Families, friends gather to honor local heroes at Purple Heart memorial service

GAUGE DAY/THE CULLMAN TRIBUNE

Chapter Commander Clifford Gissell stands with Jan Tekulve Alldredge, daughter of Honoree and Cullman native, John Robert Tekulve, and her husband Jim Alldredge, who were presented with a Purple Heart flag during the 2025 Purple Heart Memorial Service.

HARTSELLE, Ala. — The 2025 Purple Heart Memorial Service was held Saturday, Aug. 9, at the Purple Heart Monument in Sparkman Park, honoring fallen warriors from Morgan and Cullman counties. The ceremony was hosted by Chapter 2212, Military Order of the Purple Heart, Joe Hooper Medal of Honor Chapter and was led by Chapter Commander Clifford Gissell.

Each year, the annual ceremony pays tribute to those who were killed in action, as well as veterans who were wounded in service and have since passed away.

During the ceremony, chapter members read aloud the names engraved on the monument, pausing after each to ring a solemn bell. When possible, a small Purple Heart flag is presented to a family member or close friend of the honoree.

This year, of the 167 names read, three Purple Heart recipients were newly added to the list of names on the monument: James Cooper, a charter member of the chapter and Korean War veteran; William Puckett, a World War II veteran; and Cullman native John Robert Tekulve, father of Jan Tekulve Alldredge, who attended the ceremony with her husband.

"It was a very touching ceremony to hear the names called and recognize other recipients honored from Cullman County," said Alldredge. "Playing 'Taps' at the end of the ceremony made me feel so proud knowing my dad did his part to protect the freedom our nation knows today."

Her husband, Jim Alldredge, reflected on his father-in-law's service, "My father-in-law, John Robert Tekulve, would occasionally share memories of WWII. Having been drafted into the Army off the farm at 24, he had already developed survival skills. I always thought of him as 'Sergeant York' in the movie. They were both 'smart soldiers.'"

With the final name having been read, the somber song "Taps" would be played, bringing the memorial service to a close.

For more information about the service, inscribing a Purple Heart recipient's name on the monument or purchasing a brick for a veteran, contact Commander Clifford Gissell at 256-338-5617 or tothemax42@gmail.com.

Forums (from Front)

lauren@cullmantribune.com

CULLMAN, Ala. — Cullman Parks, Recreation & Sports Tourism will host two community forums this month: one for the Center of the Arts Community Theatre on Aug. 14, and one for East Side Park on Aug. 18.

CPRST Executive Director Nathan Anderson said the forums are designed to be open, casual listening sessions — not formal presentations.

"Each event begins with a brief project overview, followed by open dialog, interactive feedback stations and the opportunity for residents to directly shape two major investments in our community," Anderson said.

"These forums are part of a larger commitment to co-creating public spaces with our residents, not just for them.

"Whether you're passionate about the arts, parks, youth programs, or just want to stay informed, your voice matters."

Anderson said that at the Community Theatre forum, attendees will explore ideas for programming, performance needs and how the renovated space can serve all ages — from children's arts education to adult productions, music and more.

At the East Side Park forum, residents will get to review three proposed playground designs created in response to feedback from the first forum, which was held in July. This is the second public input session, and CPRST is now focused on finalizing a design that fits the neighborhood's vision.

"Nothing at all is required to attend; just bring your ideas," Anderson said. "These are open, come-and-go events for anyone who wants to participate — no RSVP or prior involvement required."

He said the East Side Park project is a direct result of community feedback asking for renewed investment in green space on the east side of town.

"We're now in the design phase, building on ideas shared during earlier conversations and surveys," Anderson said.

"The forum is the perfect next step. After this, we'll move into final design and bidding.

"For residents who want to stay connected, we encourage following us on social media for updates or signing up for the project email list at the event."

At the Aug. 14 meeting, playground designers will present design options based on feedback from the first forum for the community to review.

More about the East Side Park project can be found at www.cullmantribune.com/2025/08/08/city-receives-500k-lwcf-grant-for-east-side-park-upgrades.

"Per the Community Theatre, all ages are invited," Anderson said.

"The new cultural arts venue is being designed to serve the entire community — from youth arts programs and community theater to adult choirs, band performances and local concerts.

