CULLMAN, Ala. – The Cullman County Commission met Thursday morning, for the last time with Chairman Kenneth Walker at the helm.

Commissioner Kerry Watson said to Walker, “I would just like to tell the chairman, I’ve enjoyed working with you over the past few years, and I am proud of the accomplishments we have made. I hope you have a great future.”

“It’s been a good ride!” said Walker. “It’s been good working for you.”

Chairman-Elect Jeff Clemons will take office next week.

The commission ratified the City of Cullman’s tax abatement for Project York/Reliance Worldwide.

Stanley Kennedy with the Cullman Economic Development Agency spoke of the economic impact the $24.25 million project will bring to Cullman County, saying, “This abatement is worth $1.6 million over a 10-year period. From this project you will get 130 jobs averaging $18 an hour.

“You will create a $1.2-$1.3 million in educational tax revenues over that same 10-year period, which will go to Cullman area schools.”

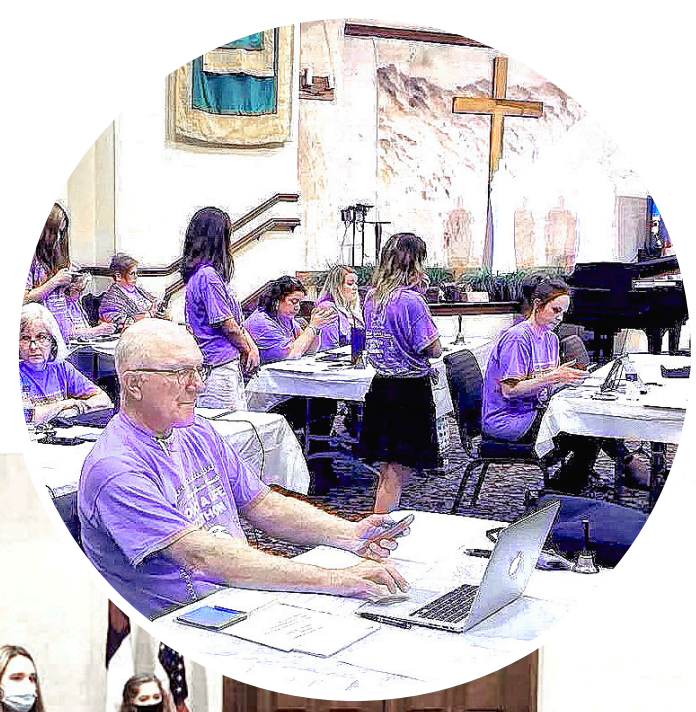

He said the project is also projected to generate $145,000 in additional tax revenue per year.

The new 300,000-square-foot distribution center will be located on an 81-acre site off Cherokee Avenue in southwest Cull- » PAGE 3

CULLMAN, Ala. – Six Cullman-area organizations received grants totaling almost $22,000 from the Alabama Mountains Rivers Valleys (AMRV) Resource Conservation & Development (RC&D) Council, in partnership with the Alabama Legislature this year.

The organizations, their projects and grant amounts were:

- The Link of Cullman County, Wise Up Money Skills for Teens, $2,175
- Cullman County Soil and Water Conservation District, Teachers Workshop, $2,000
- City of Good Hope, Good Hope Municipal Park trails, $5,125
- City of Hanceville, Hanceville Dog Park, $5,125
- Alabama Cooperative Extension System, Cullman RiverKids, $2,525
- The Foundry, employment readiness, $5,000

Sen. Garlan Gudger, R-Cullman; Rep. Randall Shedd, R-Fairview; Rep. Corey Harbison, R-Good Hope; and Rep. Scott Stadthagen, R-Hartselle were present for the announcement at the Cullman County Economic Development office.

Gudger said dollars come back into the districts because there are many organizations in Cullman County willing to make communities better.

He said Cullman County would not be where it is without the leaders in the community creating the need and asking for funds.

"Teamwork represents Cullman County, and you are seeing that come back full circle to make Cullman a better place to live, worship, work, play, eat and be the best community it can be," said Gudger. "We want to keep working for you and it's an honor to be a part of the team."

Shedd thanked AMRV RC&D and all the participants for the work they are doing in Cullman and said he is a firm believer in community projects from which the public can benefit.

