be the most affected by COVID due to possible restrictions to games and attendance."

She added, "Cullman City Schools took a break from fundraising out of respect for business and the community as everything slowly reopened.

"We were allowed to fundraise for the visual ensemble last week, but because of shipping deadlines to prepare for the season, this only allowed us one week to pull off a fundraiser."

Rather than hold three separate fundraisers for the dance line, color guard and majorettes, Smith opted to combine their efforts. "We did this out of respect for local businesses. We didn't want to ask three times, and, as always, the community showed tremendous support and we had a very successful fundraiser."

Students have all been instructed to wear masks whenever they approach people or businesses during fundraising and have been encouraged to utilize email and phone contact whenever possible.

Hanceville Band Booster President Bart Absher spoke of the decisions being made for Hanceville's band program.

He said, "To cut back on the expense of uniform upkeep and cleaning, the kids will not perform in the marching uniforms this year," he said. "They will each get a couple of nice shirts to wear for performances."

The primary fundraiser for the Hanceville Bulldog Band is the annual Mud Creek Marching Festival. Last year, the festival attracted more than 25 bands from around the state, but this year, the fate of the festival is uncertain.

For other fall activities such as volleyball and cross country, how their fundraising will be affected is still unknown.

Fairview's head volleyball coach Tracy Means said, "Fairview's volleyball program is proceeding with open and volunteer volleyball skill practice and strength training for the 2020 summer along with offering satellite volleyball camps for Fairview's students. Our students are just thrilled to be back in the gym. Fundraising provides many of our athletes the ability to play the sports they love without putting a huge financial burden on their families. We have kicked off our fundraisers for the season. We are not sure how this pandemic will affect their profits yet, as our deadlines are not due quite yet."

She continued, "We have always expressed to our student athletes, 'Do not let money hold you back! If you want to play, we will find you the money.' In my 28 years of teaching, I have only had to help two students out financially by providing them with a business partner. Our wonderful community and business supporters are essential to our program. They have been very generous to our athletes. We understand that many of them have been greatly impacted by all of this as well. Even though the future is always uncertain, we will continue to work hard with and for our local businesses so that we can succeed."

Cullman High School Cross Country Coach Trent Dean credits the program's booster club for making sure the program would be in good shape for unforeseen events.

He said, "They have been very financially responsible in years past, which put us in a position to be able to step back from fundraising for the time being."

Like most school programs, Dean is taking the "wait and see" approach to the fall season and budgeting.

He added, "We went ahead and did our annual in-program Run-a-Thon at the end of June that allows the flexibility and prudence to ask for a little from family, friends or close acquaintances who are in a good position to support, but no businesses. We have made it a point to not ask or reach out to any local businesses since we know many of them are experiencing a tough stretch here. We are also holding back from asking parents to pay a registration fee until we know more about the fall and access the necessary budget."

Many school groups utilize spirit nights at local restaurants, which have had to be put on hold for the foreseeable future.

Smith, who also chairs the Cullman High School Theatre Boosters, said, "This area will be the most impacted by COVID-19 due to social distancing guidelines for restaurants. We look forward to collaborating with them again for this fundraising opportunity but only when it's safe to do so. In the meantime, we are looking at other opportunities such as grants."

Perhaps Fairview's Coach Means best summarized the attitudes of the coaches and boosters we spoke to by saying, "We do what we do because we love kids and the sport of volleyball. So, we will be here to help out if needed. We are looking forward to a great season. Money of no money!"

Order (from Front)

wendy@cullmantribune.com

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – Gov. Kay Ivey on Wednesday extended the state's Safer at Home Order until Aug. 31, 2020 at 5 p.m. In addition, the order was amended to require masks in "schools and colleges, where possible, for employees and students in second grade and above."

Specific wording from the amended order states: "Each employee, and each student in second grade or above, shall, to the greatest extent practicable, wear a mask or other facial covering that covers his or her nostrils and mouth at all times when in regular interaction within six feet of a person from a different household."

"These decisions are not easy, and they're certainly not fun," said Ivey. "There's no way in the world you're ever going to make everybody happy 100% of the time. But one thing is for sure. Tough decisions are a lot easier to make when you're on the sidelines than when you're actually in the arena. Now I've said many times since my very first press conference, back when we are still learning how to pronounce 'coronavirus,' that when you've been elected governor, you've got to try to do the right thing, not necessarily the most popular thing. There is such a fine balance, as we have discussed countless times, in factoring both the human health as well as the economic health into the equation. As I've said before my administration and I have made our share of mistakes during this pandemic, but our goal has always been to make more good decisions than bad, hopefully leading to more positive results along the way."

