Margaret Jean Jones Center adult day program in limbo due to COVID-19

NICK GRIFFIN/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

Since mid-March, the Cullman County Center for the Developmentally Disabled (CCCDD)'s Margaret Jean Jones Center has not been able to operate its adult day program due to COVID-19.

Heather Mann
heather@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. – Since mid-March, the Cullman County Center for the Developmentally Disabled (CCCDD)'s Margaret Jean Jones Center has not been able to operate its adult day program due to COVID-19.

On June 15, the Alabama Department of Mental Health Division of Developmental Disabilities (ADMH-DDD) issued its 15th Guidance for AL Community Providers of Services for Individuals with Developmental Disabilities release. It states, "Given the responsibility of the ADMH-DDD to ensure health and safety and, considering the rising number of positive cases in Alabama and the vulnerability of the population served through our waiver services, ADMH-DDD will postpone the opening of facility-based day services through July 31, 2020."

Unfortunately, the center remains closed. CCCDD Director Charese Morris said part of the issue is the way the center and its clients have been classified.

"We receive funding from Medicaid and the Department of Mental Health. The DMH governs when we open and how we operate," she said. "They are treating our residents/individuals like nursing home residents. We have not been given a reopening date – well, we have, but it seems to change every two weeks! Our families have adjusted with keeping our day program people at home, but those caregivers need a break as well. Many of the caregivers are older adults – some need to go back to work."

SEC announces new fall preseason football practice schedule

AU Athletics
auburntigers.com

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – The Southeastern Conference today announced adjusted dates for preseason football activities for SEC schools with the first allowable practice now scheduled for August 17. The new SEC calendar provides student-athletes with more days off than required by the NCAA and fewer practices than permitted by current NCAA rules.

The new preseason calendar was developed based on recommendations of the SEC's Return to Activity and Medical Guidance Task Force. Last week the SEC announced its intention to begin the 2020 season on September 26 as it continues to monitor developments around COVID-19.

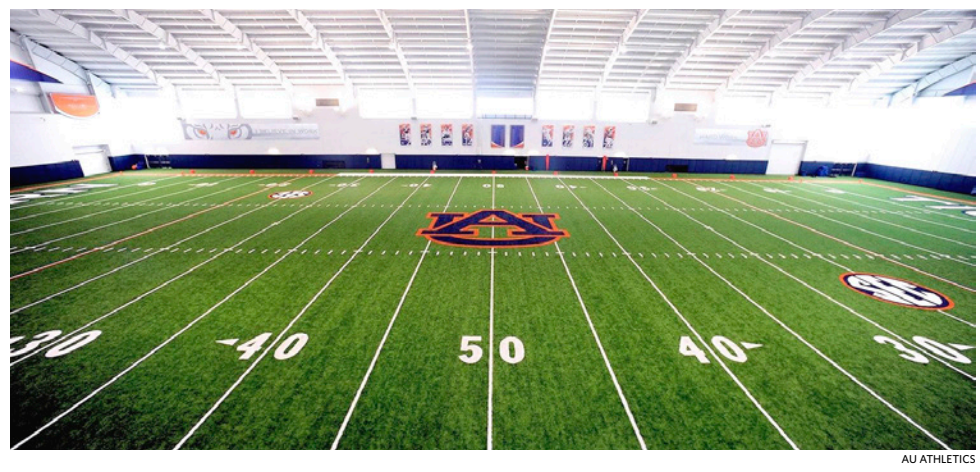

The original start date of September 5 would have allowed for preseason football practice to begin August 7.

In the revised SEC preseason football calendar, from August 7-16 schools are permitted to conduct up to 14 hours per week of strength and conditioning, meetings and walkthroughs.

Beginning August 17 and until the opening game, schools are allowed 25 practices with a limit of 20 hours per week of practice time.

A five-day acclimatization period is required, with two days in helmets only, two days in shells and the fifth day in full pads.

Schools will be required to provide student-athletes a minimum of two days off each week until the week before the first game of the season.

AU ATHLETICS

The Southeastern Conference released a new schedule for preseason football activities Wednesday morning.

UAB Athletics wins 2019-20 Conference USA SAAC Cup

Ted Feeley
UAB Athletics

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – UAB has won the 2019-20 Conference USA SAAC Cup, which is annually presented to one-member institution who's existing student-athletes make contributions in community service projects, as well as achievement in personal development programming and academic success.