"You all have done a lot of great things for our county and I appreciate you personally," said Shedd.

"We are fortunate to be in position to be in a good situation in Montgomery and help get projects completed back home."

Longtime AMRV RC&D Board Member Robert Harbison thanked the Legislature for continuing to support RC&D in Alabama and stated that is not always the case across the country.

"Serving on the national RC&D board, we see councils across the country struggling to support local communities and that's not the case in Alabama because of the partnership we have the Alabama Legislature," he said.

The State of Alabama has funded RC&D for 20 years through state appropriations from the Education Trust Fund and General Fund budgets. RC&D is dedicated to protecting, enhancing, and developing the state's natural and human resources.

The RC&D program was established by the Agriculture Act of 1962 to provide a program that empowers rural people to help themselves. RC&D areas include adjacent counties that have substantial natural resources to use for economic improvement and community betterment.

There are nine RC&D Councils throughout the state. RC&D Councils in Alabama are nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations within the state that are designated 501(c)(3) entities by the Internal Revenue Service. AMRV RC&D serves Cullman, Morgan, Lawrence, Limestone, Madison, Marshall, Dekalb and Jackson counties.

RC&D Councils are made up of citizens in an RC&D area who want a better life for themselves, their children and future generations. RC&D Council representatives and alternates are volunteers who assist RC&D.

For more information about the AMRV RC&D program, visit www.amrvrcd.org.

CULLMAN, Ala. – Columbia traveled to Oliver Woodard Stadium Thursday night for a regional showdown with the Bearcats originally scheduled for Oct. 9 and Cullman wrapped up the regular season with a 40-6 win over the Eagles. The victory gives Cullman an 8-2 record in the regular season with the state playoffs coming up next week.

Columbia was forced to turn the ball over on downs on its opening possession and the Bearcats took advantage almost immediately. Max Dueland took a quarterback keeper for 25 yards down to the 1-yard line and on the next play, Jamar Kay took the handoff around right end and scored to give the black and gold an early 7-0 lead.

The Eagles opted to punt on fourth down at the end of their next possession but a high snap sailed over the punter's head and into the end zone for a safety, making it a 9-0 game midway through the opening quarter. The 'Cats got another quick stop to take over possession once again and just two plays later, Jake Dueland ran one in from 10 yards out to extend the lead to 16-0 with just over five minutes to play in the first.

Cullman got the ball back on offense late in the first quarter and with just 10 seconds remaining in the period, Noah Kee burst through the line and outran the defense for a 40-yard touchdown to put the Bearcats on top 23-0 going into the second quarter. Cullman's next score came early in the second quarter when Jaden Kay took a direct snap and ran it off left tackle for a 7-yard touchdown. The extra point made it 30-0 'Cats with just over eight minutes to play in the first half.

The Eagles put together a time-consuming drive on their next possession, but they couldn't get on the scoreboard and Cullman went into the locker room at halftime with a 30-0 advantage.

Both teams agreed to a running clock in the second half and the Bearcats received the kick to start the third quarter. After a few plays, Jamar Kay found the end zone for the second time, this time from 30 yards out to stretch the lead to 37-0 midway through the third. Another turnover on downs from Columbia late in the third quarter gave the ball back to Cullman and the 'Cats capped off the ensuing possession with a 32-yard field off the foot of Nate Zillis that made it 40-0.

The Eagles did find the end zone once during the game when they connected on a 66-yard touchdown pass down the middle of the field that cut the deficit to 40-6 with just over seven minutes to play but that was all the offense Columbia was able to muster and Cullman held on to win it 40-6. Four different runners found the end zone for the Bearcats. Jamar Kay finished with scoring runs of 1 yard and 30 yards, Jake Dueland scored from 10 yards out, Kee had the longest run of the night with a 40-yard score and Jaden Kay punched one in from 7 yards out. Max Dueland led the 'Cats with 43 yards on the ground.

Cullman finishes the regular season 8-2 with the win and will host Shades Valley at Oliver Woodard Stadium in the opening round of the 6A State Playoffs next Friday.

A Round of Applause for the (Cullman County) Joy-Givers: Phil Cabri and daughters

Ben Johnson South
Contributor

HOORAY FOR THE JOY-GIVERS! We always need more smiles, music and laughter. The "local" version of this fun series salutes those seriously unsolemn people, places and things that bring joy to our community.