"While some programs may include modest participation fees, our goal is to keep the arts accessible. We'll be pursuing grants, sponsorships and scholarship support to ensure no one is turned away due to cost."

Anderson said the Community Theatre forum will be the first of several meetings and will primarily serve as a listening session.

More about the Center of the Arts Community Theatre project can be found at www.cullmantribune.com/2024/07/22/cullman-city-council-approves-purchase-of-historic-church-for-future-community-theatre.

Raiders eyeing postseason return in 2025

Nick Griffin
nick@cullmantribune.com

GOOD HOPE, Ala. — The Good Hope Raiders are coming off a stellar 2024 season and they have high hopes once again in 2025. Good Hope recorded 10 wins, a region championship and hosted a playoff game a season ago and as he prepares to kick off his 11th season with the Raiders, Head Coach Alan Scott reflected on last year's team and what they accomplished.

"That was one of those seasons you didn't want to end. Going into it there really were a lot more questions than there were answers," Scott said. "But the way the team came together beating West Point early on and then Fultondale really kind of gave them a lot of confidence and we were able to run off nine in a row, host a playoff game and beat a really good Hatton team to make it to the second round. It was just a fantastic year, and I can't say enough about that team."

Good Hope lost some impact players to graduation in May, but the Raiders will still have plenty of game experience returning on both sides of the ball. Scott is happy to have experience and talent returning this field, but he's been most impressed with the leadership and chemistry this team has already developed in the offseason.

"As far as returners go, I think we have about seven starters on either side of the football that are coming back. Obviously, you lose key guys each and every year but the ones we had back this summer have done a great job," Scott said.

"We've been lifting Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 6 a.m. – 8 a.m. and the guys have been very consistent in showing up and being a part of that. The strength for these guys is just the leadership. We had a minicamp a couple weeks ago and we've watched these guys push one another on the field and even off the field so that's been good to see. With any good team the brotherhood that develops across the summer months is just critical to your success in the fall. So, as long as they have that love for one another things should go pretty well."

An early injury derailed Good Hope's plans for the quarterback position last season but with the starter coming back healthy this fall, Scott is excited to see the offense develop around him.

"Tyler (Cone) and the season that he had was just phenomenal. He really stepped into a role that we didn't see him doing last fall and he did everything we asked him to. Parker (Johnson) going into the first game against West Point was the starter and unfortunately suffered an injury and wasn't able to come back until week seven or eight, so he's taken some snaps," Scott said. "His dad was a quarterback at Good Hope for Coach (Alan) Dunkling and this season will hopefully be a good for chance him to prove himself in more than just two or three ball games."

The Raiders will kick things off with a jamboree game at Pisgah before hosting a county matchup against West Point in week one and Scott is eager to see how his team responds to the early adversity.

"They've been fantastic in their classification, so they've established themselves as a great program. That's going to be a great challenge for us to go up there. It'll be nearly two hours one way on a bus, and I know everybody's not real excited about that trip but it's good because to me it kind of simulates a playoff type of ride on a bus and you get to see how your kids respond to that adversity," Scott said. "It's just a great litmus test. You get to see how your summer really went. Everyone always looks good in shorts, but West Point is always really big and really physical and have great tradition. That game has really gone back and forth the last few years and it seems like the road team has had the advantage, so we'd really like to break that tradition this year but at the same time we know if our guys go out there and play their tails off and do what we ask them to we'll have a shot there at the end."

West Point Warriors ready to battle in 2025

nick@cullmantribune.com

WEST POINT, Ala. – It's nearly time to kick off another football season in Cullman County and the West Point Warriors have been hard at work this offseason preparing to get back on the gridiron. Head Coach Kevin McCravy is entering his second season at the helm and after spending his first offseason split between West Point and Russellville, he's been happy to be with his team every step of the way this time around.

"We ended the year last season with 53 players and started spring with 90 so the program is growing. That number is sitting around 78 right now so the roster has grown a little bit. We've had a really productive offseason and have worked really hard," McCravy said. "We got started right after Thanksgiving and we haven't stopped so it's really good to see the personal barriers that these kids have torn down throughout the offseason. It really helps that I was here for the offseason and not driving from Russellville every day. So, that's really helped me to be present every day for the offseason program. I've got my feet planted now and being here in the offseason has probably been the biggest difference so far."