C-USA and its membership institutions are recognized for their participation and accomplishments in predetermined SAAC areas of emphasis during each academic year, which encompasses the following: Academic Excellence Award, C-USA Career Development Initiative, Financial Literacy Programming and Academic Year Community Service Recognition.

"I am beyond proud of our student-athletes, specifically the SAAC reps who lead and encourage their teammates to make a difference in the community and attend student-athletes development programming," said Caitlin Callaghan, Associate Director of Student-Athlete Development and leader of the UAB Student-Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC).

One of UAB's three core values within the Department of Athletics is 'Making a Difference.'

UAB has been one of the national leaders in community service over the last five years.

In 2019-20, the Blazers collectively logged over 3,800 hours of giving back to the Birmingham community.

To win the C-USA SAAC Cup, member institutions receive points for final standings within each of the SAAC Cup areas of emphasis.

UAB ATHLETICS

UAB Athletics captured this year's USA SAAC Cup after making many contributions in community service projects.

The Blazers had three teams win the Academic Excellence Award: Women's Tennis, Women's Basketball and Softball. Within the community, UAB is very active with many organizations, including Children's Hospital, Smile-A-Mile, Lakeshore Foundation, Miracle of Gardendale and Habitat for Humanity.

For more information on the UAB SAAC program, follow @UABSAAC on Twitter and Instagram.

Auburn baseball ready to 'get to work' this fall

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – After a year like no other in 2020, the 2021 college baseball season shapes up to be a season like no other, in terms of talented rosters.

The option for seniors to return after the coronavirus pandemic prematurely ended the 2020 season, coupled with the Major League Baseball Draft limited to five rounds, means players who would normally be playing minor league baseball in 2021 will instead remain on campus.

Auburn will be no exception. While the Tigers lost ace pitcher Tanner Burns in the first round and left-hander Bailey Horn in round five, Auburn will return key pitchers Cody Greenhill and Jack Owen and outfielder Steven Williams, who resisted overtures from MLB teams to remain on the Plains.

"We just have a lot of unfinished business," said Williams, whose dramatic home run as a sophomore vs. Georgia Tech in the 2019 Atlanta Regional paved the way for Auburn's first College World Series appearance in 22 years.

"We're going to be really experienced, that's for sure," Williams said. "Most of our guys are coming back but I'm sure there will be a few spots here and there that some of the new guys can try and compete and earn some playing time, so I'm excited."

Rankin Woley, who moved from first base to third in 2020, plans to return for what will be a second senior season to anchor the left side of the infield with junior shortstop Ryan Bliss.

Opportunities for newcomers and returners like utility stalwart Brody Moore exist at second base, first base, designated hitter and catcher, with Matt Scheffler leaving to pursue a professional baseball career.

"Come in and just do your thing. Your time will come," Williams said of his advice to Auburn's incoming players. "Come in with an open mind and be ready to do whatever the coaches need."

On the mound, Cody Greenhill intends to join the rotation after serving as Auburn's closer for three seasons.

BEN DOBBS/AU ATHLETICS

Auburn v. Chicago State

"I was a starter in high school, so I kind of know the ropes," said Greenville, who saved 19 games for the Tigers from 2018-20. "I'm excited to get back to work. Having a full year with Tim [Hudson, Auburn's pitching coach] is going to help a lot. Can't wait.

"Sadly, the freshmen this past year didn't get to experience the SEC, but I think they're ready to work and get back at it.

"Hopefully these new guys coming in are going to watch what we do, be ready to jump on and get to work."

After the 2020 season ended so quickly and unexpectedly, Auburn's baseball student-athletes will take a renewed appreciation for the game into the 2021 season.

"It shows that it can be taken away like that," Greenhill said.

"We've all been playing baseball since we were 5 years old," said Williams, who's launched 23 home runs in his first three seasons on the Plains. "I think we're all ready to get back going in the fall."

Fuqua lands on Patrick Mannelly Award Preseason Watch List

Ted Feeley
UAB Athletics

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – UAB redshirt senior long snapper Jacob Fuqua has been named to the Patrick Mannelly Long Snapper Award Watch list. The award, given each year to the nation's best long snapper, is named after former Chicago Bear Patrick Mannelly.

Fuqua, a 2019 Honorable Mention All-Conference USA player, finds himself on the initial 20-man watch list for the award and is the lone player on the list from Conference USA.

He has handled all long and short snapping duties for the Green and Gold the past two seasons after being the primary short snapper in 2017.