Ivey said she is aware that many people don't like the idea of wearing a mask.

"While no one enjoys wearing a mask, I'll be the first to tell you that because of the help and support we've gotten from our friends in retail and business, I believe we are making progress in this arena," she said.

"Y'all, we just must remain vigilant if we're going to get our kids back in school and keep our economy open. And wearing a mask can't hurt, but it sure can help. More and more people are seeing this for what it is: a way to protect yourself as well as to protect the others that you work with, come in contact with, care about and those you even love."

The governor also had a message for the state's educators, reiterating her support of in-classroom instruction this fall.

"Speaking of our schools, I want to encourage every superintendent, every principal, every teacher and every parent who's listening- we don't have the luxury of not getting our young people back in school," said Ivey.

"While I respect those districts that have elected to go to virtual classrooms, I feel with all my heart that a slide will come by keeping our kids at home, especially if there are other options, and that slide is likely to have a dramatic negative impact on Alabama's future: our young people. So here's a challenge to all of our school districts and each of our schools around the state: Nothing is set in concrete, and if the COVID-19 situation in your community or counties permits, you should be looking to phase back into in-person classroom participation if at all possible."

She continued, "We know that with all the responsibilities of being a teacher, that this can be an added burden to require that a mask be worn, but just as we are focused on creating a safe and healthy environment for our students, it's also important that we take care of our teachers as well. Other than our parents, one of the most important persons in a child's life is that teacher of that child. And many of our students and their families rely on school for more than just classroom activities. School is a safe place where many of our children get their healthiest meal of the day and where they are loved and encouraged as well as taught. As a former school teacher myself and as president of the state school board, I'm telling you we need to do everything we can to get our kids back in the classroom as soon as possible."

Both Cullman County Schools and Cullman City Schools are offering traditional and virtual learning options this fall. Both had encouraged the wearing of face masks; now they will need to enforce the new mandate.

"We will give each student three reusable/washable masks, but each family will be responsible for washing them and bringing them back and forth to school," said Cullman County Schools Superintendent Dr. Shane Barnette. "We will have disposable masks available in certain cases, but outside of that students are responsible for their own masks. We will also be providing our faculty and staff with reusable/washable masks and/or face shields."

The Tribune has not heard specifically from Cullman City Schools Superintendent Dr. Susan Patterson; however, earlier this month the Alabama State Department of Education announced it ordered 2.5 million facial coverings for faculty, staff and students. That is about three per person.

Alabama State Health Officer Dr. Scott Harris at Wednesday's press conference gave an update on the state's COVID-19 numbers.

"As of this morning, we are at 81,687 confirmed cases so far. More than 22,000 of those have been confirmed just in the past two weeks. We added about 1,345 cases yesterday. I think there's a question as to whether we maybe are flattening out a little bit over the past three to four days, although I think it's a little early for us to say that. I would say overall our numbers are not yet particularly encouraging. I think we are still continuing to see fallout from the July 4th holiday and the transmission events that we seem to have around that weekend," he said.

"We, unfortunately, are at almost 1,500 deaths here in our state. Actually, 1,493 Alabamians have died from COVID-19 since this response began. Over the past few days, our hospitals have set, several different times all-time highs in the number of inpatients. A couple of days ago, they were right at 1,600 inpatients, I think 1,599 two days ago, 1,598 yesterday, basically, about 1,600 inpatients plus a few hundred other confirmed cases.

"These numbers are as high as we've ever seen. It's very consistent with what we saw around Memorial Day. We had big spikes in numbers of cases after Memorial Day, followed by hospital surges, and I think we have seen something very similar now, around the 4th of July."

Harris said more than 5,000 health care workers have been infected since March. He also addressed the face covering mandate.

"I'm very aware that many people don't like the idea of having to wear a face covering, and certainly I don't either. I know people don't like being told what to do, and I don't either, but I do believe that it's the right thing to do," he said. "I know, early on, we had mixed messages about that- I personally gave some of those- because we were just trying to give the best evidence that we had at the time, but today there's no argument about whether these are effective. Physicians and public health officials and medical researchers all have a consensus that this is the best tool that we have right now for preventing transmission of disease, short of everyone being locked in their house, which we certainly don't intend to see."
