Variants of SARS-CoV-2

Variants of SARS-CoV-2 continue to circulate in Alabama and pose a significant threat of increased disease. Variants of concern reported, as of July 9, are Alpha (820 cases), Beta (2 cases), Gamma (31 cases) and Delta (56 cases). These variants are more transmissible, specifically the Alpha and the Delta, and some variants have less response to treatments such as monoclonal antibodies.

Percent positivity escalates

Alabama's current statewide percent positivity for COVID-19 has increased to its highest level since February 2021, at 7.7%. This is equal to the percent positivity recorded April 3, when vaccines had not been readily available.

Percent increase in COVID-19 cases

The number of COVID-19 cases reported in Alabama has risen 39% from June 26 - July 9. The best way to prevent getting the highly infectious and easily transmissible Delta variant or any other strain of COVID-19 is to get vaccinated as quickly as possible. The vaccines we have are highly effective and their benefits far outweigh any risks. Only a very small percentage of deaths due to COVID-19 are among the fully vaccinated population.

COVID-19 hospitalizations increase

As of July 14, 341 persons were reported hospitalized as a result of COVID-19 disease. On July 3, 179 persons were hospitalized due to COVID-19. Increases in numbers of COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations due to COVID-19 are the result of low vaccine rates and unvaccinated persons not following preventive measures for themselves such as wearing masks, good hand hygiene and social distancing. So long as Alabama has such low rates of vaccination, cases will continue to rise, posing risk of illness and death from COVID-19, as well as threatening the ability of our health care system to treat all Alabamians.

Make vaccination a priority

This July 14, 4,124 doses of COVID-19 vaccine were administered in the state. At the height of vaccine administration on April 8, 45,128 vaccine doses were given. Young people and others who are taking a wait-and-see stance on vaccination should be aware that they need to protect themselves, their families, friends and communities by getting vaccinated as soon as they can. Safe, effective and free vaccine shields vulnerable people and saves lives.

‘From gold arches to gold medals’: Hartselle’s Quanesha Burks’ amazing journey to the Olympics

sammy@cullmantribune.com

HARTSELLE, Ala. — The Olympics is an amazing event full of some of the world’s most elite athletes who will do whatever it takes to bring home a gold medal. This year, one of those athletes is Hartselle’s Quanesha Burks, who will be competing in the long jump for Team USA and her journey to get to this point, has been nothing short of amazing and inspirational.

The USA Healthcare in Falkville is helping raise money so Burks’ family can travel to Orlando to watch the Olympics along with the other families of Team USA. Burks will compete July 31st in Tokyo.

Burks was born in Ozark, Alabama and she and her siblings were raised by her grandparents in Hartselle. It was a real struggle early on as she watched her family live paycheck to paycheck. She got a job at McDonald’s when she was 17 years old.

Her day would start at 4:30 a.m. when she took her grandmother to work at the local nursing home, which was a half-hour away from her their house. Upon returning, she helped get her sisters ready for school before dropping them off and then attending her own classes.

When school ended, she would go to practice, which would wrap up before she needed to be at McDonald’s at 4 p.m. and she worked until 10 p.m., the latest high school students were permitted. On the weekends, she worked the early-morning shifts. She was making $200 every two weeks and it was all part of her goal to go to college. All of her money would go toward helping her grandmother pay off her car insurance.

But it wasn’t track that first caught her interest. While she was at Hartselle, Burks quickly took notice of her classmates using sports as a way to get college scholarships. A family friend bought her shoes to play basketball and she had dreams of playing for Pat Summit at Tennessee. When track season rolled around, another friend encouraged her to try out and bought her spikes to compete in the sprints and jumps. After placing third at the 2012 USATF National Junior Olympics, she decided to stick with track for her college aspirations.

Alabama coach Miguel Pate sat down with Burks, Hartselle Track & Field Coach Kenny Lopez and her guidance counselor and let her know how much her life was going to change when she was offered an athletic scholarship.

Burks finished her high school career with 11 state titles, including the 100-meters, long jump and triple jump sweep as a senior.