During the 2019 season, Fuqua tallied four tackles and recovered a fumble, all while helping kicker Nick Vogel hit 37-of-37 PATs and 19-of-23 field goal attempts.

Semifinalists for the award are scheduled to be announced on Nov. 16, while finalists will be named on Nov. 27 with a winner being chosen on Dec. 12.

The selection committee for the Patrick Mannelly Award includes six former NFL long snappers, former NFL head coach Dave Wannstedt, former national championship-winning coach Tom Osborne, NFL kicker Robbie Gould, and writer Phil Steele, among six other members.

nursing homes and similar long-term care facilities say that such facilities must "limit the entrance of visitors, as defined by the facility, and non-essential health care personnel, except for certain compassionate care situations such as maternity, end-of-life, and support for persons with disabilities, as well as any other situations where the presence of a caregiver would facilitate appropriate care."

Senior citizen centers have had all regular programs suspended completely, except for meals available via curbside pick-up or delivery.

Morris continued, "The problem with all this is that there is no manual for what to do next. We are all expected to adapt to masks, PPE (personal protective equipment), social distancing – but many of our people don't understand that.

"They need love by means of hugs and smiles – things that the virus rules won't let you do."

One CCCDD client's parent, David Screws, spoke to The Tribune about how the closure is affecting his daughter and her friends.

"The daily teaching activity is not taking place since the center closed, and clients are not allowed to go to the center at all," he said. "Our daughter doesn't get to be around staff and other clients, and she and the other clients really miss seeing their friends."

Without being able to go to the center for various activities, many clients spend most of their time in one of the CCCDD's group homes.

While she does not know when the CCCDD will be able to reopen and resume day program activities, Morris said other programs have continued operation.

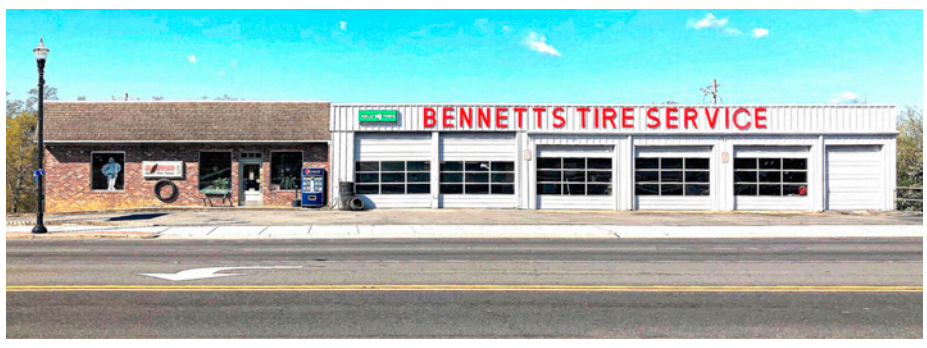

"Our employees have continued to work. The day program has been closed since March 18, but our eight group homes and our work center that recycles boxes for Wal-Mart have remained open the entire time," Morris said. "The daycare reopened in April, and our day program employees have been able to fill in at group homes during the day hours."

She continued, "I can't say enough for the employees of CCCDD. They have been amazing! We have a great group of workers who are determined to do the best they can to keep our residents safe."

Morris finished by saying, "Our day program building was heavily damaged by the hail storm of 2018. We were so excited that the repairs were completed in May. We cannot wait for our CCCDD family to see it when we reopen – hopefully one day soon."

State releases 2020 Fish Consumption Advisories

Cullman Tribune Staff, Black Warrior Riverkeeper

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – The Alabama Department of Public Health (ADPH), in cooperation with the Alabama Department of Environmental Management (ADEM), the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (ADCNR) and the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) last week released the Alabama Fish Consumption Advisories report for 2020.

According to Black Warrior Riverkeeper, "Of the 213 advisories issued across 98 waterbodies in Alabama, 16 of these advisories were listed in the Black Warrior River watershed.

"According to the 2020 report, the State tested fish at 522 locations. 144 of those locations (across 98 different waterbodies in the state) were deemed dangerous and included an advisory on the consumption of fish on those rivers and streams. In total, there are 213 health advisories across the state. More than half (62%) of the advisories are for largemouth bass -- the most sought after game fish in Alabama and, ironically, the official State Freshwater Fish of Alabama.

"After catching and testing certain types of fish, the State issues the consumption advisories to warn anglers NOT to consume fish that are contaminated with dangerous pollutants like polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and methylmercury. Many of the advisories warn the public not to eat any fish from the specific waterbody, while others recommend limiting exposure to one or two meals per month."