The "SHIELD THE JOYOUS" shields, which will be given to those honored or to their family, are inspired from a passage in "The Book of Common Prayer" (1662). Prayers are lifted to "tend the sick, give rest to the weary, bless the dying...and shield the joyous." Joy-givers are precious. Let us preserve them, protect them, treasure them, smile with them, laugh with them, tap our toes with them and give them A ROUND OF APPLAUSE.

A CULLMAN ROUND OF APPLAUSE for JOY-GIVERS: PHIL CABRI and DAUGHTERS

There are joy-giving angels among us in the Cullman area, and three of those are "Holiday Hosts with The Most," Phil Cabri and his daughters D'ete Sewell and Gina Smith. For many years, these joy-givers have opened their home and hearts to legions of friends for one of the happiest gatherings during the "Hap-Hap-Happiest season of all." I love that it's a place for people with intensely differing politics and passions to come together for laughter and good cheer. Here's a fun, party recipe to honor this trinity of joy-giving angels:

CARAMELIZED BRICKYARD BACON

Yield: Two dozen bite-sized hors d'oeuvres

I first discovered this easy, delish (everybody loves bacon) party recipe the fashion designer, Bill Blass, shared in an interview.

1. Pick up 1/2 pound of thick-cut, sliced bacon from Brickyard Meats (another Cullman joy-giver) and pack a cup of dark-brown sugar.
2. Preheat the oven to 250 F.
3. Rub the bacon with the brown sugar on both sides. Pat it down to make it stick to the bacon.
4. Place the bacon on a heavy baking sheet. Bake for 40-50 minutes until the baw ww w con is crisp and caramelized.
5. Remove from the oven and let it cool. Then, break the slices into bite-sized pieces.

