'Ode to My Adolescence'

Local author publishes book supporting others struggling with mental health

Sara Gladney
sara@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. — Cullman native Kyndell Hays has recently published her first book of poetry and prose called "Ode to My Adolescence," a series of separate pieces about the struggles of growing up and dealing with mental health issues, heartbreak and trauma. Hays said with the book she strives to connect with others coping with similar issues and show them they are not alone. Her first book signing was held June 25 at Karma's Coffee House, where the community showed support for its local talent.

Even though Hays is now a published author, she said it wasn't in her original career plan.

A rising senior at Jacksonville State University, she plans to go to graduate school for mental health counseling.

Her plans are to become a licensed counselor and work with children and teenagers.

Hays has an equal love for psychology and the art of writing, and the combination shines through in her work.

"I have loved writing and storytelling for as long as I can remember.

"I started writing stories as soon as I understood the concept, and it's been a constant hobby for me over the years," she shared.

"I started getting interested in poetry in middle school, and I have » PAGE 2

Freedom (from Front)

Amy Leonard
amy@cullmantribune.com

GARDEN CITY, Ala. — As the drizzling rain came to an end, Garden City and Hanceville families came out to celebrate the nation's independence Sunday evening with food, inflatable slides, a mechanical bull and, of course, fireworks.

Garden City Mayor Tim Eskew said, "Being one of the oldest towns in Cullman County, this Fourth of July means a lot to us. It means freedom."

Scott Arnold, pastor at Garden City First Baptist Church, shared what the day means to him, saying, "This is all about the freedom of our great nation. I'm pro-American and there's nothing better.

"We live in the greatest country in the world. Coming together to celebrate our freedoms as Americans is a no-brainer."

Arnold and his church hosted the event for many years before the Town took over the duties.

"This is the 10th annual Fourth of July celebration in Garden City," said Arnold.

"The church started doing it years ago and the city took it over two years ago. The church still fills in where we're needed."

A lemonade stand provided a tasty cooling-off treat, and hot dogs were a big hit with many of the celebrators.

Garden City typically holds its fireworks event the Sunday before the Fourth of July, as to not interfere with the other festivities around the county.

Last year's attendance reached upward of 600-700 people, according to Arnold.

Hanceville Mayor Kenneth Nail was ready for a good meal and fireworks. He spoke about what the holiday is about for him.

"Many men and women sacrificed their lives so we can be free.

"We just can't forget that. We are blessed as Americans," he said.

"Of the importance of unity within the south Cullman County communities, he shared, "We, in Hanceville, want to come down here and support our sister city, Garden City.

"They're so good at supporting us.

"Anytime they have an event, we try our best to support them, and they support us.

"We have Colony Day coming up and we're lending a hand there. It's a cumulative thing."

Author (from Front)

filled so many journals with my poems ever since.

"In my opinion, the only way to truly get better at writing is simply to keep on writing, and my skills definitely improved majorly over the many years I have spent writing short stories and poetry."

Her favorite book of poetry, "Eighteen Years" by Madisen Kuhn, is the book that encouraged her to start writing her own poetry.

Hays said that publishing her first collection of poetry has boosted her confidence and made her believe that she can achieve her writing aspirations.

"When I compiled the poems for my book, I thought about just leaving them in my journals because putting something so precious to me out into the world for everyone to read was kind of scary," she said, "but I knew if I didn't publish them, I would end up regretting it. To me, this was the first step in my writing journey."

Although the experience has been fulfilling for Hays personally, she hopes the experiences she shared will reach those going through similar situations.

"My main hope in publishing this collection was to reach other people that might be struggling with the trials of growing up, heartbreak and mental health and to help them feel less alone.

"Poetry has been a great outlet for me, and I hope others can see how beautifully diverse it can be," she said.

"I decided to publish my work to prove to myself that I could accomplish my goals, but the poems are directed more towards mental health awareness for all."

Hays has plans to publish many more works, including an adult fantasy novel she has been working on for about two years.

The project is a much larger undertaking than her poetry collection, and she said she hopes to have it out in the next few years.

For other new authors who do not know where to begin, Hays recommends Kindle Direct Publishing.

"I self-published to get my work and name out there for my future books and bigger projects," she said.

"Kindle Direct Publishing is a great resource for new authors who aren't sure where to start. Just keep working towards your goal and keep writing!