Specific to Cullman County, the report advises against the consumption of largemouth bass from Lake Catoma, due to mercury, and against the consumption of largemouth, spotted and striped bass from the Lewis Smith Reservoir, also due to mercury.

"Anglers shouldn't have to worry about whether the fish they catch are safe to eat or not, but unfortunately they do," said Nelson Brooke, Black Warrior Riverkeeper. "Mercury from coal emitted by Alabama Power Company's coal-fired power plants across the state has caused unsafe levels of mercury to build up in fish tissue. Sadly, that means bass and catfish from numerous popular fishing lakes are unsafe to eat, especially from pregnant women."

"In Alabama, the River State, our anglers do not have a right to know where the fish are unsafe to eat," said Victoria Miller, Coosa Riverkeeper's Fish Guide coordinator. "Even though multiple state agencies are involved in the testing and analysis process, many Alabamians are left to find this information on their own because there is no legislation on this issue. Fortunately, non-profit organizations like ours are helping families reel in this important public health information across Alabama."

Black Warrior Riverkeeper said in a media release: "Our partners at Coosa Riverkeeper have updated their popular Fish Guide program to include the 2020 advisories. Fish Guide was developed over several years as a response to surveys conducted with more than 250 anglers along the Coosa River. The purpose of Fish Guide is to educate fishermen throughout the state of the fish consumption advisories at their favorite fishing holes. In addition to providing them with information about the fish consumption advisories each year, the program also features a toll-free hotline for anglers to immediately hear the advisories throughout Alabama. That hotline has now been updated with the 2020 advisories. Anglers can simply call 1 844-219-RISK to hear the current fish consumption advisories on all the waterbodies throughout Alabama. Dial 6 to hear the advisories in the Black Warrior River basin."

"These advisories serve as a reminder of the legacy of pollution we have and are continuing to deal with across the entire state," Jack West, Alabama Rivers Alliance policy and advocacy director, said. "The state provides a vital public service by releasing these advisory reports on its website, but they must do a better job of reaching fishermen where they are -- on the banks of our rivers. Fishing is a way of life here, and generations of Alabamians have made countless memories and supported local economies by getting out on the water. We will always fish in the River State, but we need to make sure people have the information needed to do it safely and avoid eating polluted fish that could harm their health and the health of their families."

UAB launches second round of urgent, high-impact COVID-19 research

Jeff Hansen

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – Urgent high-impact COVID-19 research at the University of Alabama at Birmingham is catching its second breath, thanks to the generosity of Alabama business leader donors and the discovery and clinical skills of UAB researchers.

Ten new pilot projects — funded by $402,000 in donations — began Aug. 1. The projects will last six months and were selected for their high probability of having an impact on the COVID-19 crisis within weeks or months. Competition for funding was open to the entire university, and 76 applications were received, showing the intense interest of faculty across the campus.

This round of research grants follows 14 projects advertised to faculty of the UAB School of Medicine that were funded beginning May 1, after the Birmingham and Montgomery business community raised $1.1 million in just 20 days in March and April. Part of that money is helping fund this second round.

The pilot projects will yield payoffs down the road from the knowledge UAB researchers gain.

Preliminary data from the pilots will form the basis for new grants and contracts, including pursuit of the $2 billion COVID-19 grant support being offered by the National Institutes of Health.

"The number of high-quality proposals we received made the decision on which ones we could fund very difficult," said Kent Keyser, Ph.D., associate vice president in the Office of Research, who managed the second round and led the review process. "These projects, together with the 14 projects funded in May by the UAB School of Medicine, show once again that UAB is at the forefront in fighting COVID-19. We are grateful for the philanthropic support that made the program possible."

Kent Keyser, Ph.D.The 10 projects have 27 principal investigators or co-investigators, and they come from a broad swath of the UAB School of Medicine, as well as an investigator from the UAB School of Public Health, Department of Epidemiology.

The School of Medicine departments represented by these investigators include:

- The Department of Medicine and its divisions of Pulmonary, Allergy and Critical Care Medicine; Gerontology and Geriatric Medicine; Infectious Diseases; Gastroenterology; Preventive Medicine; and General Internal Medicine.
- The Department of Pediatrics and its divisions of Pediatric Rheumatology, and Pediatric Pulmonary and Sleep Medicine.
- The departments of Anesthesiology and Perioperative Medicine; Radiology; Cell, Developmental and Integrative Biology; Microbiology; and Pathology.