One of this year's returning starters, running back Ollie Howell, has taken on a leadership role this offseason and is trying to bring even more of the young players along so they can contribute on Friday nights.

"I think the most important thing for us to teach the young guys coming is the heartbeat of our culture and our team. That's one thing that we've really been trying to push to our younger guys. Just letting them know that we're here for them if they need it and we're here for them on the field too," Howell said.

"I just started my walk with Christ myself in January and I just recently started really praying and it's helped me calm myself before I go off to a camp or do anything. I've just been asking Him to give me the power to do my best every day."

One of the things that McCravy and his staff have focused on in the lead up to this season is building depth. To help create that depth, competition has been expected and encouraged inside the building and McCravy believes that mentality will help the Warriors outlast their opponents this fall.

"Creating competition has kind of been our main theme throughout this offseason. Right now, I can't say for sure that this person is starting or that person is starting because every day we're competing. Nobody is really guaranteed anything right now and that's how we're approaching things," McCravy said.

"That's one of the things we've done this offseason is create depth at certain positions and the kids know it too. They know when they go out on the field that someone is going to be pushing them every day. They know that they may be the starting tight end today but there's someone right behind me that could take that spot tomorrow. That's something we've really hung our hat on this offseason, just keep pushing each other, create competition every day and we'll decide who's going to line up on Friday night. That's been a really good thing for us as a team is creating that competition."

Jax State (from Front)

Staff Reports
Contributor

JACKSONVILLE, Ala. — Joseph Scott Morgan, a professor at Jacksonville State University's Forensic Investigations Department, is a well-known true crime expert. His work on high-profile cases, including the Idaho Student Murders, has brought national attention to both his expertise and his university.

Being involved in a high-profile murder case, even peripherally, is unsettling for anyone. But for Morgan, it's all part of the job, even if it never gets easier. In addition to his duties teaching at Jax State, Morgan has become a familiar face and voice in the competing realms of true crime, appearing in TV series, talk shows — most notably alongside Nancy Grance in her numerous media ventures — documentaries and podcasts.

"I understand that every time I go on air, I'm representing Jax State," Morgan said. "Really, I'm just a college professor in a small southern town that teaches forensic science. All this other stuff, as much as I enjoy talking about it, is because of that."

Most of Morgan's energy and expertise have been focused recently on Bryan Kohberger, appearing in the Peacock docuseries titled "The Idaho Student Murders." According to police, around 4 a.m. on Nov. 13, 2022, Kohberger entered an off-campus house at 1122 King Road in Moscow, Idaho, and fatally stabbed four Idaho University students — Madison Mogen, Kaylee Goncalves, Xana Kernodle and Ethan Chapin.

For the Peacock documentary, Morgan explained the value of various aspects of the case, including the touch DNA that was extracted from the K-Bar knife sheath that ultimately matched Kohberger. Produced by KT studios, which has spearheaded other projects Morgan has participated in, "The Idaho Student Murders" competed against another documentary on the same case produced by Amazon. And because it's with Amazon studio, they had unlimited resources," Morgan said. "Meanwhile, we're working on a shoestring budget. But I'm very proud of the work we did in bringing the real story to people."

Even before there was a suspect, Morgan had been talking about the Idaho murders constantly. "That's pretty much what I've devoted my time to, chatting about it to pretty much anyone who'll have me on," he said.

While Morgan was becoming an expert on the Idaho murders, its perpetrator, at the very least, was familiar with Morgan's work. Early one morning, while at home in Jacksonville, Morgan and his wife, Kim, were sipping coffee and enjoying the view out their large picture windows from the living room when he received a Tweet. Dateline had released the digital footprint of Kohberger's activities after the murders. Morgan appeared on a screen capture from the killer's phone. "Now that's chilling," he said. "I'd just as soon not have known that."

But that's not stopping Morgan's pursuits. "I'm going to see this damn thing through to the finish line. I'm not quitting on it." Fortunately, the end has come. On December 30, Kohberger was arrested in Monroe County, Pennsylvania, on four counts of first-degree murder and one count of felony burglary. Though prosecutors initially sought the death penalty, on July 2, 2025, Kohberger entered a guilty plea to all charges and was sentenced to four consecutive life sentences in prison without the possibility of parole, plus 10 years for burglary.