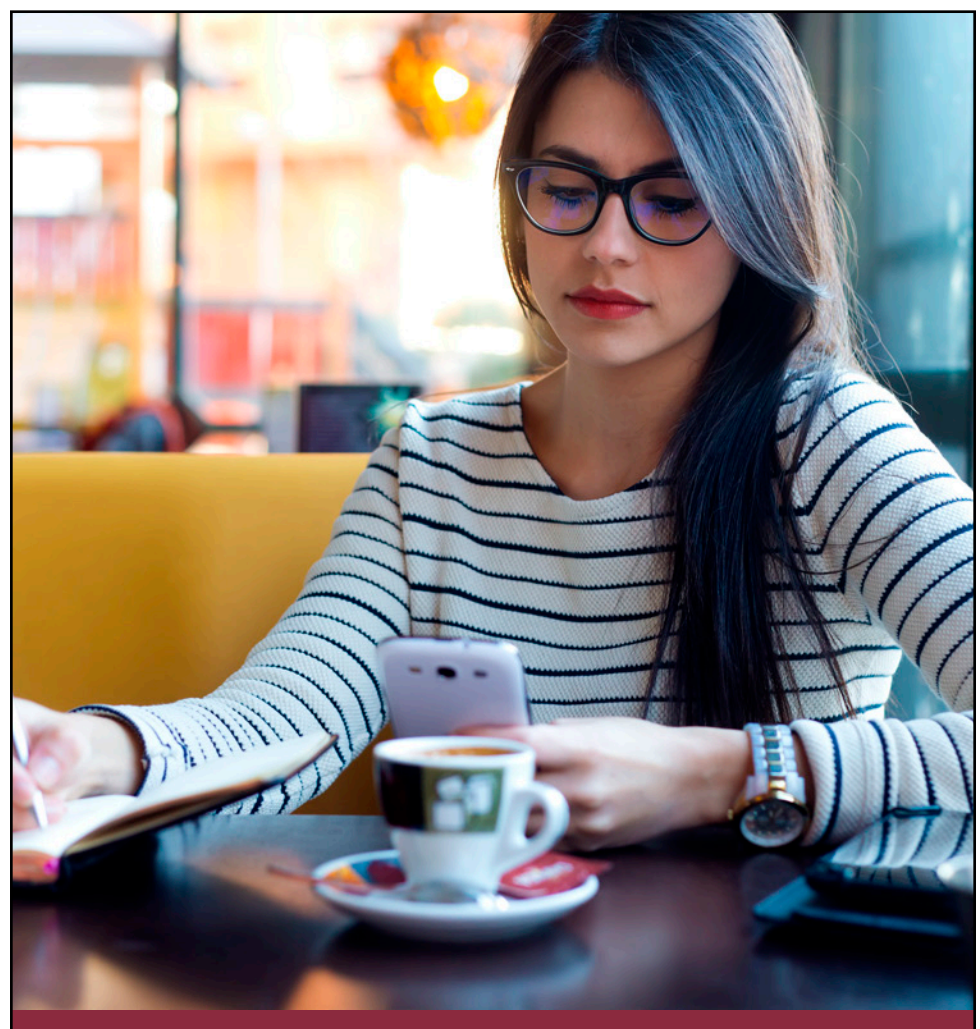

This is perfect with a bourbon, Bloody Mary or a co-cola. Friends of Phil Cabri always volunteered to tend bar. Last Christmas, the bartender was Brad Smith, a crowd favorite. Phil Cabri has moved to a new home in Cullman this year, so it could be a year where the many friends of Phil, D'ete and Gina treat them. We need a little Christmas, NOW!

Movie: Friday the 13th

Unlike John Carpenter's "Halloween" two years earlier, which kept much of its violence suggested rather than graphic, this 1980 slasher flick really let it rip with its depiction of the gory fates handed out to a group of sexually adventurous young counselors at a summer camp where a young man drowned years earlier. Kevin Bacon is among the unlucky victims, while Betsy Palmer — best known as a daytime TV and stage musical performer at the time — is cast against type, to put it mildly. A 2009 remake immediately follows on BBC America.

Feral hog population in Alabama shows no decline

David Rainer
Ala. Dept. of Conservation and Natural Resources

Despite an increased effort to mitigate the impact of feral hogs in Alabama, the hog population shows no indication of decline.

"Unfortunately, it appears their numbers are continuing to increase," said Matt Brock, Technical Assistance Wildlife Biologist with the Alabama Wildlife and Freshwater Fisheries (WFF) Division. "I'm basing that on talking to people and on reports from areas that haven't had hogs before."

Brock is also basing that theory on the number of feral hogs harvested by hunters during the 2019-2020 season.

Disturbingly, that total exceeded the number of white-tailed deer taken during the same period. According to the WFF's annual hunter survey, it was estimated that about 218,000 deer were harvested.

The number of feral hogs taken was estimated at about 255,000.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), feral hogs cause more than $1.5 billion in damages to property, agricultural interests (crops and livestock), native wildlife and ecosystems as well as cultural and historic resources.

Brock said as part of the Farm Bill passed by Congress, a large, comprehensive program is underway in Alabama to try to stop the spread of feral hogs, particularly in areas of heavy agriculture.

The USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is conducting pilot projects in the Alabama Black Belt, the Wiregrass and on the Alabama Gulf Coast.

The Black Belt Project focuses on four watersheds covering almost 85,000 acres in Sumter County.

The Wiregrass Project consists of 17 watersheds in Geneva, Houston and Henry counties. The Gulf Coast Project encompasses eight watersheds totaling almost 182,000 acres in Escambia and Baldwin counties.

The projects include purchasing feral hog traps with the latest technology, which allows the traps to be triggered remotely.

"They are trapping on the properties of private landowners with a long history of hog problems around agricultural areas," Brock said.

"They are offering this service to those private landowners in the designated watersheds and have hired several technicians to operate the traps.

"The end goal is not just to remove those hogs but to leave those landowners with the resources and knowledge to continue those trapping efforts once the pilot project ends.

"That's a pretty big deal, getting that education out to the landowners to understand how to use the latest technology. I'm very glad to see that."

One of the problems with feral hogs is the invasive species' ability to rapidly reproduce. Brock said a typical litter is four to eight piglets, but he has heard of litters as large as 14.

Some feral hogs can reach sexual maturity at six months. The gestation period is about 112 to 115 days.

"The sows will generally be close to weaning their litter before being bred again," he said.

"In theory, sows can have three litters every 14 months. Most of the time, they have one or two litters a year.

"Another thing is the piglets have a very high survival rate.

"They have very few predators because momma can be pretty aggressive toward anything that messes with her little ones."

Brock said the bulk of today's feral swine population in Alabama originated from hogs brought to America in the Mobile area by the Spanish in the early 1500s.