"One day, you'll stumble across the idea that will be the story you want to share with the world, and once you have that idea, the only thing that can truly stop you is yourself."

Hays' book can be found on Amazon at https://tinyurl.com/kendellhays.

Program (from Front)

Amy Leonard
amy@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. — Saturday morning at the Cullman Festhalle Farmers' Market, local farmer and Master Gardener Brad Mitchell of Legacy Farms dropped off his surplus crops to Linda Holland, who works at the North Alabama Agriplex. His donation will be distributed, along with those of many other farmers, to a variety of nonprofit organizations throughout the community.

Mitchell shared his motivation, saying, "I want to be able to give back to the community. We're truly blessed to have a place to grow crops, and God has given us the ability to do it and a means.

"I worked in commercial nuclear power for my whole career. My days started at 4:30 in the morning and I would get home at 6:30 at night. That was seven days a week. As a result, I never had the opportunity to give back to the community."

Mitchell is part of Cullman's #gleanteam, a joint venture of the Society of St. Andrew, the North Alabama Agriplex and the Cullman County Extension office.

The program allows farmers to glean (or gather) their leftover crops and donate them to nonprofit organizations that provide the fresh produce to local agencies such as Cullman Caring for Kids, Victim Services and Restoring Women's Outreach, just to name a few.

"A lot of my surplus would probably go in the compost pile. I don't waste anything, but for years and years nobody wanted the extra produce, and nobody wanted to mess with it.

"We put up as much as we could. One day, my wife told me not to bring another tomato into the house," Mitchell laughed.

Local farmers, in addition to bringing in their produce, can call to have their excess crops picked up after harvest or can even schedule volunteers to harvest the crops themselves.

"This is a wonderful avenue to be able to give back. It makes it so easy for me to give back," said Mitchell. "I don't have to make the contacts. The gleaning team has such a great contact list and know(s) which agency needs what, so it's a much more efficient way of doing things."

Farmers and home gardeners interested in participating can contact the #gleanteam at 256-402-3398. Receipts for tax purposes are provided.

Fairview enjoys 21st annual Fourth of July celebration

FAIRVIEW, Ala. — Fairview got into the Independence Day spirit Sunday with the town's 21st annual Fourth of July celebration.

Dr. David Chambers, pastor at First Baptist Church of Fairview, which began the annual fireworks show years ago, shared, "The first year, it was just our church doing it.

"We spent $300, and mainly our church showed up for it. (The) next year we spent a little more, and more people showed up.

"The next year the Town of Fairview came in, (the) Methodist church came in, Welcome (Baptist Church) came in and Etha (Baptist Church) came in. From that time on, it has just grown."

Drew Pearson, who leads the Ministry of Music at First Baptist Church of Fairview, played music for the crowd Sunday, and Chambers, along with Tim Barbee from Temple Baptist Church, led the group in worship before the show as a special addition to the usual activities.

Sponsors spent $5,000 on fireworks but received a $10,000 show, thanks to a wholesaler based in Sevierville, Tennessee, who has supported the annual event over the years.

"For every dollar we send, he brings back $2 worth of fireworks," said Chambers, who shared that Billy Brown, who sets off the fireworks, made the connection with the company in Tennessee.

"Billy and that guy made a connection a year or two before we did ours, and he likes Billy and he likes what we're doing here, and so all the way from Sevierville, Tennessee, he helps out by giving us twice the fireworks."

Sponsors of this year's event were Etha Baptist Church, First Baptist Church of Fairview, Temple Baptist Church, Welcome Baptist Church, The Brandin Iron Steakhouse, Merchants Bank, Simcoe Wood Products, the Town of Fairview, Walker Brothers, Brindley Mountain Barbecue and Fairview Superette.

Lynn hosts annual Fourth of July celebration

LYNN, Ala. — The Town of Lynn hosted its annual Fourth of July event Friday night at Lynn City Park, and there was plenty for everyone to enjoy. A trio of waterslides delighted children, and a crowd enjoyed the fireworks display later that night.

It was the first time Lindsey Hallmark attended the event, and she shared what Independence Day means to her.

"My reason for coming here was just to hang out with the community, play and watch fireworks," she said. "Independence Day is very special to me. We celebrate big every year for Independence Day."

Lynn Fire and Rescue Assistant Chief Derreck Cagle shared, "They've been doing this event for five years.

"This is a community get-together, just something for the kids to do. Their parents come out and let them enjoy the water and the fireworks, to get the community involved."