At Alabama, she became the first in her family to attend college and went on to have a successful career by setting school records, earning All-America honors and winning the 2015 NCAA outdoor and 2016 NCAA indoor long jump titles. She’s also the only female national championship long jump winner to come from the University of Alabama.

But the next few years as a professional were not easy for Burks. In 2018, she finished fourth at the World Athletic Indoors Championships and missed the podium by 0.04 meters. A year later, she lost her grandfather, who was “the only dad I had in my life”, a week before the USA Outdoor Track and Field Championships. After that, she boarded a plane to Des Moines and competed two days later but failed to record a successful jump and missed the 2019 World Championships.

She rebounded by winning the U.S. indoor title in February of 2020 but the World Athletics Indoor Championship in Nanjing, China, were canceled due to the pandemic. Burks continued to train until she suffered a bone bruise in her femur earlier this year, sidelining her for 11 weeks without any running or jumping.

While she watched her competition notch the Olympic standard and earn points in the World Athletics’ ranking system, Burks took to TikTok to verbally manifest that she was going to make the Olympic team. Despite the odds being against her, and even with her coach and the doctors saying that she probably wouldn’t be ready in time for trials, Burks was determined to accomplish the goals she had set. She knew that she could do it. Three weeks before at a meet in Chula Vista, California, Burks jumped with a season-best 6.85 meters despite the severe bone bruise in her takeoff leg.

UA ATHLETICS

Hartselle’s Quanesha Burks will be competing in the Long Jump for Team USA at this year’s Olympics in Tokyo.

Burks entered the trials with a personal best of 6.93 meters and entered the competition with the Olympic standard, but only secured it in her final competition before the trials. Going into her jump, she was ranked 11th in 2021. Burks qualified for the final on her first jump and entered the final with the second-best jump in the field. Her first four rounds were solid but in the fifth round she finished with a personal best of 6.96 meters, propelling her from sixth to third. Burks ended up holding that spot and made her first Olympic team.

Burks feels like to this day, she still gets overlooked, but because of her determination, her mindset and her confidence, her dreams are coming true. How did she celebrate making her first Olympic team? With an order of medium fries with no salt and a side of sweet and sour sauce at McDonald’s.

Burks’ family is so incredibly proud of her, and they couldn’t help but get emotional when talking about her incredible journey to get to the Olympics.

“I’m really proud of her,” her stepfather, James Evans, said. “She’s come a long way; she used to work at McDonald’s. She graduated from the University of Alabama with a degree in teaching

“She kept pushing herself, working out every day. That’s a big step when you fulfill your goals and you want to do something in life. That’s what she did; she kept pushing herself and I’m very proud of her. To see a person like that from Alabama to participate in something like the Olympics, that’s a very big step.”

“I’m really proud of her. She’s come a long way,” her sister, Ja’Mira Davis, said. “I’m actually proud that I get to go and get to see her from the Olympics doing what she’s doing right now. I’m actually really proud of her.”

Another one of her sisters, Jayla Dobbins, had this to say when asked what it will be like when she hears her sister’s name and she see it across the screen, “I’m going to be so proud of her. I’m going to be so amazed that she has gone so far over the last year. It’s going to be amazing.”

“I knew Quanesha was going to go very far in life,” her mom, Leasha Dobbins, said. “And me being a mom, I’m behind her with every step of the way, along with the rest of my family. I love my baby. I’m excited for her and it’s going to be amazing.”

“I’m so proud of Quanesha,” her grandmother, Kathy Davis, said. “I’m just so excited for her.” Her reaction to when she sees her on the screen: “There’s my baby. I’m so happy. God is good.”

It’s been an incredible journey so far for Quanesha Burks, and her family, along with millions of other fans, are rooting for her to bring home some gold medals.

Auburn’s Smoke Monday, Zakoby McClain on watch lists for Thorpe, Butkus awards

Jeff Shearer
AU Athletics

AUBURN, Ala. – Auburn senior defenders Zakoby McClain and Smoke Monday have been named to the watch lists for the Butkus Award and the Raycom Jim Thorpe Award, respectively.