But that's of little consolation for the families and those who've followed the case. "I'm very disappointed the way things have turned out," said Morgan, who had hoped for a trial. "But hey, it is what it is. He's going into a deep, dark hole where he'll never hurt anyone again."

The Idaho murders captured the public's attention, beyond those just fascinated by true crime. "I knew that it had the tiger by the tail from the beginning," Morgan said. "It was just so chilling because, at least on the surface, it seemed so random and that plays on people's fears. On the surface, it seemed random. It just didn't make any sense."

It also hit a little too close to home for Morgan. "When I got that information about when and where it went down, all I could think of was our kids at JSU," Morgan said. (My son) Noah was in his sophomore year, and, in those kids, I saw our students because Idaho University is not dissimilar to JSU. It's isolated. It's a regional university. You've got a lot of first-generation kids who go there. I saw those kids, and it struck a chord with me because it could have been Jacksonville."

'I get antsy'

When he's not appearing on TV or teaching, Morgan is likely working on his own podcast, "Body Bags," which he's been hosting since 2021. Unlike when he's called as an expert for someone else's show, with "Body Bags" Morgan can discuss crimes that either interest him or that he believes haven't gotten the media coverage they deserve, including topics such as Jonestown, the so-called "Fatal Vision" case of Jeffrey MacDonald, or the "mass murderer nobody outside of Birmingham has heard about, Damien Laron McDaniel III.

Morgan has been in discussions to turn his podcast into a TV series. However, with all the recent changes within the NBC production hierarchy, he isn't certain about the show's future. "NBC still holds our IP, and they haven't shown us the door yet," he said. "So, we're still in the midst of all of that." Morgan said that a "bunch" of footage has already been shot of him lecturing at Jax State. "And they want to come to Jacksonville and shoot the episodes for the show on campus," he said. "So that would be a big shot in the arm for the department and the university. We're hoping that that's still going to happen, but in this world that we're in now, you just never know."

JAX STATE

Joseph Scott Morgan (right) in his Jax State studio with friend and colleague Nancy Grace

Morgan doesn't have an issue with getting jobs; if anything, he has the opposite problem. "I like to keep moving, so I need someone to make me hit the brakes," said Morgan while waiting for a flight out of the Newark Airport. "Every now and then, Kim will look at me and say, 'Okay, you got to tell 'em, no. You just need to sit here and not do anything.' And I try, but I get antsy."

No matter where or in what format Morgan appears, he always mentions or includes links to Jax State's Criminal Justice and Forensic Investigation Department. "You can't buy that kind of publicity," he said. "I do everything I can to let people know about the great things happening at Jax State."

There's been plenty to brag about as the Jax State Forensic Investigations Department has been experiencing a tremendous number of advancements over the past year, starting with a move to the Ramona Wood Building, located on Trustee Circle next to Angle Hall. The new building features a courtroom, a digital forensics lab, a trace lab, a student lounge, a fingerprint lab, a crime scene house, and a cadaver lab. "We're training up that next generation of forensic scientists that are going to pass through JSU," Morgan said. "It's an extension of what the mission has always been. I'm very proud to be associated with Jax State."

Cullman residents and visitors alike came out to the last 2nd Fridays of the year in the Warehouse District Aug. 8. Hele Bowls, Seven Daughters Scoops, Slim Chickens, Augusta's Sports Grill, Bubbly Babes Co. and more offered refreshments and food. Others, including the Cullman County Book Mobile, First Source for Women, Cullman Electric Cooperative and Peoples Bank, provided information and resources. On-site stores stayed open past closing for shoppers. Along with a car show, there was no shortage of live music, dancing and inflatables. After previous patriotic and Christmas in July themes, August's 2nd Fridays theme was "Friday Night Fever," centering around the 1970s.

CULLMAN, Ala. — As election days draw near for Alabama House Districts 11 and 12, The Tribune has updated its look at the publicly available campaign finance records of each candidate filed with the Alabama Secretary of State's Office. Information was taken directly from the Secretary of State's website, preserving the exact spelling of each name as contained in the finance reports. The only corrections made were commas added to monetary sums $1,000 and up that lacked them in the reports.

DISTRICT 11

The State House District 11 General Election will take place Tuesday, Aug. 26, 2025.

Heath Allbright won the Republican primary, and will face Democrat Alexandria Braswell.