Continued Cagle, "Independence Day means everything to me. It's why we're free. It's why we live where we live. Without Independence Day, we wouldn't be free Americans. It means the world to us."

Cagle's wife, Bekah Cagle, talked about the event, saying, "My husband is the assistant fire chief, so he helps a lot with this event. This is the first year that the town did the waterslides, and this year has been a really good turnout compared to last year.

"The town is trying to make it a little bigger each year for our citizens. Since we're the only one in our area that's having their fireworks show tonight, there's been more people come.

"We normally end up having our celebration the same night as Haleyville or Double Springs, so it's normally just hometown people that are here. But we have seen a lot from surrounding communities today and that's awesome."

She added, "Independence Day is very special to my family. It's one of our favorite holidays to celebrate. I think everyone should celebrate America's birthday. We're thankful for our country."

Lynn Mayor Earl Gilbert and council member Alan Barnett talked about the event and what the Fourth of July means to them.

"Like everybody else, I've got on my freedom hat and red, white and blue on the back of my shirt, so quite a bit," Gilbert said.

"We wouldn't be able to have this if some of the people hadn't gone and fought and died for us, so it means a lot. To this event, we'd be lucky if we got 75 people.

"When fireworks come, this whole place is filled up, around 500 to 600 people. It was better this year because we're the only one doing this tonight around this area."

Said Barnett, "Independence Day means everything to me. If it hadn't been for the people before us, we couldn't do this today, so I'm glad we live in America.

"I'm glad we live in this part of the country. We get to do what we do, have fellowship with our family and friends, and that's priceless. I think the attendance was good.

"That time of year, people are away from home and out of town, but to get the turnout that we got, I'm thankful for it.

"We'd love to have more, and if we don't, that's OK too. We're doing it anyway for the few that's here and appreciate it."

South Vinemont's 1st fireworks celebration delivers big bang

Amy Leonard
amy@cullmantribune.com

SOUTH VINEMONT, Ala. — Expecting 100 people at the most, the town of South Vinemont welcomed hundreds more to its innaugural Fourth of July fireworks event Sunday evening.

"We didn't reckon there'd be this many people here since it's the first time, but I'm really glad so many people are here to have a good time.

"I'm proud that Vinemont put on such a good show. This is what America's about," shared attendee Amber Lee.

Refreshments were graciously provided and required replenishment several times through the night from inside the South Vinemont Community Center.

Young Braxton Alexander sat on his mom's lap and squealed with delight at each firework explosion, exclaiming, "Ooh, that's a big one!" while clapping with glee.

His mom, Kristie Alexander, said, "We drove from Morgan County for the fireworks.

"I didn't think it'd be this crowded, but it's still better than anything we got at home. We'll be back next year for sure."

Enrique Pollard was also impressed with the event, which he attended with several friends and family members.

"I thought it was just going be a few fireworks, but this is really cool," he smiled.

"I'm really glad we came. We almost didn't because we thought it would be kind of small and boring, but I'm surprised. This is just cool."

After Sunday night's large crowd, there is already talk of moving next year's celebration to the ball fields to provide more adequate parking options.

AMY LEONARD/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

At least 500 people showed up to enjoy South Vinemont's inaugural fireworks show Sunday evening, July 3.

Good Hope (from Front)

David Scott said he was more than happy to work with them.

"We use P. Willy's Fireworks here in Good Hope, and they're just super nice people. They helped us out, and as a matter of fact they donated a lot of the fireworks themselves," he said. "They're great people and they help set the show up for us."

Independence Day was the driving force behind the show, but Scott said he was also happy that a layer of faith and worship was added to the celebration.

"We had a fireworks show previously at the church we were at before and brought it over to Good Hope and they were kind enough to help us with it and let us use the facility here to have our show," Scott said. "We want to send a message of Christ with our Fourth of July celebration and have Christ involved in it. We've blended it all together into one with the Branded by Christ Cowboy Church, Good Hope Fire and Rescue, the City of Good Hope and P. Willy's Fireworks."

Scott said he has seen the Good Hope community respond in a positive way to the show over the last couple years and was excited to see Municipal Park packed once again.

"Last year the parking lot was full, and people were everywhere, and it was just amazing," he said. "They come out to see the fireworks, and they get to hear the word from our pastor. He has a short message to let everyone know that Jesus Christ loves you, and that's what it's all about."