McClain, a watch list representative for the Chuck Bednarik Award for the collegiate defensive player of the year, led the nation with 113 tackles last season, averaging 10.3 stops per game, which ranked third in the SEC and 19th nationally.

Monday, a returning starter at safety, earned second-team All-SEC honors in 2020 after making 73 tackles including four tackles for loss.

The Butkus Award honoring the nation’s best linebackers kicked off its 37th annual selection process today by announcing its collegiate and high school preseason watch lists.

In his 37th season, the Butkus Award watch list contains 51 linebackers, mirroring the legendary “51” pro jersey associated with the award’s namesake Dick Butkus, who was recognized by NFL Films as the best defensive player in football history.

The Collegiate Butkus Award watch list includes candidates from 51 universities, including returning finalist Devin Lloyd of Utah and five returning semi-finalists.

Semifinalists are expected to be named Nov. 1, finalists Nov. 22, and winners on or before Dec. 7. Appearing on the watch list is not a requirement to win the award.

The Butkus Award® is presented by the Butkus Foundation and selected by a 51-member expert panel of coaches, scouts and journalists. The award is part of the National College Football Awards Association (NCFAA) which encompasses college football’s most prestigious awards.

NCFAA’s 25 awards have honored more than 800 recipients since 1935. Visit www.NCFAA.org for more information.

The Oklahoma Sports Hall of Fame (OSHOF) and Jim Thorpe Association Monday announced the prestigious Paycom Jim Thorpe Award Preseason Watch List. This list includes 40 of the nation’s best defensive backs, representing 10 conferences and one independent.

The preseason watch list is selected by a screening committee whose members compile a list of up to 50 players. This list is not final, and players who have outstanding seasons may be added as the season progresses.

Monday is one of seven SEC student-athletes on the Jim Thorpe Award watch list.

A screening committee consisting of OSHOF members monitor the watch list players and narrow the field to 10 to 15 semifinalists in October.

This committee reconvenes on the Monday before Thanksgiving to select three award finalists. The three finalists are submitted to a national panel of over 250 sports writers, sportscasters, former players and coaches who vote to determine the winner of the Paycom Jim Thorpe Award.

The winner will be announced at The Home Depot College Football Awards Show.

The official presentation of the Paycom Jim Thorpe Award takes place in Oklahoma City, following ESPN’s live presentation at The Home Depot College Football Awards Show. The current winner and all former winners are invited each year to celebrate. More than 600 supporters attend the Paycom Jim Thorpe Award Banquet each year, including many celebrities and dignitaries.

Lunch (from Front)

CULLMAN COUNTY, Ala. – Cullman County students will be receiving breakfast and lunch at no cost for the start of the 2021-22 school year. This will include one regular breakfast and lunch per school day, while normal prices will still apply to additional items. There is also a reminder for parents or guardians to fill out their family applications for free and reduced meals as they will resume normal payment, reduced or free, lunch status in January.

According to The Washington Post, these program waivers aim to cut through red tape to allow kids to eat for free and were implemented at the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic.

The waivers allowed schools and community organizations to adapt to programs to better meet the needs of children and families.

The United States Department of Agriculture's website lists many additional details of the National School Lunch Program, which is the second largest food and nutrition assistance program.

In 2019, it operated in nearly 100,000 public and nonprofit private schools and residential child care institutions.

The National School and Lunch Program provided low-cost or free lunches to 29.4 million children daily.

For more information on the NSLP, please visit https://www.ers.usda.gov/.

Cullman City and County Schools both consistently strive to go above and beyond to ensure that their students' No. 1 priority while at school can be learning, and not where their next meal could be coming from.

Programs (from Front)

CULLMAN, Ala. — Beginning fall 2021, Cullman will be embarking on a mission in preparing students to be life, career, and citizen ready. The Liberty Learning Foundation has developed several educational courses to be newly implemented within Cullman City Schools for both seventh and ninth graders.