The interactions of investigators from all these backgrounds fulfill part of UAB's strategic plan, Forging the Future, with the objective of enhancing UAB's institutional culture of collaboration and innovation.

The titles of the funded grants also show the diverse research at UAB:

- Clonal diversity of human antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 S-protein.
- Glucocorticoid treatment of COVID-19 cytokine storm syndrome.
- Therapeutics targeting COVID-19 entry into pulmonary epithelial cells.
- Immunotyping COVID-related acute respiratory distress syndrome.
- Circulating microbiota and microbial endotoxin drive uncontrolled immune activation of blood monocytes in COVID-19.
- Development of a tri-specific neutralizing antibody for the treatment of SARS-CoV-2 infection.
- Individual- and area-level risk factors for COVID-19 disparities in the Deep South.
- Exploratory study of the effect of tranexamic acid treatment on the progression of COVID-19 in outpatients.
- Molecular mechanisms underlying the pathogenesis of acute respiratory distress syndrome in critically ill SARS-CoV-2-infected patients.
- Neutrophils as a driving mechanism of acute respiratory distress syndrome and death in COVID-19 patients.

The pilot projects will yield payoffs down the road from the knowledge UAB researchers gain. Preliminary data from the pilots will form the basis for new grants and contracts, including pursuit of the $2 billion COVID-19 grant support being offered by the National Institutes of Health.

Jessica Towns"We are deeply grateful to our local and national philanthropic partners for quickly responding with critical support needed to accelerate UAB's COVID-19 research efforts," said Jessica Towns, UAB School of Medicine's executive director of Development.

"Through our recent Day of Caring and ongoing fundraising initiatives, we have seen tremendous generosity from the community. This support provides significant resources and encouragement to our scientists, faculty, staff and students during this challenging time."

Although the first round of pilots was advertised to the School of Medicine, the projects included funding for Sue Feldman, R.N., Ph.D., in the UAB School of Health Professions, to ensure scalability of the UAB helpbeatcovid19.org website to broader communities, including translating the site into Spanish.

Helpbeatcovid19.org is a geographical symptom tracker, driven by crowdsourced, consumer-generated data to monitor and visualize COVID-19 symptoms across the United States with a focus on hard-to-reach communities in Alabama. Helpbeatcovid19.org also provides valuable research data for use by researchers across the entire UAB campus. Helpbeatcovid19.org is the precursor to Healthcheck, which is part of the GuideSafeTM platform of tools being used for returning to campus operations.

CULLMAN, Ala. – Gov. Kay Ivey on Wednesday announced she has awarded $100,000 to "improve infrastructure, increase safety and pave the way for 30 new jobs in the city of Cullman."

The City of Cullman will use Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds to implement traffic safety improvements at the entrance to Cullman Industrial Park #2. The traffic safety improvements precede plans by Reliance World Corp. to expand its facility in the industrial park and hire 30 new workers to its existing workforce of 280 people.

Back in May, the Cullman City Council voted to authorize Mayor Woody Jacobs to apply for CDBG funds for the installation of a traffic signal at the intersection of Alabama Highway 69 (Cherokee Avenue) and 24th Street Southwest, and committed matching funds from the City. Cullman, between the city government, Industrial Development Board and others, will provide a local match of $105,000 for the construction phase of the project.

Jacobs noted the cooperation between agencies from the Cullman Economic Development Agency to the Alabama Department of Economic and Community Affairs (ADECA) and Alabama Department of Transportation (ALDOT) on the placement of a traffic signal in a busy industrial area along a state thoroughfare.

City officials said the improvements are necessary because of increased traffic volume coupled with frequent automobile crashes at the site.

"The perils of the COVID-19 pandemic are not over, but I am encouraged by the good economic news that is emerging throughout Alabama," Ivey said. "The expansion by Reliance World Corp. is just another indication that Alabama's economy is getting back on track. I am pleased to support this expansion."

Reliance Worldwide is a global provider of water control systems and plumbing products for residential, commercial and industrial customers. The company plans a $2 million upgrade and expansion of its Cullman plant to increase its manufacturing capability.

ADECA is administering the grant from funds made available by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"From day one of her administration, Gov. Ivey has made jobs a priority, and that is particularly true as we attempt to overcome any setbacks caused by COVID-19," ADECA Director Kenneth Boswell said. "ADECA is committed to assisting Gov. Ivey in her pursuit to make jobs available for all Alabamians."