‘Put in the work’: Cold Springs’ Ella Bruer looking forward to upcoming season

Sammy Confer
sammy@cullmantribune.com

BREMEN, Ala. — The summer play-day games for local basketball teams have come to an end and the Cold Springs Lady Eagles finished off their summer schedule with a 10-2 record. Junior Ella Bruer was happy to see the progress she and her team made this summer and she’s looking forward to seeing what they can when the season tips off in the fall.

“I personally think the team has doing amazing this summer. We’ve worked together to push ourselves to be better and it really paid off this summer,” Bruer said. “We just have to keep up the good work.”

Cold Springs added a new player to the team this offseason in junior Maci Brown and Bruer can already see that she’ll help out the Lady Eagles in many different ways.

“Maci has helped us so much,” Bruer said. “She has helped us defensively and offensively. She is a very good ball handler and knows how to create shots for herself. She brings the ball down the floor and sees the court very well.

“Maci has always been a very good defensive player. She’s very good at knowing when to help off and it helps having her on the floor with us. We all love having Maci and are very excited for the season to start.”

Bruer started playing for Head Coach Tammy West when she was a freshman and has learned so much from the Cold Springs coaching great.

“It’s been amazing playing for coach West! She’s an amazing coach and has taught me so many things. I’m very grateful to be able to play for her,” Bruer said.

“Coach West has taught me so much on and off the court. I have learned that we have to play together to be a good team. She has taught me to be respectful to one another as well as our opponents and to be a leader on and off the court.

“She has also taught me that to be a good player, you have to work on your own time. We have to be willing to take the time out of our day to put in the work to be a great player.”

Bruer has been continuing to improve her game day by day and has very high expectations for this upcoming season. Almost the entire roster will be back, and the added experience should help the team as they pursue another postseason run.

“I’ve been working a bit on everything this summer: ball handling, getting my shot off faster, and to be better defensively,” Bruer said.

“I have very high expectations for us this season. I expect for us to keep working hard for it to pay off during the season. I expect us to put the work in to be able to make it to Birmingham this season! I think that it will help a lot this season. We’ve all had the experience of varsity ball from last season, so we will know what to expect this year.”

‘You’re never too young to be a leader’: Kennedy Twilley discusses her time at Holly Pond

sammy@cullmantribune.com

HOLLY POND, Ala. — In this interview, I talked to Holly Pond volleyball and basketball standout Kennedy Twilley. Twilley made a lot of great memories during her years as a Bronco both on and off the court.

“My favorite volleyball memory was when we played in the Vinemont Tournament my senior year and we won the whole tournament, so that was a really good memory for us,” Twilley said. “It was really exciting to play with all of the girls and to be together all day. We were up from seven in the morning until six at night, so it was really fun being able to spend that time with them and just to know that we were up for hours and hours. That’s what we had been working for and we won the tournament, so that was great. One of my favorite basketball memories would have to be when we beat Cold Springs in the county tournament. It was fun because we had struggled with them all year. All throughout the season, we had lost to them and so, in the county tournament, we ended up beating them and advancing. Another favorite basketball memory was when we got runner-up in area and we got to go to the Sub-Regional tournament, so that was a lot of fun getting to go with them.”

Twilley added, “Our senior year, we did a senior prank. It was so much fun. We all got together, and we decided that we were going to do a senior prank. We went through the high school, and we put cups and balloons everywhere. We destroyed the school. It was great and the best thing about it is that we decided that our senior skip day was going to be the day after, so we didn’t have to clean it up (laughs). I loved that. It was a lot of fun. I’m sure there was a lot of teachers mad at us, and a lot of teachers knew about it before. I remember I was at work that night and one of the teachers came up to me and was like ‘We know what you all are doing,’ and I was like, ‘I don’t know what you’re talking about.’ But they all knew about it, so they all locked their classrooms the night before. Another one would be the Senior Awards Day. We had awards day. We had our caps and gowns on. We got to walk through the high school, the elementary, and middle school and see all of the little kids. It was crazy because times flies by so fast. When you’re walking through those halls, like in the elementary, you’re like, wow, this is crazy that I’m actually graduating. It didn’t feel real for me until I was walking through those halls.”

Twilley feels lucky to have played for some great coaches during her playing days at Holly Pond and learned an awful lot from them.