Several years ago, Liberty Learning Foundation began working with Cullman City's second graders in the Super Citizen/Hands-on Learning Program, an immersive 10-week civics and character-building program which provides guidance with the help of videos and accompanying lesson plans.

The focus of this program is to provide perspective on important roles they play within the country's future. Parents are encouraged to become a part of this transformative process.

At the end, students are given the opportunity to nominate and honor local heroes at their public graduation celebration.

Alabama State Senator Garlan Gudger shared his support of Liberty Learning Foundation, stating, "After hearing about these programs, I made it a personal mission to ensure it was offered to our community's children.

"So, I pulled together leaders from the school system and the City of Cullman to consider ways to bring these programs to Cullman.

"As a history buff and a father of young children, I value the importance of civics, character and careers. In fact, I believe these are some of the most important lessons our students can learn while in school."

The Cullman Tribune has partnered with Learning Liberty Foundation as the official media partner. Publisher Noah Galilee spoke of the partnership saying, "As a local newspaper, it is important to give back to the communities which have given us so much over the years.

"When approached with the concept of being Liberty Learning's official media partner, we jumped at the opportunity simply due to the company's connection to education. As print circulation slowly fades, we will be left mostly with digital platforms, one of which most under 30-year-old readers use on a minute-by-minute basis. To better serve the community and its readers, it is important to work directly with schools and institutions to help students work through real-world situations and workplace issues in order to better secure a knowledgeable workforce. The Cullman Tribune is honored to be the official media partner of Liberty Learning. We look forward to better serving our communities and producing more content and information."

The new programs that are beginning this fall are the American Character Program for seventh grade and the Citizen Promise Program for grades 9-12.

The American Character Program is designed to be a continuation of the curricula provided in younger programs.

American Character provides more context for students by studying the lives and accomplishments of great American characters.

Students also learn more essential skills by having the opportunity to present their projects to peers, press and parents at the #GoodCharacters Expo at the program's conclusion.

The Citizen Promise Program is designed for grades 9-12 and will be beginning with Cullman High School's ninth grade class this fall.

The program is equal parts career and essential skill preparation, and civic-service activation.

With the Citizen Promise Program, students will learn more in-depth lessons in civics, character, financial literacy and develop accountability and trajectory of their own futures.

As the program grows with this year's ninth grade class, there will be community mentors assisting in the classroom to provide resume and job application-bolstering opportunities. Cullman High School is only the second pilot in Alabama for ninth grade.

Alongside Senator Gudger, Cullman Mayor Woody Jacobs also praised the programs, saying, "These programs will benefit our community for decades to come, and that is why I have given my full support to making Cullman one of the first communities in Alabama to offer the Liberty Learning programs to students elementary through high school."

CULLMAN, Ala. — The Alabama Association for Career Technical Education on Monday named Cullman Area Technology Academy Principal Billy Troutman its 2021 Administrator of the Year award. According to the National Association for Career Technical Education, the award is given to administrators "who have demonstrated leadership in ensuring teacher and student success and have made significant contributions toward innovative, unique and effective career and technical education programs."

Following Monday's announcement, made during ACTE's annual summer conference, Troutman told The Tribune, "I was very excited. It's really an honor.

"I've been in career tech my whole career, and so if there's one thing I am, it's passionate about career tech education. And after you spend a life in education, especially in one field like I have, it's really cool to be recognized for something like that, really, on such a big level. Alabama's Career Tech Administrator of the Year's a big deal, so I'm pretty excited about that. That's a very nice honor. I'm thankful. Very humbling."

Cullman County School Superintendent Dr. Shane Barnette said, "I am so excited and proud for Mr. Troutman being awarded the ALACTE Administrator of the Year. He is an excellent ambassador for everything career tech. This is great recognition for our CTE programs and the entire Cullman County School District."

CATA's physical plant has undergone numerous renovations over the summer break, and Troutman said that he looks forward to showing off facilities that match the quality of the school's programs when students return in August.