"He said he has seen some indication that some areas have hybrid stock that includes Eurasian wild boar characteristics.

"That area around Mobile is one of the first places in the United States to have hogs," he said.

"It's ironic to me that those hogs pretty well stayed in that drainage for about 400 years until we had gas-powered vehicles," Brock noted, referencing the fact that the spread of feral hogs was very limited until humans started to transport the swine to other areas. Currently, feral hogs have been reported in all of Alabama's 67 counties.

"A lot of their movement in the past 30 to 50 years has been in the back of a livestock trailer and then released," Brock said of a practice that has been outlawed in the state.

"Now, once a hog becomes a person's possession by either capturing or hunting, it cannot be released alive," he said. "It must be killed on-site."

Brock said before the COVID-19 restrictions, WFF partnered with other agencies to actively educate the public on the feral swine problem.

"We had landowner workshops planned that we had to cancel," he said.

"We are going to try to get those rolling again as soon as possible. I think the workshops go a long way in providing knowledge and resources landowners need to take care of some of these hog problems."

Brock said the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (ADCNR) has purchased several remote-activated traps that have been deployed on public lands – wildlife management areas (WMAs) and special opportunity areas (SOAs) with feral hog populations.

"Part of the management on those WMAs and SOAs with hog problems is to try to efficiently remove as many of those animals as quickly as possible," he said.

"This trap design can be extremely effective in accomplishing this."

For the private landowners with hog problems, Brock said the NRSC also has a program that will help reimburse the cost of equipment and resources to deal with the hogs under certain conditions.

"If three landowners in close proximity sign up, the NRSC has some cost-share programs for those landowners to collectively purchase a trap," he said. "The landowners have to document the hog damage before implementation of the program. Then after the trapping efforts, the landowners are reimbursed for a significant portion of the equipment."

For more information regarding this program, contact your local NRCS office.

As shown by the harvest numbers, hunters obviously remove quite a few hogs annually from the landscape, but hunting has proven to be ineffective at reducing total numbers of hogs.

"The most efficient method at reducing the population in a certain area is to remove entire sounders (family group)," Brock said.

"People who are using this remote-activated design trap are seeing effective population control as a result of whole sounder removal. That is the best method available."

It's also important when trapping to make sure the entire sounder is inside the enclosure when the trap is triggered.

"Hogs are highly territorial," Brock said.

"Older sows develop home ranges where they forage and take their young. If you can remove a group from one area and start going along the landscape, removing groups as you come to them, you are creating a void that no other hogs are in currently. Some people trap in a shotgun approach, but if you move along the landscape in a strategic fashion, you can do real well in removing sounders entirely. That is what we teach at the workshops."

Brock said modern technology allows trappers to be much more efficient at removing sounders.

"Monitoring with cameras and live-stream video has completely changed the game," he said.

"I can't stress enough the importance of monitoring to know what you've got. If you've got 100 hogs on the landscape and you catch 35 of them, you think you've done a really good job.

"But if you're not monitoring them with cameras, you wouldn't know you left 65 out there. Not only that, you also educated them.

"Cameras, especially with live-streaming, have really changed the game. When hogs come to the feed, they're constantly moving, with some running others in and out of the trap. It's a social hierarchy thing. With just still shots, some hogs may be outside the trap when you trigger it. With live-stream, you only have a one- to two-second delay when you drop the trap. You actually get to see what's going on at the time you drop."

For those who prefer to leave the hog removal to someone else, WFF has a list of nuisance trappers at www.outdooralabama.com.

For those who just need information on trapping hogs, WFF has a technical assistance biologist in each district who can provide assistance by assessing the hog damage to the property and recommending a trapping program.

Brock said landowners who provide the panels to build an enclosure can purchase a remotely activated gate for about $2,000. For a complete trapping unit, expect an outlay of between $5,000 and $10,000.

Hiring a professional feral swine trapper will run between $25,000 and $40,000 annually. That may seem like a lot, but Brock says you must keep costs in perspective.

"I had a farmer tell me, he estimated the hog damage in 2019 at $140,000," Brock said.

"He looked at what it was going to cost to hire someone to trap. It was $25,000 to $28,000. To him, that was a minor expense compared to that $140,000 loss."