“I have three coaches that I would like to thank: Adrian Adams, Andrew Kelley, and Tammy Foust. Tammy was my JV volleyball coach, and we had a real close connection growing up, even when she wasn’t coaching me,” Twilley said. “She was a teacher, but I was still really close with her. I remember, she always used to tell me from the time that I was in eighth grade all the way up to senior year, every time she would see me, she knew I was so nervous before game time. I had so much anxiety and I remember her looking at me and telling me, ‘Close your eyes, take a deep breath, and give it to the Lord.’ She told me that one time during a volleyball game. Whether it would be volleyball or basketball, I would hear that before every single game, and that stuck with me for years. That was great of her telling me that. Me and Tammy had a great connection even though she was only my coach for two years. She was still at every game. Adrien, I can’t thank her enough. She’s a great coach. She gets to know her players on a personal level. She would know when I would start to shut down during games and she would know what to do. She would take me out of the game and tell me, ‘Breathe. You know you can do this. You’re a senior. Your players need you.’ She started coaching me when I was in ninth grade all the way up to my senior year. She knew how I was during the games, so I can’t thank her enough for getting to know me on a personal level.”

Twilley continued, “Coach Kelley came into my life my eighth-grade year. He coached me on the JV and varsity. I could tell him anything no matter what and he would always be there to support me, so I can’t thank him enough for being there for me. He always knew what I needed no matter what, and he got to know his players on a personal level. He knew what we needed, and I can’t thank him enough. They were great coaches, and I wouldn’t want to play for any other coaches.”

Twilley learned so much during her time at Holly Pond and will miss being a Bronco, and playing with her cousin, Kamryn Tankersley.

“I learned that high school-wise, no matter what, you’re always right where you’re supposed to be,” Twilley said. “Growing up, I was always the underclassman and I remembered I was so scared of all of the older girls. I was like, ‘I don’t want to overstep them,’ but I learned that you’re always right where you’re supposed to be. I remember when I was younger, I was so scared of those older girls. But, whenever I got up to senior year and I was the older girl, I was like, ‘I don’t even look at the younger girls as younger than me. I want them to all know that you’re right where you’re supposed to be at the right time.”

Twilley added, “The thing I’m going to miss the most is going to be Kamryn. We had such a close connection growing up and in sports. It was a great high school experience because Kamryn got moved up to varsity whenever I was in 11th grade. We got to play together my 11th and 12th grade year. I’m going to miss her the most, playing with her. She needed me whenever I was out there, and the coaches knew that. They knew that we needed each other and so, I’m going to miss playing with her the most, because they knew we needed each other on that court just as much as we needed each other off. Not being able to play with her is hard because when she would shut down, no matter how bad I was playing, I knew I needed to step up for her because all she needed was a good talking to. She’s a great player and she gets down on herself so much. I remember Adrian; she would look at me and be like ‘Go talk to Kamryn.’ No matter what any coach said, as long as I was there and could talk Kamryn out of it, she would be fine. I’ll miss being there for her, but no matter what, I’m still going to be supporting her from the stands now and she can always look up there when she needs me.”

Holly Pond will hold a very special place in Twilley’s heart, and she talked about how important it was for her to be a leader. She also brought up a very special moment she had with the younger girls during a group message.

NICK GRIFFIN/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

Holly Pond’s Kennedy Twilley

“Holly Pond is such a special school because that’s where my whole family grew up. Holly Pond is so close. We’re a family there. I think the most special thing is just how close everyone is at that school,” Twilley said. “From the time you’re little to the time you grow up, you grow up seeing the same faces every day. I think I can name every single person that was in my class. I can tell you their first and last name. That’s a good memory for me is knowing that I can grow up and know that we were all so close. We were a family there. It’s a small school and that’s what I love about Holly Pond is that we’re so close there.”

Twilley added, “Being a leader was really important to me. I remember during senior year; it was during basketball season, and we had a conflict on the team. We weren’t playing together as a team because some of us have never played together before. I remember us getting together and I had actually put all the younger girls in a group chat. It was just me and the younger girls. I sent them this long message and I just told them, ‘Look, you all are supposed to be on this team. No matter what, even though you might be in ninth grade or 10th grade, you are a part of the varsity team. Every time you all are out there, it’s just as good as me, Kaylee, and Raeleigh being out there. You all are supposed to be out there. When you all go out there, do not be scared to play older girls. You all are here for a reason.’ I let them know that and I knew that I was there to support them no matter what. I wanted them to know that if they make a mistake, everybody makes mistakes. I was like, ‘Just go out and have fun and do what you do. We put in so much work every single day. We practice every day and we run the same plays just as much as I run the plays. You all know what you are doing. Just go out and show those older girls that you’re just as good as them.”

Twilley gave some advice to the students that will be starting high school in August as well.

“Some advice to the underclassmen that are coming to high school would be you’re never too young to be a leader,” Twilley said. “No matter what’s happening, no matter what you’re going through, just know that you’re in the right place where you’re supposed to be. Don’t take high school for granted. High school goes by so fast. To the younger girls, going to those early morning practices; they’re awful, having to wake up at 7 a.m. It was terrible, but now I look back and I wished that I was still waking up at 7 a.m. to go to those practices and waking up at six to go to the play dates. Don’t take it for granted. You’re never too young to step up and be a leader. Everyone has a role and throughout high school; you’ll find what your role is. If you see something happening, step up and say something about it.”

Summer recipe: 2-crust peach cobbler

Katie Nichols
Alabama Cooperative Extension System

AUBURN UNIVERSITY, Ala. — Peaches are ripe for the pickin' in Alabama. While there isn't anything quite like a bowl of fresh-cut peaches, there is something to be said for a peach cobbler with a good crust. Look no further than the Alabama Cooperative Extension System's "The Auburn Cookbook." The two-crust peach cobbler recipe is sure to knock your socks off!

TWO-CRUST PEACH COBBLER INGREDIENTS

- Oil pastry for two, 8-inch crusts (see recipe below) or two 8-inch store-bought crusts
- 6 cups sliced, fresh peaches
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup water
- 5 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 egg white (discard yolk)
- 2 tablespoons reduced-calorie corn-oil margarine
- 1 tablespoon water

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Divide the pastry into three equal parts instead of two. Wrap each piece in wax paper or plastic wrap and chill.

2. Sprinkle peaches with lemon juice and put in a saucepan. Add 1 cup of sugar and 1/4 cup water. Cook until the peaches are tender.

3. Combine flour, 1/3 cup sugar, nutmeg and cinnamon. Stir until blended.

4. Cook until liquid thickens, stirring some while it cooks. Remove from heat and set aside.

5. Roll one piece of pastry into a square about 1/4 inch thick. Cut it into strips. Place strips on an ungreased baking sheet and bake at 375°F for 8 to 10 minutes.

6. Roll another piece of pastry into a 10-inch square about 1/8 inch thick. Fit crust into an 8-inch square baking pan.

7. Beat egg white and 1 tbsp. water together. Brush pastry with about half of the egg white mixture.

8. Put about half of the peaches on top of the pastry.

9. Cut about half of the margarine into small pieces and spread over peaches.

10. Arrange baked pastry strips over top of peaches.

11. Spoon remaining peaches on top of pastry strips.

12. Dot peaches with remaining margarine.

13. Roll and shape remaining piece of pastry to fit top of cobbler.

14. Brush top of pastry with remaining egg white.

15. Bake at 475°F for 20 to 30 minutes or until pastry is golden brown.

Pro tip: To make a quick two-crust peach, apple or cherry cobbler, use two 21-ounce cans of peach pie filling, apple pie filling or cherry pie filling in place of fresh peaches.

ALABAMA COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SYSTEM

Two-crust peach cobbler

OIL PASTRY INGREDIENTS

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 cup cold skim milk
- 2 tablespoons ice water
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons vinegar

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Combine flour, sugar, salt and baking powder in a medium bowl. Stir until evenly blended.

2. In another bowl, combine the milk, water, oil and vinegar.

3. Add the liquid mixture all at once to the flour mixture and stir quickly with a fork until it forms a soft dough.

4. Dust a board or pastry cloth with flour, and turn the dough onto the floured surface.

5. This will be a soft dough and will need to be handled gently to form a ball smooth enough to roll. To do this, rub your hands with flour and shape the dough into a flat ball by tucking the edges of the dough under, gently turning the dough in your hands as you tuck. Continue to lightly shape the dough in this way until it is smooth enough to roll.

6. Divide the dough into two equal parts. Wrap each piece in wax paper or plastic wrap and refrigerate for several hours. Remove from the refrigerator about 1 hour before ready to roll to allow it to become pliable and easy to handle.

7. Roll and shape dough.

8. Bake at 425 °F for 8 to 12 minutes or until light brown. This will be a tender, crisp pastry, but not flaky.
